BOOTH TABLET DISAPPEARS

(Canadian Press)

NOTTINGHAM, England, May 16—A mystery concerning the sudden removal and equally sudden reappearance of a commemorative tablet on the house in which was born General William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, is stirring all Nottingham.

Several weeks ago, two men reared a ladder against the wall and removed the stone tablet on which was an inscription in black letters stating that here the founder of one of the great modern religious movements had first seen light.

The tenants of the house thought the men had taken the tablet away to be cleaned by order of the town council, as was periodically done, but the town clerk disclaimed all knowledge of the matter. The municipal council finally decided that the tablet had been stolen.

Then, the tablet mysteriously reappeared. Like its predecessor, it was of stone, but the black letters of the inscription had been replaced with letters of shining gold.

An Elderly Lady Cured After Years Of Suffering

The following unsolicited letter is but a sample of a great many more: Cardigan, P. E. I. May 9th, 1929

Dear Sir—Please accept this tribute for the splendid results obtained through use of the Farador in the case of my mother-in-law, Mrs. Roderrick McDonald, of this place. She was terribly afflicted with rheumatism—almost bed-ridden for nearly five years. She began using the Farador about a year ago and is now perfectly cured. No one who knew her condition ever expected to see her cured as she has passed her 70th year. I cannot speak too highly of the Farador. It is certainly a great boon for the afflicted.

Yours sincerely,

MRS. D. J. MACDONALD
The foregoing letter is addressed to W. E. Enman, Farador Representative, 268 Sydney St., Charlottetown. Mr. J. S. Perry is representative for Summerside. Ask for literature.

MR. AUGUSTINE MACDONALD
When the dawn of April 13th broke over the peaceful village of Allisary death winged its way to the home of Augustine MacDonald and summoned back to his eternal home the beloved father.

The deceased had been ill for only a short time and bore his suffering with the fortitude and resignation of a true Scotsman. And when the call came he laid down the burden of life as cheerfully as he had taken up the cross of life some years before, with the promise of a bright young manhood before him, which he fulfilled in every way.

He leaves to mourn besides a sorrowing wife, three daughters and four sons: Mrs. Allan Morrison, Savage Harbor; Mrs. Wallace MacIntyre, French Village; Mrs. Albert MacInnis, Somerville, Mass.; Jas. B., Boston, Mass.; Alphonus, Roanoke, Virginia; Fred, Mt. Stewart; and Charles on the old homestead, all of whom mourn the loss of a loving husband and father.

His Pastor, Rev. A. P. MacLellan, attended him in his last illness and administered the last rites of the Roman Catholic Church of which he had always been a faithful member. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. A. P. MacLellan, assisted by Rev. I. R. A. MacDonald, Rev. J. C. MacDonald and Rev. Angus MacIntyre, Rev. J. B. MacIntyre assisted the choir.

The pallbearers were six of his Grandsons, Charles Morrison, James Morrison, Cyril Morrison, John Morrison, Gus MacDonald and Walter MacDonald.

The remains were laid to rest in the peaceful cemetery at St. Andrew's awaiting the call of the trumpet arousing the faithful "Come ye, blessed of the Father, possess the Kingdom prepared for you."

prayer of every mother to save her boy. The true mother has this aim. She always taught him the principles of life and religion and started his feet in the pathway that led to great leadership and made his name immortal. Samuel's mother, a praying woman, got her son by the way of the Mercy-seat. The speaker said children should be children of prayer in all stages of life. Some examples from common history, Abraham Lincoln said, "All I am, I owe to my mother". He was a great man with a big program and accomplished a great work, yet he was ready to pin the medal of victory and success on the breast of his mother. We listen again as Ian MacLaren speaks. I would be bankrupt of I attempt to pay my mother. Mr. Lindsay made a stronger appeal to the children and young people, not to place roses and wreaths on their mother's casket, but to place roses of kind words and noble deeds on her pathway and wreaths of affection on the brow that did sweat death drops for them.

Mother is the Queen of the home. It is her kingdom over which she rules. It is the throne from which she rocks the cradle that rules the world. The queenly mother will guard with jealous care, against the inroads of evil influences, the kingdom of home over which she rules. She has the right to forbid conversation and actions that would in any way endanger the lives and character of her children. Some one has said. The home is mother's pulpit from which by silent and christian influence she preaches sermons that live. It was here the children learned first to breathe their prayer "This night I lay me down to see". Here also was given their first glimpse of God when taught, "Jesus loves me this I know". The home is the arena where she fights the battle of life for the children for which she suffered, going down to the brink of death to bring them into life. Here she plans, works and prays for them. Its the garden also in which she plants the seed and cultivates the flowers that grow and bloom forever. The speaker gave examples of Queenly Mothers from Scripture. Moses' Mother, who by her love and ingenuity saved her own boy, it should be...

The poet has expressed the yearnings of the mother's heart in the following words: Do you know that you are soul of my soul such a part You seem to be fibre and core of my heart None other can please me as you son can do None other can praise or blame me as you Remember the world will be quick with its blame If shadow or stain ever darken your name Then let this be thy task, if task it shall be To force this proud world to do homage to me. I will then say at last when its verdict you've won She reaped what she sowed. This mar is her son.

The special music at Cross Roads Mrs. Howe of Charlottetown, a solo "The half has never been told". Due "Mother's prayers have followed me". Mrs. C. J. Wood and Mrs. Howe.
