Supt. Campbell's Report
 cate the approach of a storm of class war and bitter sectional strife are gathering on the horizon, and when our very civilization is threatened because we cannot see things from the other fellow's point of view and are lacking in the power to work with our fellows in hearty co-operation for the common good. In the public school at classes and creeds mingle. They work together, they play together, they live together, they come to know one another and to respect one another. There the rich man's son sits side by side with the poor man's son and learns to recognize a chum under the patched clothes, while the poor man's son realizes that his neighbor is not a snob but a genuine good hearted boy like himself. There those of different creeds and races mutually learn that those of the other party are neither fools or knaves. There they learn to give and take, to play fair, to respect each other's rights, to perform their joint duties in their little community and to appreciate the value of the square deal. It is the spirit of comradeship there engendered that, carried out into the wider adult life of the country, will save Canada in the dangerous time that is coming.

But you will ask what did the conference accomplish? What are some of the practical results of the high idealism that pervaded the great conference? It may be true that many of the reforms so eloquently advocated at the conference remain in the nebulous region of pious aspirations and I have no doubt that there is some disappointment in some quarters at the apparent smallness of practical results. But it is well to remember the purposes for which the conference was called. It was realized from the first that the conference had no legislative or coercive authority and in the very nature of the case could only advance certain views and advocate certain reforms, and this it did with rare eloquence and power. Results will come in time. The conference itself was a great achievement. There men and women from every province, of different races and creeds, joined with the greatest possible harmony in the discussion of educational problems. The conference elected a National Council to perpetuate its work and carry out its plans. It provided for the establishment of a much needed bureau of education and above all it has given what is called character education an impetus and inspiration that are sure to have a powerful influence on Canadian life. The conference has accomplished its immediate purpose. It has done a good work.

LETTER OF SYMPATHY
 Dear Brother Robertson—We, the members of "Orman" Loyal Orange Lodge, desire to give expression to our heart-felt sympathy for you in your great loss—the death of your father.
 The removal from our midst of one of his integrity in business relations, of his devotion to duty, of his goodness of heart is a distinct loss to the community; and his memory will long be cherished because of the many excellent qualities that endeared him to his fellow-citizens.
 We realize, however, that it is to the members of his family that this loss comes with painful reality. In your sorrow, be assured that you are prayerfully remembered by the brethren. May the Great Master comfort you and continue to guide you throughout your earthly life.
 Signed on behalf of the Lodge,
WALTER ROBERTSON, W. M.
WALLACE R. MACWALKER.

On the motion of Mr. Justice Fitzgerald seconded by Professor H. H. Shaw a hearty vote of thanks was accorded Superintendent Campbell for his able and illuminating address.

INCREASED PAY IN THE BRITISH ARMY
 LONDON, Nov. 6.—By a royal warrant issued recently, increased rates of pay have been granted to all ranks of the British Army, from generals to bugle boys. These new rates of pay have been issued in consequence of the present high cost of living and the great changes which have taken place in the army during the war.
 In order fully to realize these changes in the British Army, one has only to remember that prior to the war, an officer could not live in the army unless he had private means, while "Starvation" was the best recruiting sergeant the army ever had. So far as officers were concerned, the army offered no attractions to the living, and did not possess enough private means to keep up the required social position.
 The necessity for obtaining candidates for commissions from men who had had a university training was fully realized by the army authorities, and efforts were made before the war to obtain university men, by granting commissions to those attending certain classes at a university. University candidates were allowed to enter the army without going through Sandhurst or Woolwich and were compensated for any loss of seniority owing to the course at the university being longer than that at the Royal Military Academies.
 This, however, did not overcome the financial objections to a military career, but this difficulty has now been met by the increased pay. These new rates of pay now compare very favorably with those granted to civil servants in other government departments, and there is no reason why an officer should not be able to live on his pay in an ordinary infantry regiment, provided he keeps his mess bill within limits and does not entertain on a lavish scale.
 The new rates of pay, with the addition of allowances give a second lieutenant £220 a year, and, if he is married, £234; a captain will get £517; if single, and £622, if married, while a married general may get the princely salary of £4342.
 So far as the soldier is concerned, the new pay and pension are equally liberal. A private is paid 2s. 9d. a day, on enlistment, and after two years' service he gets 3s. 6d. a day. This compares well with the 1s. a day which the old "Tommy" used to be paid. The pay of a sergeant has been raised to 7s. 6d., and that of a warrant officer, class 1, to 14s. a day. In addition a man is a tradesman he can qualify for extra pay, according to his trade, and according to his skill. A soldier also receives free food, clothing, and quarters besides allowances for his wife and dependents.

