EDITOR'S MAIL

THE ALBERTON RANGE LIGHTS.

Sir,—I notice by The Guardian of the 20th instant that you were informed by the Marine Department that the range lights at Alberton were in their proper place on the night when the ill-fated schooner A. J. McKean went ashore. Well I am sorry to say that the Agent is mistaken, as the pilots here positively state that the range lights were not in their proper position, and the fact that the white light has since been moved shows conclusively that they are right. And I think if Mr. Lord would take the trouble to come to Alberton and investigate the matter he would tell you a different story. Alberton, Nov. 22, CORRESPONDENT.
