

TAKING ON MORE MEN.

STONEY, Dec. 4.—The Dominion Iron and Steel company are taking on more men to-day, a hundred and fifty being required at once.

RESERVE FORCE.

The healthy body has a certain amount of strength reserved in case of emergency, attack by disease or unusual physical exhaustion, without this power of resistance the person is an easy prey to every ill that comes along. By enriching the blood and creating new nerve cells, Dr. Chas. Nerve Food keeps the health at high water mark and fills the body with vigor and vitality that overcomes and defies disease.

HERBERT SPENCER ILL.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—A bulletin issued here this evening announces that the condition of Herbert Spencer, the famous writer, who has been ill for some time is causing serious anxiety.

DOMINION OF CANADA
Province of Prince Edward Island.
IN THE SUPREME COURT

Thomas B. Riley, plaintiff, attaching creditor; and David T. Botts, defendant, primary debtor

Upon reading the affidavit of Thomas B. Riley, the above named attaching creditor, I do order that all debts due or owing or accruing or becoming due to the above named David T. Botts, from any person or persons, firm or corporation in the Province of Prince Edward Island be attached to answer the debt or claim alleged to be due to the above named attaching creditor from the above named primary debtor and I further order that this order shall be sufficiently served upon any person or persons, firm or corporation within the said province who is or are indebted to or liable to pay a sum or sums of money to the said primary debtor by publishing a copy hereof in Daily Examiner newspaper and the Morning Guardian newspaper published in Charlottetown for two successive issues of such newspapers. And I further order that a copy of this order shall be served on the said primary debtor, David T. Botts within five days after the first publication hereof in either of the said newspapers in the same manner as a writ of summons out of this Honourable Court may be served.

THE MAKING OF A KING.

A correspondent of the London Times writing of King Victor Emmanuel III, the Ruler and the Man, tells how he was trained in his early days and taught to obey in order that he might be the better fitted to rule in after years. This correspondent tells that at an early age Prince Victor was placed under the tutelage of Colonel Osio, who asked for and obtained from King Humbert plenary authority over his pupil. And it is added that he rarely allowed the slightest deviation from the rigid program of studies which he had drawn up. When His Majesty was applied to for permission that his son should attend some private or public festivity he always referred the matter to Colonel Osio and the latter almost invariably refused. There is a lesson right here for parents in common life to support rather than counteract the authority of capable teachers.

The Prince's literary and scientific studies were entrusted to a competent staff of professors under the direction of Professor Morandi. Even in these studies the strictest military discipline was observed. Signor Morandi is instructed to treat the Prince exactly like any other of his pupils and to show him no exceptional indulgence whatsoever. "If anything should be required during the lesson," said Colonel Osio, "the pupil and not the teacher is to go and fetch it; if a book or some other object is dropped, the pupil, and not the teacher must pick it up." These incidents, we are told, furnish the key note of the entire education of the present King of Italy. He always rose at 6 a. m. which he still continues to do, save when he gets up at 5 or 4. Lessons began at 7 sharp, and continued with intervals for physical exercise throughout the day. Nine o'clock was his bed time.

There is much more of the story but we need not enter into it here. We think there is in what is already set down a lesson for our school-teachers and especially for parents. True, we are not training boys of royal blood in our Island homes and schools, but every boy's training ought to be such as to fit him to be a prince among men. And a very first principle of such training is absolute obedience. No one is fit to command who has not first learned to obey. The world is full of spoiled children who get what they grieve for and grew up to be useless, unrestrained, selfish men and women. The lesson of self-restraint if not inculcated in early years is never learned. Such lessons are thought necessary to a prince and are not less necessary to every child that is born into the world. The education of a boy should be the making of a man, a Canadian citizen, the development in him of all that is manly, honorable and noble.

It is true that this is no new lesson. It is in fact old as the ages. From ancient times it has been handed down. Better than the mighty or than he that taketh a city is he that ruleth himself. Sparta's wise King Agesilaus said boys should learn "that which would be most useful to them when they became men." And Tennyson has left us this: "Self-reverence, self knowledge, self-control, these three alone lead life to sovereign power." These things are more important than "all the ologies." We need a return to the old order of things in our home life and in our schools, an insistence upon implicit obedience, the emphatic "no" to the boy's plea for privileges and pleasures beyond his years, the strengthening and re-asserting of authority, and the development in our boys under tutelage, of the fibre of self-restraint, manliness, honor, the willingness to endure and to plod. These are prime requisites for success in the battle of life. They are requisites in the making of kings among men.

A parent reports having seen a boy of thirteen or fourteen years old on St. Peter's Road with a flask of whiskey, of which he was drinking. It is noted here as a warning to parents, and as information to those engaged in the enforcement of the law.

A Moncton telegram states that the demands of the locomotive engineers and firemen for increase in pay have been conceded and that they will receive fifty cents more per diem hereafter and back to July last, we presume from 1st July, the beginning of the fiscal year. Five months back pay will thus amount to about $65 each, and the increase for the year will run up to $150.00, which will no doubt prove gratifying to the recipients. Hitherto the engineers and firemen on the leading company railways in Canada had been receiving higher pay than those in like positions on the Government railways.

Hon. Mr. Prefontaine when here did not decide the important question of routes for the winter steamers. A Montreal despatch now tells that he has so far unbecomingly to a correspondent there as to say that "one boat will be left on the Summerside-Tormentine route till the ice forms, after which both the Stanley and Minto will cross to Pictou." This is very indefinite. "When the ice forms" may refer to the first ice, or the board ice, or the heavy ice of midwinter. And nothing is said of Charlottetown at all. The Examiner says "the Stanley is not ready for the winter service," but The Guardian is officially informed that she is all ready except for taking in coal, for which purpose the steamer will go to Pictou this morning. It was also learned on inquiry that no definite orders have been received from Ottawa as to the disposal of the winter steamers for the coming season.

CANADA LIFE ASSURANCE Co., TORONTO.

DEAR SIRS:—In acknowledging receipt of your cheque for $1,521.20, I desire to express my satisfaction with the outcome of my investment with you.

My policy, No. 8726, was issued on the endowment plan in 1870 for $1000, and I paid ten premiums of $48 each, or $480 altogether.

The surplus payment you now make is alone greater than the total cost of the policy by $41.20 and I have received the $1,000 in addition.

It is hardly necessary for me to say that to have all my payments returned and over $1,000 in addition, besides the insurance protection all these years, is quite satisfactory to me.

I congratulate the Canada Life on a record which might almost be considered impossible.

Yours truly,
F. A. HALL.
