U. S. TEXTILE

Lewis, a mill worker, was taken to a hospital with a shotgun wound in the hip. Hospital attendants said they were told the wound was inflicted accidentally.

Like a field marshal gauging the going of a battle, Gorman busily thrust pins into a huge map of the United States to denote the points where workers had left their posts. The eastern seaboard was studded, while on the left hand corner two tiny spots recorded small walkouts in Washington and Oregon.

Gorman's pin sticking was constantly interrupted to flash orders to the men in the field. The union strategy, he explained, is to complete the walkout of non-union workers as speedily as possible; then concentrate on non-union workers. He estimated that thousands of non-union workers already had joined the strike movement.

As reports recorded the closing of plants in the great textile centers of Manchester, N. H., New Bedford, Mass., and in the Carolinas, Gorman deployed his 1,000 organizers into other centres. The "flying squadrons" sped from mill to mill, exhorting workers to quit their looms.

Picket lines, which prevented workers from entering mills, were of points were ordered still more tightly drawn. Field leaders again were cautioned to prevent disorder. At Macon, Ga., an automobile was overturned and a mill official rescued by a labor organizer who ordered strike sympathizers to release him.

Conditions were peaceful in the north, but Communist clashes were feared at some points, particularly in Fall River. Vacations were suspended for Fall River police officers, and union leaders had orders from headquarters here to drive "all" from picket lines.

Gorman scoffed at Sloan's assertion that the strike was a failure and commented: "I think Mr. Sloan is whistling to keep up his courage."

DesBarres, and a hand-drawn portrait of Colonel DesBarres drawn at an earlier period. The subject of the portraits was Lieutenant Governor in this Province from July, 1805 till October, 1812. RETIRED FROM BUSINESS

Mr. R. J. Murray, well known business man of this town, has purchased Charlie McEllians Confectionery and Lush confectionery, which has been successfully operated in town for the past fifteen or more years under the name of Mac's. Charlie, Mrs. McEllian and family intend leaving shortly for P. E. I., and their departure from this well known business and their many other interests about town will be regretted by many friends. Starting with a few chocolate bars and a "hot-dog" counter in the old Westville skating rink, Charlie Mac was able to build up a good business and we are safe in saying that he enjoyed an equal share of trade through all his years of business. He will be missed from the Roxby Orchestra and other musical organizations.—New Glasgow News.

TRANSFERRED

Mr. Earl McMin, manager of the Royal Bank at New Glasgow for the past seven years, has received word from headquarters to the effect that he has been transferred in the same capacity to Sydney, N. S., and he is to take charge on the 20th inst. Mr. McMin's successor here will be Mr. R. H. Pethick, manager now at Antigonish, formerly located at Westville and a Charlottetown banker. Mr. Pethick has been in the city for some time and he held a high place in public regard at Westville. Life is full of changes which must be accepted philosophically.—New Glasgow News.

HITLER HAILED

Hitler's close friend was given the honor of opening Nazism's big show. Hanstaengl pleaded with the foreign press to report events objectively, leaving to historians attempts to evaluate them.

"Journalists supply the individual case from which the structure of history is built," he told correspondents.

"Politicians supply the material. The historian alone may judge events that will at some future time be called history."

Hanstaengl's address, delivered in the honor court of the German museum, treasure place of German historical mementoes, was an opening gun in the seven days' barrage of words intended to batter down the last vestige of opposition to the Nazi programme.

No less than seven addresses will be delivered by Hitler himself, while lesser oratorical lights are booked for innumerable analyses, predictions and promises concerning the Nazi programme for the ensuing year.

EAST PRINCE

Teaching arithmetic without the aid of a text book has been found to be the most satisfactory method from every point of view. No teacher should attempt it, however, who is not a complete master of the subject. Pupils should be taught that real accuracy is absolutely essential. A new spirit as to the method of presenting arithmetic has grown up, and it is being sought to find his own way through arithmetic largely by his own spirit of curiosity.

