MARKET REVIEW

The record of output of various Canadian minerals for the month of May has several encouraging features. It is true that asbestos, cement, coal and lead are down from last year. On the other hand, copper is up from 19,232,242 pounds to 27,481,810; nickel from 9,337,783 lbs to

DOMINION BRIDGE

While business at the "head of the river" has been active as has been expected a few months ago (owing to delays in various large projects such as Montreal Terminals getting definitely under way) a good volume of business is still on the books and more is expected in the near future. One phase of the company's operations that is viewed with a good deal of satisfaction by the management is the condition of business of the Western plants, such as Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver, the latter two among the most recent of Dominion Bridge Company's expansions. Both Winnipeg and Calgary plants are well employed, and an even more gratifying condition exists at the Vancouver plant. This has been kept running to capacity for a long time past, and had it not been considered unwise to run a double shift if this could be avoided, such a policy could easily have been undertaken. Western Canada has seen a good deal of development the last year or two in the construction of large office buildings and the structural steel companies have received orders also for bridges and other work that has made the West a very promising field. The establishment of branches at strategic points from Amherst, N. S., to Vancouver has placed Dominion Bridge in excellent position to operate efficiently both in regard to the saving of freight rates and in service to their customers. The stock is holding around 51 after the break to 44, giving a current yield of well over 7 percent at the dividend rate of $8.60 per annum.

O. and Mrs. McInerney, of Mount Pleasant avenue. She is at present in a patent in the Saint John Infirmary with a fractured left leg. She was an occupant of the automobile which struck that driven by Stuart Noble. Miss Handren was driving with Mr. Noble at the time. A report from the General Public Hospital last evening stated that Miss Handren's condition is much improved and that she will probably be discharged from the institution within a few days. St. John Telegraph Journal. Miss McInerney has relatives and friends here who will regret her painful accident.

POST-NUPTIAL SHOWER — A delightful shower was given on Saturday evening July 19th, at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Jenkins, Charlottetown, in honor of the charming bride of Mr. Hector Jenkins of Marshfield, P. E. I. In spite of the severe electric storm at that time, about twenty-five of the relatives were present and as the gifts were opened much merriment was caused by the many attempts at poetry and advice contained therein. The popularity of the bride was very evident by the beautiful gifts of toilet articles, linens, pyrex, china and money for which she gratefully thanked the donors. Dr. Jenkins, assisted by her two daughters, Mrs. Rayfield and Miss Eula at the close of an evening thoroughly enjoyed by all. Mr. and Mrs. Hector Jenkins have returned to Marshfield where they are building a new bungalow which is to be their future home, and their many friends wish them much happiness in their new sphere.

How Many Cows For A Wife

(Chicago Drover's Journal) Because all efforts on the part of the government to lower the price of wives in Anglo-Egyptian Sudan have failed, the current quotation on Shillux maidens will remain at 15 cows. This price is not absolute however, since occasionally Sudanese girls bring as many as 40 to 80 cows to their father's exchequer. Farther south, in the vicinity of Lake Albert, young men may purchase wives at the rate of only five cows, or three cows, and 20 goats. At present prices it takes a Sudanese youth about seven years of hard labor to earn the number of animals required to buy a wife. The price is about right and the system may be better than our own. If our young men had to put in seven productive years before marriage, they would be in better position to support a family, and the sum total of marital happiness might thus be enhanced.

