Conservative Candidates Score at Eldon

Promises Embargo And Then Recants

Mr. R. H. Jenkins Gets Badly Entangled In His Own Statements At Eldon. Enthusiastic Reception To Conservative Candidates Who Score Repeatedly Over their Opponents.

Like Banquo's ghost the failure of the King Government to protect the interests of Canadian dairymen in the New Zealand trade treaty stalked the Liberal candidates in the second joint meeting of the election campaign last night at Eldon and turned a debate already sufficiently disappointing to Liberal adherents into something like a verbal Waterloo. Into this embarrassing subject Mr. R. H. Jenkins stumbled willy-nilly while dealing with countervailing duties and was unable to extricate himself. His colleague, the new Minister of Fisheries, shared in his discomfort when he was tempted into challenging the accuracy of certain statements of Mr. W. C. S. McLure on Hon. R. B. Bennett's amendment to soldiers' pensions legislation and was answered by the Conservative candidate from Charlottetown in a manner that left no doubt as to merits of the controversy. On other subjects at issue Messrs. Myers and McLure scored repeatedly, and in the opening meeting at Wood Islands Thursday night they were in brilliant form, were heard with the closest attention and received the lion's share of the applause.

At last night's meeting, however, Mr. Jenkins' guardian angel seemed completely to have deserted him. In his endeavor to answer the Conservative argument that the countervailing duties under the Dunning budget was necessarily imposed at Washington, Mr. Jenkins asked: "Do they forget that we can put an embargo at any time on any goods coming in that affect adversely our own production? We have the remedy in our own hands."

Voice from the audience: "Then what stopped you from putting it on?"
Mr. Jenkins: I beg your pardon?
Voice: What stopped you from putting that embargo on against New Zealand butter? (Loud applause).
Mr. Jenkins: That is all right; I

CONSERVATIVE SENTIMENT AT PEAKE'S STN.

Rousing Reception For Kings County Candidates Last Night.

That the boasted surpluses of the King Government were possible only through the bonds issued for the support of the Canadian National Railways, that hundreds of articles put on the British preference list have no connection with British trade, that vast amounts have been spent on bringing immigrants into Canada while native sons and daughters have drifted into United States were salient points brought out by Hon. J. A. MacDonald in attacking the policy, course of action, and methods of the late Liberal administration, last night at an enthusiastic meeting at Peake's Station, the fundamental tone of which was audibly Conservative.

His opponent Hon. Dr. Thos. V. Grant failed sadly in attempting to refute the arguments set forward. Mr. H. F. McPhee, Mr. Wade Hughes, Mr. Harvey McEwen, Hon. J. P. McIntyre and Mr. H. H. Cox also addressed the assembly. Mr. Oliver Jay capably and fairly presided.

say that this treaty has not been entirely satisfactory either to them or to us.

Voice: But you said you could put the embargo on any goods right away. Why don't you do it?

Mr. Jenkins: You can't abrogate trade arrangements in a hurry. You have got to do what is fair and square.

Mr. Jenkins' time being up, he very promptly sat down. Mr. McLure, in his closing reply, challenged the Liberal candidate to explain what he meant by promising that an embargo would go into effect on any commodities at practically a moment's notice. Amid increased applause he showed conclusively that Mr. Jenkins' statement was misleading.

Mr. Thomas W. Morrison presided at last night's meeting, which was very largely attended and at which the best of order prevailed.

Mr. McLure's Speech

Coming before the people as one of the Conservative representatives for Queen's County in the forthcoming election, Mr. W. C. S. McLure, who delivered the opening speech at the second joint meeting of the campaign at Eldon hall last night, received an enthusiastic welcome.

"We, the Conservative candidates, must take an attitude of criticism towards the record of the past Government. It is for the Liberal candidates to justify that record if they can. The people will then judge as between the two." The election issue centered on the Government's tariff policy.

"Under the maladministration of the King Government, we have been made to dance to the tune of America first instead of marching to the tune of Canada first," Mr. McLure declared amid applause.

The egg and poultry business of Canada should have grown until it reached a development of $250,000,000. Instead this important industry has been discriminated against in the tariff relations between the two countries. The new countervailing tariff "a new somersault of the policy of the King Government", will not remedy the situation. Winter egg production in Canada is two months behind the American season. United States dumps in its surplus products as they did last year to the extent of 1,500,000 dozen eggs in two months. By the countervailing duties in the Dunning budget our tariff will be made at Washington with the result that we will have a greater amount of American eggs dumped into Canada with consequent further lowering of prices.

