The New Ideas in Fall Millinery

Miss MacLellan and Miss Foster, two of our buyers, have been going through the warehouses of the larger foreign producers of millinery—while they were away on an extended buying trip.

The lovely things that they bought are now here on exhibition:—

- Trimmed Hats.
- Untrimmed Hats
- Sport Hats
- Juvenile Hats
- Trimming Materials

Most of the above are from producers in New York—and they are being reinforced by new American arrivals almost every day.

Lovely Dresses

You are especially invited to examine this splendid range of the smart new dresses for ladies and misses.

You know from your reading of the fashion magazines that this is a "Coat and Dress season." This store has the supply of both.

SCHOOLGIRLS HOMESPUN DRESS $8.75

This smart little dress in Copen, Sand and Mauve, is shown with Peter Pan collar, side pocket, patent leather belt, all finished with black silk binding. $8.75

TWO EFFECTIVE MODELS AT $14.75

These two smart dresses are of a fine all wool English serge, in navy and black. One is finished in effective colored embroidery, the other in rich and quiet black. Make it a point to see these. $14.75

SMART SERGE DRESS AT $11.95

This serge dress in navy, black or brown, is a wonder. The cloth is notably good. These dresses are finished at base of skirt, front and back as well as at neck with embroidered design in silk and gold. $11.95

THE WONDER DRESS AT $24.00

A fine quality tricot in navy makes a lovely dress. A feature of this model is the handsome embroidery design practically all over. This dress has side panels, velvet vest, suede and metal belt. Compare this with usual $35 lines $24.00

OYSTER SEASON

The oyster season opened yesterday, a week earlier than formerly. Contrasted with a few years ago the opening this year was a quiet one. Many will remember the opening day when steamers were held in readiness at the wharves to take on board the first day's oyster harvest and rush it to Montreal, Quebec and cities farther west. The season opened at midnight and by noon hundreds of barrels were on the wharves or on board the steamers. There was of course a suspicion that if the fishermen did not get the oysters before the clock struck the midnight hour they at least knew where they could put their hands on them. In any case hundreds of barrels found their way to the markets on the day the season opened.

There is no such rush today. Richmond Bay now produces no harvest. The famous Malpeques and Curtain Island cup oysters are no more, at least for the present although the hope is expressed by fishermen that they are "coming back." Young oysters, we understand, are becoming more and more numerous and it is believed that in the course of a few years the Malpeques and the Curtain Island cups will once more supply a market that has an unlimited appetite for them.

The shipment of oysters from this province this year will be confined to East River points. From Scotchfort and Mount Stewart several car loads were shipped last year and it is expected that this year's harvest will be bigger. North and West Rivers produce only a limited quantity which will not be sufficient to supply the local demand. West of Richmond Bay, in several small rivers a thin shelled oyster is to be found in limited quantities and small shipments will no doubt be made from these but not a barrel will be shipped from any of the streams flowing into Richmond Bay.

PROVINCIAL EXHIBITION

The Provincial Exhibition opens today in Charlottetown although the formal opening does not take place until tomorrow. Every possible preparation has been made to ensure the success of the exhibition and to provide for the entertainment as well as for the enlightenment of those in attendance.

The horse races, usually the biggest attraction at all exhibitions, promise to be on a large scale, the fastest horses in Maine and the Maritime Provinces having entered and all of them already on hand. The cattle entries are the largest in the history of Prince Edward Island exhibitions, a fact which speaks volumes for the growing interest in our greatest industry, dairying. Other live stock entries are also above the average in numbers and, judging by the animals already on the grounds, the matter of quality has not been neglected. Other exhibits, vegetables, fruit, machinery of all kinds, domestic science, handicrafts and art all up to the usual standard both in quantity and quality. From the point of view of an exhibition of what the province can produce the prospects are that this year's show will be one of the best if not the best, yet held.

That the attendance will be large is also pretty well assured. Harvesting is all over and the crops are far above the average; the farmers, satisfied with their season's work consider they have well earned a holiday and the great majority of them will take it both for the sake of the holiday and of seeing what other farmers have been doing. Many will be here from the neighboring provinces and altogether we look for a large attendance and an enjoyable four days of study and recreation.

To the visitors from far and near our citizens will extend a hearty welcome and we feel sure will do everything possible to make the short sojourn among us a pleasant one. We are justly proud of our city and of its people; proud of our streets, of our buildings of our hospitality and we may be pardoned for being sufficiently vain to hear with pleasure complimentary comments from our visitors. Let us see to it that in our entertainment of strangers we shall deserve the compliments.

