"THE BROWNIES IN FAIRYLAND."—These quaint, mystic characters have become household favorites throughout the world—translations of their wondrous doings having charmed readers of German, French, Italian and other languages—and it is hardly possible to over-estimate the kindly feelings that everywhere exist for these happy creations of Palmer Cox. Millions of little ones wait eagerly for each new exploit of the Brownie band and their intense interest in these funny adventures is liberally shared by the grown people. In the construction of this production the author has naturally introduced all the well-known favorites, but their experiences, bright sayings and actions are entirely new, most happily presenting the peculiar individualities of each, and the "Brownies in Fairyland" will add new lustre to the literary fame of their originator. The introduction of the Fairy Queen and Band is another of Mr. Cox's clever ideas, and he has given these little elves most charming lines and songs. The bright, catchy music was especially composed by Mr. Malcolm Douglas, every number being melodious; and the effect of the choruses, rendered by one hundred or more children's voices, is beautiful beyond description. Careful attention has been given to the effective costuming of the large cast of characters. The tremendous business that has characterized the entertainment from the start, and, more especially, the invariable increase of patronage on each succeeding repetition of the entertainment, shows that the united efforts of the author, composer, costumer and manager to make "The Brownies in Fairyland" a noteworthy production, have not been in vain. Experience in the past warrants the suggestion that seats for the coming engagement in this city be secured at the earliest opportunity.

OBITUARY.—On Tuesday, the 24th inst., a funeral procession moved slowly and sadly from the home of James Williams, Grahams Road, to the Clifton cemetery where a. that was earthly of a beloved son and brother was laid to rest in the bosom of our mother earth to await the great resurrection morn. This is the third time during the short period of three years that death has entered this afflicted home. Each time a chair has been left vacant, a loving voice forever stilled, a cherished brother and promising son removed. In October of 1897, David A. aged 24 years, in March of 1899 John W. aged 35 years, now it is Stirling A. who in the vigorous manhood of the early age of 25 years, have all three been borne down by the invincible power of that fell destroyer, consumption, a power against which even he, with all his sturdy heroism and aided by the best medical skill procurable was unable to prevail. With Christian fortitude and resignation he bore the cross allotted to him laying it aside at the last in the firm hope of receiving in exchange, at the hands of a forgiving Saviour, the Crown of life that fadeeth not away. In the loss of one who was fondly looked upon as the stay and support of the home we feel that God can only enter into the experience of the sorrowing father and mother. We long to speak a word of comfort, but feel that he who in love has made the wound alone can bind it up. He was always cheerful kindly and gentle, and in his home his filial affection was such that he never spoke a rude word nor received a harsh reproof. To know him was to love him. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. A. Sterling whom he was named after, whose words of loving sympathy have done much to cheer and comfort the bereaved in the hour of trial. To the aged father and broken hearted mother, to the loving sisters and brothers in other lands the sincerest sympathy of a large circle of friends is extended.
Why should we weep for those who die,
They leave this wretched mortal shore
But brighter suns and bluer skies
Shall smile on them for evermore.
The soul, the eternal soul must reign
In words devoid of pain and strife;
But why should mortal man complain
Of death which leads to happier life.