Mr. McLure dealt trenchantly with the New Zealand butter situation and the consequent lowering of milk

King And Queen At Sandringham

This photograph of the King and Queen of England reveals them in the simple roles of a typical English country gentleman and his wife. The camera caught them as they strolled in the grounds of their personal country estate at Sandringham during the visit of the Australian cricket team, whose members they received. Note that his royal trimmed "th fur in the fashion she so much favors. Her mauve styles, which may explain why his tinted toque and parasol have come to be inseparably linked with her.

and butter prices as a result of this unfair competition in the home market.

"Last night we were told that the exportation per capita in Canada was $64.00 but the same speaker neglected to tell his hearers the imports alone from the United States were $88 per capita, to say nothing of the imports from other countries. The fact is that while we export our raw materials at a low price we must import them and pay a high price to the country that manufactures them into finished products."

The Conservative attitude towards immigration as outlined at the opening campaign meeting was reviewed. "What we want is to hold our own young people and thus build up a better class of people than other countries."

The terms of the Old Age Pensions Act as introduced by the King Government were explained, as well as the unfair discrimination which this legislation places on the taxpayers of Prince Edward Island.

According to the Patriot newspaper, the estimated cost of Old Age Pensions to this Province would be over $3,000,000 a year. Under the Conservative policy the Federal government would assume this responsibility. In other words this Province will be benefited financially on Old Age Pensions alone, to the extent of $300,000 if the Hon. R. B. Bennett is returned to power.

In the dying moments of the last session the King Government brought in amended Soldiers' Pensions legislation which they could have introduced at any time during the past nine months. Mr. McLure instanced the amendment moved by Hon. R. B. Bennett for remedial legislation along this line in 1927 which the King Government and its supporters voted down.

More than $1,500,000 worth of radio apparatus was sent from the United States to Argentina last year.

Flood Conditions In Sudbury District Bring Traffic To A Standstill.

(Canadian Press)

TORONTO, June 27.—Floods within an area of twenty miles in the district of Sudbury and Capreol took a death toll of eleven lives in three train wrecks on the Canadian National Railways last night, according to an official statement issued at noon today. Four children were drowned when the colonist and day coaches of train No. 4 bound from Winnipeg to Toronto were partly submerged in the Vermillion River when seven of the train's nine cars were derailed.

The fireman of freight train No. 401 from North Bay was fatally injured when the train ran into a washout 16 miles east of Capreol and the bodies of six trespassers presumably riding on the freight train were found near the scene of this accident. The engine tender and baggage car of Train No. 3, Toronto to Winnipeg, were also derailed when that train ran into a washout just south of Sudbury Junction, but no passengers or employees were injured.

SUDEBURY, Ont., June 27.—Seven transcontinental passenger trains on both the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways are stalled east, west, north and south of Sudbury today, owing to unprecedented flood conditions causing washouts and landslides at so many points that every train had to be brought to a standstill. Eastbound passenger trains are held two miles west of Sudbury where they were brought to a halt at midnight last night while the transcontinental trains from the east and the south are being held on the outside edge of the flood area until repairs can be made. Railway officials state that it will take twelve hours to effect even the most temporary repairs to the tracks while thousands of dollars damage has been done.

NORTH BAY, Ont., June 27.—The death list in the wreck of freight train No. 401 on the C. N. R. near Crenar and west of Capreol, this morning as the result of the track washing out was raised to nine when the bodies of two more trespassers were found this evening. Albert E. McLeod, fireman Capreol was killed outright while engineer J. McDonald, Capreol, was removed to his home in a precarious condition, only four children are so far as known to be dead in the wreck of Toronto bound C. N. R. No. 4 west of Capreol last night. It is expected that the passengers of this train will be removed to Toronto tonight. The engineer of westbound C. N. R. No. 3 which has been raised to the track and the line cleared to allow traffic between Toronto and Capreol. Two auxiliaries are now at work at the scene of the washouts and it is expected that the line west of Capreol will be restored by tomorrow noon. The situation was made even worse this evening when another deluging rain broke over the Capreol-Sudbury district near Crenar where the freight train went down. The track was carried out for a distance of a hundred feet to leave a gap twenty feet deep.