Amazing Facts Fully Explain Tanlac Success

HOW 30,000,000 BOTTLES WERE SOLD IN LESS THAN EIGHT YEARS. BIG MONTREAL DRUGGISTS ENTHUSIASM—THOUSANDS OF USERS PUBLICLY ENDORSE IT.

The tremendous demand for Tanlac continues unabated, ever increasing. Millions have rallied to its standard unsolicited and thousands have given public endorsement. That the large druggists everywhere are enthusiastic over this sensation of the trade is evidenced by the letters received with orders.

W. A. Hover & Co., wholesale druggists of Denver, Colo., writing under date of July 17, states: "We are submitting today our order for the fourth carload of your goods since April 1. Taking into consideration local conditions this demand is not only exceptional but alone in the record sales for proprietary articles in this section."

The National Drug and Chemical Co., of Canada, Ltd., Montreal, states: "Tanlac continues to lead the parade as our sales of proprietary articles go. We sold 239,640 bottles within the year."

Since the first of the year it has been necessary to establish two new branch offices, one in New York and one in Los Angeles, and the large modern laboratories at Dayton, O., Walkerville, Canada, and Mexico City are working overtime but are still unable to keep up with the deluge of orders. Tanlac has been on the market less than eight years but more than 30,000,000 bottles have been sold to date.

And the foreign field has been entered with the most phenomenal success. Mexico now knows Tanlac as well as the people of the United States and Canada, while Cuba has received the celebrated medicine with enthusiasm.

The reason for this amazing demand is found in one word: merit. No proprietary article could long survive the acid test of time and public trial if it did not possess real value and produce actual and positive results. It cannot depend merely on whirlwind advertising and "free call" appeal. Back of Tanlac's unprecedented record in the drug trade is Tanlac's success in producing results, and when this fact is thoroughly impressed there cannot possibly be any mystery in Tanlac's achievement in such a short time—the achievement of gaining the top of the heap and holding undisputed leadership over all preparations of its type ever produced.

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

Notes By The Way

The question has been often asked and much discussed. Why did the Allies in November 1918, not refuse the armistice proposed by Germany and press on to Berlin? Will Irwin, a well known American author and correspondent who was in Paris and in a position to know what occurred at the meeting of the Allied generals, has thrown some light on the situation. He says that President Wilson did not force the Allies to agree to an armistice. He simply said that Marshal Foch was conducting the war and should decide. This is probably true.

Foch summoned General Bliss, American chief of staff, Sir Douglas Haig and General Petain and Castelnau and asked for their opinion. Bliss was in favor of pressing on to Berlin, it is suggested because he was unwilling that America, being the last to enter the war, should be the first to quit. Haig was in favor of accepting the armistice, since Germany was ready to do whatever was demanded of her and was acknowledging a defeat unprecedented in warfare. Military affairs were always uncertain and nothing could be gained by pressing on to Berlin. Defeated armies might unexpectedly rally in defence of their home land against invasion.

General Petain took the same ground as General Bliss but less positively. General Castelnau, who according to Irwin was, next to Foch the brains of the French army, agreed with Haig. He also pointed out that the rainy season was at hand and would make movements difficult if not impossible as it had during the past four years. Marshal Foch said he was impressed with Castelnau's arguments although Irwin suggests that he may have had his mind made up for him by the French government. He also expressed his belief that the lives of 60,000 men and the probable wounding of 200,000 or more would be saved by accepting the armistice, which he favored.

It will be seen from this statement that the weight of military opinion in the Allied camp was decidedly in favor of accepting the armistice, even although the chances of success in renewing and carrying on the offensive were good. It was Foch, Haig and Castelnau against Bliss and Petain in the military conference, while behind it were the Allied

Wilson would have been in a position to dictate the terms of peace, a state of things that they were unwilling to permit. Whatever weight we may give to this intimation, it will be readily seen that had the Allied forces gone on victoriously to Berlin with their numbers, so largely made up of fresh American troops, the prestige of the President would have been enhanced, and that of the Allied European armies have been somewhat relegated to the background, notwithstanding the fact that they had borne the brunt of the German onset for four years and had swept the German fleets from the seas.

This fact remains that it was the decision of the military chiefs in conference which brought about the armistice and which primarily ended the war on the basis of a German capitulation. Much that has followed the ultimate peace treaty—the refusal of Washington to endorse or enter the League of Nations and the delay and ultimate refusal of Germany to pay the reparations to which she stands committed—have led many to think the Allied armistice should have gone on to Berlin before making peace. This opinion is chiefly shared by those who are wise after the event and is of doubtful value at the present time.