Importance of Teaching

In a very fine address on teachers and teaching, Inspector Williams stressed the importance of the teaching of the child. Children are the greatest asset of every country. Every nation moves forward through its children there fore they should be our primary thought at all times. Teachers should remember their great responsibility of educating a young generation. Teaching children the difference of right from wrong rests in a great measure on the teacher. He stressed the importance of enthusiasm as the part of teachers to do their best. He urged teachers should avoid the habit of fault finding. Affiliation with social activities of the community is helpful to any teacher. To have the work well prepared each day helps to insure success. Discipline is very important and can only be obtained by determination and persistence. In closing Mr. Williams asked the teachers to remember that the boy of today is the man of tomorrow and he should be directed in the right channels so that he can carry on.

"Jacques Quartier" Known in Britain

(Montreal Gazette)

Reference found in the Marquis of Kildare's history of "The Earls of Kildare and Their Ancestors. From 1067 to 1773," attests that not only was Cartier famous as a navigator in his native St. Malo, but his renown had travelled to England where the English government was endeavoring to send him to Ireland. The eleventh Earl of Kildare, fleeing from Ireland in 1540, had been recommended to Cartier by the English Ambassador in Paris, it appears, and was well received by Cartier when he arrived in St. Malo.

Gerald, eleventh Earl of Kildare, was born on the 26th of February, 1525. He was ten years of age at the time of his brother's arrest, and then lying ill with the smallpox at Dunore in the County Kildare. He was committed to the care of his tutor, Thomas Leverous, who conveyed him in a large basket into O'Faly to his sister, Lady Mary O'Connor. There he remained until he was perfectly recovered. The misfortune of his family had excited great sympathy for the boy over the whole of Ireland. This made the Government anxious to have him in their power; and they endeavored accordingly to induce O'Brian to surrender him to them. About the 5th of March, 1540, Lady Eleanor O'Donnell suspecting that it was the intention of her husband to surrender Gerald to the English Government, resolved to send him away. She engaged a merchant vessel of St. Malo, which happened to be in Donegal Bay, to convey a small party to the coast of Brittany.

"Bartholomew Warner, an agent of the English government, sent the following account of this transaction to Sir John Wallop, the English Ambassador in France: 'After their departing from Yrlande they arrived at Murlas (Morlaix) where, as he was well received of the Captaine, which he ledde him throue the towne by the hands, wher he tarried three of four days, and staythwayes, the captaine sent word to Monsieur de Chatelaine of their arrivyn there. ... And from thens they came in the savde shippe to Seynt Malo, wher he was also well received of them in the towne and specially of Jacques Quartier, the pilot, which your Lordship spoke off at my being at Rouene.'

See Well To Drive Your Car

Are you as well equipped to see to drive your car as you are to carry you safely? It is the conviction of those competent to judge that the number of accidents would be greatly reduced if drivers were as careful of their vision as of the condition of their machinery. Thorough examination of the eyes should PRECEDE the issuing of a driver's license.

C.W.L. Regular Monthly Meeting

The Catholic Women's League held their regular monthly meeting on Tuesday evening, Sept. 4th, in the Assembly Hall of the Basilica. The President, Miss Florence Dorsey, was in the chair and opened the meeting with the League prayer. The minutes of former regular executive and special meetings were read by Mrs. McDonald, Recording Secretary, and were adopted as read. A statement of the financial standing of the sub-division was given by the Treasurer, Mrs. Casey, also the report of the Social Service Committee, of which she is Convenor.

This showed what a wonderful amount of work had been accomplished even during the holidays, one hundred and seventy-eight articles having been made ready for distribution to the needy. The business meeting followed reading of reports, and plans were proposed, discussed and decided upon, in regard to the coming season's activities. Miss Dorsey will be delegate with Mrs. Fleming alternate, to the Diocesan Convention, which will be held in Summerside on Sept. 11, 12, 13.

Rev. Dr. McMahon was heartily welcomed as newly appointed Spiritual Director of the Society, and spoke to the members on the principles of Catholic Action and the true spirit, which should be the moving power behind the work done by the League in every community. The members assure the Reverend Chaplain that they would strive to reach the high standard which he portrayed in his much appreciated address.

The meeting was then adjourned.
