ROUND TABLE REPORT IS ATTACKED

Winston Churchill Declares the Indian Conference Was Nothing But an Hysterical Landslide of Opinion.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Keen shafts of argument flew thick and fast when Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill arose in the House of Commons to attack the report of the Indian round table conference submitted by the government.

The House had already spent several hours in earnest discussion of India's problems and every bench was packed. The public galleries were crowded and in the Peers gallery sat Lord Willingdon, who goes to take over the Vice-Royalty of India, and Lord Reading, the immediate predecessor of Lord Irwin at the helm of Indian affairs.

First in the debate came Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald who urged that the work of the conference towards responsible government for India should be carried forward. "I believe most sincerely that the structure can be built," Mr. MacDonald exclaimed, and he sketched for the House two pictures, one of an India of marching soldiers and stern and merciless repression; the other, of an India bound to Britain in the bonds of mutual confidence.

Sir Samuel Hoare, former Air Minister, urged, for the Conservatives, the importance of safeguards and the necessity of a strong central government in the Indian scheme.

The most serious attacks on the conference came from Sir John Simon, the Liberal lawyer-statesman, who headed the so-called Indian Reforms Commission, and from Mr. Churchill.

"Why," Mr. Churchill asked, "had the government shelved the Simon report and invidiously excluded Sir John Simon and his colleagues from the whole proceedings of the conference. This course had been followed in an endeavor to get the Indian National Congress executives to participate but the Congress members had refused and those who had attended from India came with no authority and no power to conclude an agreement."

"The conference, in my opinion, was nothing but an hysterical landslide of opinion in which the Conservatives were the only delegates to keep their heads," said Mr. Churchill, who accused Prime Minister MacDonald himself of having shown deep foreboding in some of his utterances despite his flowery language.

Mr. Churchill did not think the problem could have been handled in a worse way than it had been at the conference and he regarded the meeting as a prelude to the worst troubles in India.

OTTAWA, Jan. 28.—The national revenue situation is more serious than was understood. Premier Bennett's estimate of a shrinkage of $100,000,000 in revenues for the present fiscal year is $30,000,000 more than had been previously estimated by Government officials. The reduction has been becoming greater in recent months. For the first nine months of the fiscal year it was between sixty and seventy million.

The falling off is in customs and excise revenue, and it is due largely to the shrinkage in trade, both external and internal. With consumption much lower than during the last fiscal year, the customs and excise taxes are producing less money for the national treasury.

Stubborn Coughs Ended by Recipe, Mixed at Home

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up a stubborn, lingering cough. It takes but a moment to prepare and costs little, but it gives real relief even for those dreaded coughs that follow severe cold epidemics.

From any drugist, get 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex, pour it into a 16 oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. This you make 16 ounces of better remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times the cost. It never spoils and tastes so good that even children like it.

Do not get this simple mixture soothed and heal the inflamed throat membranes with surprising ease, but also it is absorbed into the blood, and acts directly upon the bronchial tubes, thus aiding the whole system in throwing off the cough. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and eases chest soreness in a way that is really astonishing.

INDIGESTION

Indigestion is a word which has no particular meaning beyond conveying the information that there is an uncomfortable feeling in the abdomen, which the sufferer attributes to the stomach or to some other part of the digestive system.

Discomfort in the region of the abdomen may be due to one of many conditions. It may be caused by an ulcer of the stomach, inflammation of the gall-bladder, appendicitis, constipation, or to some one or other of the many conditions, sometimes trivial, sometimes serious, which are responsible for what is popularly known as indigestion.

There is only one way to treat indigestion properly and effectively, and that is to find out the cause and then remove it. The general tendency is for the sufferer to dose himself with medicines, or to try some kind of diet which his well-meaning, but medically ignorant friends will suggest as a cure.

Soda is often taken in large amounts, regularly or frequently, by those who think that their trouble is an "acid stomach," with the idea of neutralizing the acid in their stomachs. They ignore the fact that if digestion is to take place in the stomach, acid must be present, and, therefore, large doses of soda merely interfere with normal digestion.