Permanent War Memorials
 Provision is now being made by the Imperial War Graves Commission for Permanent Memorials to be erected on the graves in all theatres of war. These memorials will bear the Regimental Badge, Number, Rank, Name and Initials or Christian Names of the soldiers, date of death, and the name of the unit. The appropriate religious emblem will also be carved on the memorial, and a space has been provided for a text by inscription chosen by the next of kin which will be engraved at his or her own cost.
 Experience has proved that the next of kin are in many cases anxious that there should be recorded in the War Cemeteries some fuller information as to the fallen soldiers than it is possible to inscribe on the Memorial.
 To provide for this, the Imperial War Graves Commission have decided to place in each cemetery a complete roster of the names of the soldiers buried there.
 This register will contain the information submitted by the next of kin in regard to parentage and birth place of the soldier, and any further particulars of his military and civilian career that may be desired.
 When a cemetery is finally closed and ready for construction to commence, forms are sent to the next of kin asking for the text or inscription chosen for the memorial, and for the particulars required for the cemetery register.
 The next of kin are asked to return these forms to the Imperial War Graves Commission in London. There are instances continually arising where the next of kin in replying to the forms sent to them and giving the information they desire recorded, ask what provision is being made to mark permanently the grave of another member of the family who is buried elsewhere.
 Unfortunately owing to the vastness of the work of verification, it is impossible to send forms in respect of all such graves to the next of kin at one and the same time. Although it might appear that the grave has been overlooked, this is not the case, as another form will be sent at a later date when the cemetery where the grave in question lies is being dealt with. Nevertheless, when information is supplied by the next of kin in reference to a grave in a cemetery for which construction has not yet been commenced, the particulars are acknowledged and carefully noted for future use. It must be recognized that a work of this nature cannot be hurriedly carried out if it is to satisfy the sentiments of the next of kin.
 Each grave already recorded must be carefully maintained and search must be made to locate as many as possible of the graves of those whose last resting place is still unregistered. From day to day, in all theatres of war, new figures are being located, single graves and small groups are gradually being concentrated in the nearest main cemetery with all due care and reverence.
 The completion of the work undertaken by the Commission will be greatly facilitated if the next of kin will cooperate in the task of verification by returning the forms with as little delay as possible, remembering that delay in information regarding one grave may seriously impede the construction and completion of a cemetery.

ROCKEFELLER GIVES $10,000,000 MORE.
 NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—John D. Rockefeller has given $10,000,000 more to the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, according to the offices of the Institute, Avenue A and Fifty-fifth Street. This is by far the largest single gift Mr. Rockefeller has made to the institution, although previous gifts had brought its endowment to nearly $20,000,000.
 While previous gifts generally have been for specific purposes, the latest it was said yesterday, was presented solely to meet growing needs in many lines of research, and to make the last finding and discoveries of its staff of scientists available in general medical practice.
 The income, it is announced, will be used to sustain new lines of research in biology, chemistry and physics, as well as to continue study already in progress with reference to diseases of men and animals.
 The scientific staff of the institute now numbers sixty-five. In addition 310 persons are employed in technical and general service. The local activities are centered in the great laboratories and hospital on the bluff overlooking the East River, between East Sixty-fourth and Sixty-sixth Streets.
 The institute has a large farm near Princeton, N. J., where it maintains a department of animal pathology. The laboratories and various accessory buildings are devoted to research on the diseases of animals and effective methods for the prevention and cure as well as to the study of the bearing of animal diseases upon the health and economical interests of man.
 The cheapest of all things is kindness, its exercise requiring the least possible trouble and self-sacrifice.—Smiles.

Better Recruits
 This new policy of the army authorities is a sound one, as a very much better class of recruit is being attracted to the colors. It is very essential today when the army of the future is likely to be comparatively small that it should consist of men of a high standard of intelligence and character. Not so many years ago a gentleman was talking to a woman who lived on his estate and was confiding with her about her sons, who had not done very well and were always in the hands of the police. Her great consolation was, she said, that none of her sons had disgraced the family name by joining the army.
 That, however, is all now changed, and an entirely new class of man is entering the army. During the war a new esprit de corps has arisen, and there is no comparison between the old army and the present one.

A BIBLE GIFT IN AUSTRALIA
 MELBOURNE, Victoria, Nov. 6.—His excellency the Governor-General of Australia, Sir Ronald Munro Ferguson, has presented to the Federal Parliament a Bible and letters as a souvenir of the signing of peace. The donors were the Victorian Branch of the British and Foreign Bible Society. The Speaker, Mr. Elliott Johnson, improved the occasion by pointing out to members of the House of Representatives the words inscribed on the cover of the Bible: "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

Prince Visited Archbishop Bruchesi
 MONTREAL, Nov. 3.—One of the last acts of the Prince of Wales before he departed from the city yesterday was an impromptu visit to His Grace, Archbishop Bruchesi, at the Hotel Dieu hospital, where, for the past two weeks, the archbishop has been confined for treatment. The visit was an agreeable surprise to His Grace.
 "You know, Prince," remarked the archbishop, before the Prince left "what name the people have given you?" and as the Prince seemed not to know, His Grace continued: "Others will tell you what it is, but I wish to call you by another name: 'Conquering Prince.' You have passed through our country as a conqueror and your conquests are the finest that can be. You have conquered all hearts and most especially that of the Archbishop of Montreal."
 Before leaving the Hotel Dieu, His Royal Highness signed the register next to the name of Cardinal Mercier, and other eminent visitors, among whom are many royal names.