MANITOBA HONORS HER DISCOVERERS

(Canadian Press) WINNIPEG, Man. July 20—At sixty years of age, Manitoba is turning back to the example of her first discoverers. The province, which entered Confederation in 1870, was first entered by a white man 318 years ago when Thomas Button, English explorer, entered the mouth of the Nelson River; now Manitoba is to share the benefits of a new rail-and-boat route through the north of the province and Hudson Bay. The first white man to see the Red River, on whose banks at the impressive grey-stone legislative building a Diamond Jubilee celebration is held today, was 126 years before Button. In 1738, Pierre Gaultier de Varennes, Sieur de la Verandrye, arrived at the site of the future city of Winnipeg. Thence he travelled westward with his three sons and nephew who had left Montreal with him six years before. La Verandrye and his followers trekked far over the plains which now are threaded with railway lines stretching to the Pacific, and were the true discoverers of the North-west. Credit for the finding of the great lone land goes to the Verandryes though 47 years before Henry Kelsey, a young man in the service of the Hudson's Bay Company at York Fort, at the mouth of the Nelson, had travelled some distance inland from the Bay. It was not until 1806 that the first white woman came to the west; she was a Scottish girl who shipped aboard a Hudson's Bay Company ship from the Orkney Islands, disguised as a young man. Two years later she returned to Scotland. In 1807, the second white woman to enter west-Canada, Marie Anne Lagimodiere, arrived with her husband in the canoe of a brigade which travelled by the fur-traders' route 2,000 miles from the St. Lawrence. Until the advent of the women-folk among the settlers set out from Scotland by Lord Selkirk in 1812, Marie Anne Lagimodiere was the only white woman in the west of whom there is record.

Editors Are Human

(Stirling News-Argus) When a doubtful situation arises in a town it is quite the fashion to remark that "the paper ought to say something about that." The average citizen feels quite certain he could run a newspaper better than the editor does, and if he were publisher of that sheet he'd show 'em, you bet. As a matter of fact if he has horse sense he would do just as the editor does, but the soft pedal on family rows, church squabbles, scandals not involving principles, and such matters of minor importance as will add themselves with the passing of time. The newspaper critic ought not to expect the newspaper man to advance or attack any proposition which he himself hasn't the courage to support or assal over his own signature. The editor is willing even eager to push any project in the public interest. But he is not willing to pull chestnuts out of the fire for individuals or minorities.

MR. JOHN H. MYERS Conservative Candidate for Queen's

Mr. John H. Myers is one of the most popular and powerful personalities in the agricultural life of Queens County. A successful farmer, he has taken an active part in the various organizations, and followed with keen interest public affairs in the Province and in the Dominion. Born at Hampton in 1880 he graduated from Prince of Wales College in 1899. Since then he has devoted himself to the development of "his paternal acres" at Hampton—a wide awake progressive farmer. "John", the name he is familiarly known by, is of a genial disposition, liked by everybody. He is one of the best informed, most resourceful platform speakers in politics today. His eloquence impressed both Mr. Meighen and Mr. Bennett when they heard him. One of the leading Liberals recently described him as "one of the most outstanding figures in politics in the Province today," adding that "there were no heights to which he could not rise given the opportunity." Mr. Myers has been in politics since 1912, when he was returned to represent the first district of Queens in the local legislature. He was Minister of Agriculture in the Stewart Government, and was selected in 1921, and 1926 to contest Queens at the then general elections. On the present occasion he was the unanimous choice, along with Mr. McLure, to carry the Conservative colors to victory.

SILVER FOX RANCHING

Continued from Page 4 tained for silver fox pelts have steadily increased, although the depression in the business world last autumn had a marked effect on sales at the auctions in the winter. Before foxes were raised in captivity at the end of the nineteenth century, between 2,000 and 3,000 silver fox pelts were marketed annually. For the past two years over 100,000 pelts were absorbed by the market annually. The wild pelts constituted but 2,000 of this number, the pelts of the wild foxes of the silver variety forming but two per cent. of the offerings at the auctions. The number of captured wild animals does not increase, but the silver fox pelts from the farms come forward each year in ever-increasing numbers. The trade now depends largely on the bred animals and a constant supply is assured. Furs are now worn in hot countries as well as cold, and in the heat of summer as well as in the zero days of winter. The industry, it is evident, will flourish while fashion's demand continues.

AFTER THE STORM

After the storm, the meadows smiled again And sunshine kissed each sparkling drop of rain. The flowers nodded in the cool, sweet day Like merry children in the hours of play.

And This Is Manchester

(Toronto Globe) A vote taken among the members of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce to learn their attitude on the tariff resulted in 607 ballots for free trade, 986 for safeguarding duties and 232 for protective taxes which would include food and raw materials. This took place in the former cradle and hotbed of free-trade discipleship, in Manchester. Even the Manchester Guardian admits it is a reversal for free traders in business, although reserving the qualification that it was not a full vote of the membership. It would not be more startling to learn that Manchester favored a return to the British Preference. And "as Lancashire thinks today, England thinks tomorrow."