A certain amount of roughage in the diet is generally desirable, but, if the intestines are irritable and are causing discomfort, the addition of roughage so often taken by the sufferer to overcome the constipation which accompanies the condition is likely to increase the irritation is a smooth, soft diet which is indicated in such cases.

These points are sufficient to make clear that the proper treatment of indigestion depends, first of all, upon finding the cause. Careless or improper treatment may result in actual harm, the condition tending to become chronic and increasingly difficult to treat successfully.

Indigestion which occurs repeatedly after the age of forty should never be neglected. The cause should always be found. This fact is emphasized because attacks of indigestion at that period of life may be the first symptom of cancer, and, if attended to without delay, there is every chance of cure.

The whole trouble may be due to bad habits of eating rather than to any internal condition. Eating too quickly, washing down food with fluid, instead of chewing it properly, making meal-time the occasion for unpleasant discussions these bad habits cause trouble.

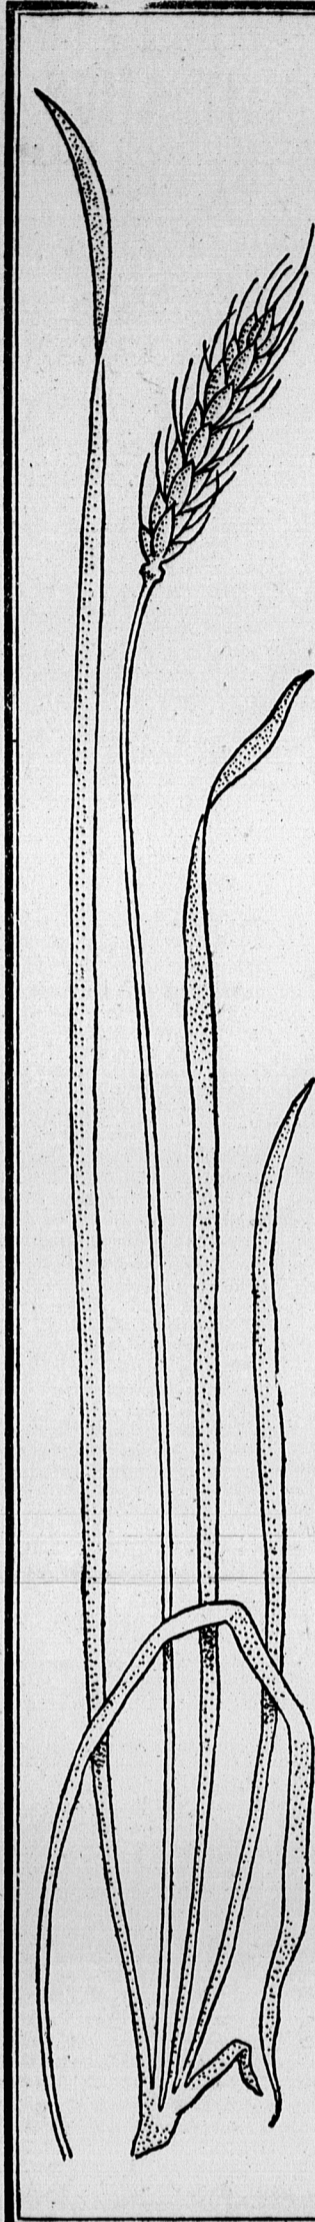

There are some conditions which require medical or surgical care, and when such treatment is advised, it must be undertaken without delay. Self-medication is a mistake; drugs should only be prescribed by a physician. Much can be done, however, to prevent digestive troubles if the individual will cultivate proper eating habits and exercise care in the selection of foods.

GASPEREAUX WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The regular monthly meeting of the Gasperaux Women's Institute was held on January 19th, at the home of Mrs. Harry Graham. The meeting opened by singing "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia." Roll was called and answered by twenty-one members. Nine visitors were also present. The minutes of previous meeting were read and approved.

