CAIRNS - CURRAN NUPTIALS

St. Cuthbert's Church, St. Teresa, was the scene of a joyous event on August 20th when Miss Ange Cairns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Cairns, Baldwin's Road, became the bride of Mr. Fonce Curran, Newark, New Jersey. The church was artistically decorated with white and yellow flowers and streamers by Mrs. Fitzmaurice, New York, and other close friends of the happy couple and added much charm to the event. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Thomas Hynes, S. J. The popular young bride looked very winsome in a gown of cinerea brown chiffon velvet with brown coronet hat and accessories. She carried a beautiful pearl rosary, gift of Rev. Mother Superior of St. Joseph's Convent, also a white ivory prayer book, gift from the C. W. L. St. Teresa's, of which she was a valued member. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. J. P. Pratt who was becomingly dressed in jade green crepe with brown accessories. She also carried a lovely amethyst rosary, gift of the groom. The bride's gift from the groom was a white gold bracelet with diamond setting. The groom was ably supported by his brother, Gerald. During the Nuptial Mass the choir, under the direction of Mr. Philip Mooney, sang appropriate hymns.

After the large crowd of well-wishers, who had assembled at the church, had conveyed their best wishes to the newly wedded couple the bridal party motored to the home of the bride's parents where a delectable breakfast was served. This was a happy occasion as Father Tom, a particular friend of the family and who had just returned from Dublin, Ireland, was present and by his ready wit and good humour added much merriment to the event. Telegrams and letters were received from the bride's sisters, Rev. Sr. St. Augustus and Rev. Sr. St. Ruth Marie, Montreal and from other near relatives of the happy couple. These, together with many costly gifts and substantial cheques from their families and friends, were presented during the reception.

Later in the day Mr. and Mrs. Curran left on a short tour of the Island returning to the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Curran, St. Teresa, where a grand reception awaited them. This was attended by the immediate relatives together with the uncles and aunts of the groom. A sumptuous supper was in readiness and after the toasts and speeches were concluded and everyone had partaken of a bounteous repast, dancing was indulged in. A happy time was spent and the "wedding hours" came all too soon for old and young alike.

The following day "Ange" and "Fonce" left for their new home in Newark, N. J., carrying with them the sincere good wishes of their many friends for a bright and happy future.

Prior to her marriage the bride was guest of honor at a shower given by her friends, Anna and Agnes Curran at their hospitable home in St. Teresa's. They were assisted by other girl friends of the bride and made the event a lovely surprise. Many valuable gifts of silver, linen and cheques were presented which bore testimony of the love and esteem in which "Ange" was held. After a delicious luncheon was served a jolly dance ended the party.

"Edwina"

COMIC STRIP ARTIST, CREATOR OF "CAP STUBBS AND TIPPIE"

Entertains An Enormous Newspaper Reading Populace Daily

Edwina, the petite young artist who draws "Tippie," a rollicking Sunday page, "Cap Stubbs and Tippie," a daily comic strip, now running in The Guardian is one of the few successful cartoonists of her sex.

When her identity is revealed to anyone who has studied her work, the usual comment is, "Impossible. A girl couldn't draw, convincingly, about boys and dogs."

Born in Upper Sandusky, Ohio, Edwina listened to stories about the Indians who had settled there before the town was founded. So did her playmates, mostly little boys at that time. Undoubtedly much of her present-day understanding of how the small boy's mind works is traceable to this period in her childhood.

Coming from a family of journalists, she obtained her first job as political cartoonist for a paper in Columbus, Ohio. For several years she was the only girl in the country to hold such a position.

When asked where she gleaned fresh ideas for her cartoons, Edwina replied: "When Lily Sinbad (her cherished mutt-poodle dog) fails to supply me with ideas, I resort to memory. Sometimes I take long bus rides and walk through Central Park with Lily and think of the kids back home. Somehow the ideas seem to come."

For many years Edwina drew "Sinbad" for Life magazine. Two pictured books of his doings have been published, and one book of "Alec, the Great." She also finds time to turn out illustrations for books and magazines.

When not in New York City, she lives in a cream colored, blue-shuttered Connecticut farm house. Lily Sinbad prefers life in the country but Edwina likes the tempo of a big city. Lily has to do the sacrificing!

ROTARY

Mainly because they produce vegetable oils and cocoa, and that for naval and air bases in the-hub they occupy a strategic position for nava and air bases in the event of war, the British West African colonies are of great importance to the Empire, said A. P. G. Rees of the Royal Trust Company, Charlottetown, in addressing the rotarians at their luncheon yesterday.

Mr. Rees formerly spent seven years on the Gold Coast, one of these colonies, as a government official.

The other three colonies are Sierra Leone, Gambia and Nigeria. Whilst East Africa and South Africa are well known, little is known of these western colonies, which are situated half way down the coast, just north of the Equator.

The have an area of about 500,000 square miles and an approximate population of thirty million, a though as there are many small villages in the interior it is difficult to take an exact census. Nigeria is the largest of the four, with an area of 370,000 square miles and a population of about twenty million.

Several of these colonies adjoin former German colonies, including Togoland and the Cameroons, which have been administered partly by Britain and France since the war and which Germany is now asking to have restored to her.

The West African colonies were gradually acquired by Britain not by conquest but mainly by trade penetration. In addition to the two main products mentioned, they also produce manganese ore, tin, beeswax, etc., but not in sufficient quantities to make their loss felt; but Palm oil and cocoa obtained there equal more than half of the world's supply of these commodities.

The cocoa although of poor quality is essential for blending with the cultivated type in the manufacture of chocolate. From 250,000 tons are produced annually, and they are worth from $35 to $55 a ton.

Vegetable oils, especially palm oil, are used in the manufacture of soaps, lubricants, etc., and there is also peanut oil, which is a good substitute for olive oil.

From Nigeria alone about 95 per cent of the palm oil is exported, about 20,000,000 gallons annually to Liverpool. These vegetable oils have an inestimable value in the manufacture of war munitions, and during the war the Elder Demster Steamship Company, who had held

Moore & McLeod Limited

A monopoly of the trade in handling products, lost more of their ships proportionately than any other line from the German submarines.

Strategically, those colonies are an important part of the Empire's life line, and in the event of the Mediterranean Sea being even temporarily closed by an enemy of Britain, trade with India would have to be diverted along the west African coast, which would mean an additional voyage of 6,000 to 7,000 miles.

Already one harbour, which may be used as a naval base has been completed.

The Germans claim that they want the colonies back so that they may have access to raw materials. It has been found by the League of Nations Raw Material Committee that when the Germans had these colonies they procured less than one per cent of their raw materials from them.

They claim also that they want these colonies as a place for their surplus population, but they are not suitable for white people, and at the time of the war there were more Germans in Paris alone than in all their West African colonies.

Mr. Rees believes that the real reason for demanding the colonies is that Germany wants to recover her lost prestige. She has already broken the Versailles Treaty in other respects, as she has occupied the Rhineland and rebuilt her army and navy. Now the lost colonies is the only thing for completely restoring this prestige.

Another reason is that she wants to use them for recruiting grounds for native levies, also for powerful air and naval bases.

Past District Governor Wallis Grant was in the chair and the guests were A. D. Merkel, Superintendent of The Canadian Press Halifax, and Mr. Russell of the Royal Trust Company.

The Secretary announced that the collection asked for by the Shanghai Rotary Club amounted to $35.00. He also said that he had received minutes of the Rotary Club at Tokyo.