The sick committee reported that four visits had been made to the sick the previous month, and a new committee was appointed to serve for the following month. Three members volunteered to scrub the school the following week. It was decided to have a Valentine program for the next meeting. A letter from Miss Julia Steele, thanking the Institute for the Birthday Party and gifts given her, was read by the Secretary. Also a letter from Mrs. Elsie Llewellyn thanking the members of the Institute for their assistance to her in her recent illness. It was decided to have next roll call answered by riddles and jokes. Mrs. George A. Hicken kindly invited the Institute to her home for the next meeting, which is to be held on February 11th. There being no further business the meeting was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem. A dainty lunch was then served by the hostesses. The remainder of the evening passed pleasantly in conversation, step-dancing and many "Old Time Songs" were sung. (accompanying by the music of the organ) which was immensely enjoyed by all. The meeting broke up to the

CONDITIONS IN PERU

The financial depression in Peru is extremely serious, writes Harris W. Brighton, Acting Canadian Trade Commissioner at Lima, in the forthcoming issue of the Commercial Intelligence Journal. Sugar and cotton are the country's main products, and from these the depression has chief results; fifty per cent of the arable land under cultivation is accounted for by these two commodities. The best prices quoted for sugar on the world's market account for scarcely half the cost of production, while the prices obtaining for cotton are but little better, even with a good crop. As the producers cannot continue to carry on at a loss much longer, a grave crisis is threatened and other commodities, which cannot nearly replace them, will have to be substituted for sugar and cotton by the growers. Should this eventuate, the export trade would be enormously reduced and likewise Peru's purchasing power. Added to these difficulties there has been the failure of the Bank of Peru and London which has forced the Gov-

NORTH OF ENGLAND SEED MARKET

About twenty-five large houses in the United Kingdom import seed into that country—the main ones being in London, Liverpool and Manchester, writes Gerald A. Newman, Assistant Canadian Trade Commissioner at Liverpool, in the forthcoming issue of the Commercial Intelligence Journal. Owing mainly to the financial depression the tendency of farmers has been to sow their land for grazing rather than to use it for arable land. Thus in England and Wales the area for clover, sainfoin and other grasses decreased from 1,567,943 acres in 1928 to 1,523,753 acres in 1929. There is a marked disparity for alfalfa which is confined to the Eastern Counties. The crop of red clover this year has been practically a failure due to excessive rainfall, but prices have not materially advanced owing to carry-overs from 1928 and 1929. Continental red clover (mainly French and Polish) has been imported in fair quantities and prices are showing a firmer tendency. The general impression is that Canadian alfalfa will have only a fair demand owing to the prices quoted for Polish alfalfa, but, as there is a tendency to purchase this commodity on an analysis basis, a medium-quality alfalfa will be most favourably received. The market for Grimm alfalfa is still in the experimental stage.

SOVIET FISHERMEN UNDERSOLD

TOKIO, Jan. 29. (By The Canadian Press) Although Canadian and United States fisheries interests are complaining of the competition from Soviet fishermen, Japan has a grievance too, and it is against the Soviet fishermen, who are underselling the products of Japan in world markets. The controversy is being waged chiefly over the shipment of crabs. The United States is the chief market for Japanese and Russian crab and has been so for many years. Soviet exporters are selling crab in the United States at prices which Japanese cannot hope to meet on a profitable basis.

An idea of the magnitude of the Japanese canned crab business may be had from the fact that the value of the pack in one district alone was $8,000,000 last year, but that indicates a substantial decline as compared with other recent years, and it is largely due to the increasing Russian

Soviet crab, which first reached the United States in large volume last summer, has been marketed under brand names likely to be confused with those of the Japanese, according to the complaining packers here.

Soviet Russia which operated twenty floating crab canneries along the western coast of Kamahatka last year, intends to have floating United States fisheries interests are complaining of the competition from Soviet's over-crowding on the fishery and Soviet Russia, Japan having domain of the North Pacific has caused considerable alarm in Japan.
