

Tea Flavor and Strength

THE greater body and richness of Indian tea when combined with the delicately flavored but thinner tea of Ceylon, produces that "rich fruity flavor" of Red Rose Tea—a tea that is strong and goes further—requires less to make a cup of equal strength than any brand of Ceylon tea alone.

Red Rose Tea combines the strength and richness of Indian tea and the delicacy and fragrance of Ceylon tea.

Red Rose Tea is good Tea

CHAPTER XXVI—Continued
He came and snook man's with eye and thanked us in the name of the republic for the example of courage and patriotism we and many others had given to the army. He had a lean, tall, ungraceful figure, and he spoke his mind without any frill or flourish. He said only a few words of good plain talk and was done with us.
"Which is Brower?" he inquired presently.
I came forward more scared than ever I had been before.
"My son," he said, taking my hand in his, "why didn't you run?"
"Didn't dare," I answered. "I knew it was more dangerous to run away than to go forward."

"Reminds me of a story," said he, smiling. "Years ago there was a bully in Seagramm county, Ill., that had the reputation of punning faster and fighting harder than any man there. Everybody thought he was a terrible fighter. He'd always get a man on the run; then he'd catch up and give him a licking. One day he tackled a lame man. The lame man licked him in a minute.
"Why didn't you run?" somebody asked the victor.
"Didn't dare," said he. "Run once when he tackled me, an' I've been lame ever since."
"How did ye manage to lick him?" said the other.
"Waal," said he, "I hed to, an' I done it easy."

"That's the way it goes," said the immortal president; "ye do it easy if ye have to."
He reminded me in and out of Horace Greeley, although they looked no more alike than a hawk and a hand-saw. But they had a like habit of forgetting themselves and of saying neither more nor less than they meant. They both had the strength of an ox and a little vanity. Mr. Greeley used to say that no man could amount to anything who worried much about the fit of his trousers. Neither of them ever encountered that obstacle.
Early next morning I took a train for home. I was in soldier clothes—I had with me no others—and all in my car came to talk with me about the now famous battle of Bull Run.
The big platform at Jersey City was crowded with many people as we got off the train. There were other returning soldiers, some with crutches, some with empty sleeves.
A band at the farther end of the platform was playing and those near me were singing the familiar music:
"John Brown's body lies a-moldering in the grave."
Somebody shouted my name. Then there rose a cry of three cheers for Brower. It was some of the boys of the Tribune, I thought. I could see a number of them in the crowd. One brought me a basket of flowers. I thought they were trying to have fun with me.
"Thank you," said I. "But what is the joke?"
"No joke," he said; "it's to honor a hero."
"Oh, you wish me to give it to somebody."
I was warming with embarrassment. "We wish you to keep it," he answered.

In accounts of the battle I had seen some notice of my leading a charge, but my fame had gone farther—much farther, indeed—than I knew. I stood a moment laughing—an odd sort of laugh it was that had in it the salt of tears—and waving my hand to the many who were now calling my name.
In the uproar of cheers and waving of handkerchiefs I could not find Uncle Eb for a moment. When I saw him in the breaking crowd he was cheering lustily and waving his hat above his head. His enthusiasm increased when I stood before him. As I was greeting him I heard a lively rustle of skirts. Two dainty, gloved hands laid hold of mine; a sweet voice spoke my name. There, beside me, stood the tall, erect figure of Hope. Our eyes met, and before there was any thinking of propriety I had her in my arms and was kissing her and she was kissing me.
It thrilled me to see the splendor of her beauty that day, her eyes wet with feeling as they looked up at me; to feel again the trembling touch of her lips. In a moment I turned to Uncle Eb.
"Boy," he said, "I thought you— And then he stopped and began brushing his coat sleeve.
"Come on now," he added as he took my grip away from me. "We're goin' t' hev a grand good time. I'll take ye to a splendid tavern somewheres. An' I ain't goin' t' count the cost neither."
He was determined to carry my grip for me. Hope had a friend with her who was going north in the morning on our boat. We crossed the ferry and took a Broadway omnibus, while query followed query.
"Makes me feel like a dappack t' ride 'n them things," said Uncle Eb as we got out.
He hired a parlor and two bedrooms for us all at the St. Nicholas.

THE SALVATION OF SHOES.

HAVE you ever yet worn out the upper part of a shoe? If you could get Soles that wore as long as Uppers wouldn't it cut down your shoe bill? Well—here you are at last—"Quick-Oak" Sole leather, which is tough as rawhide, but as light as cork.

Soak it in water for four steady hours and it won't be wet through.
Put the highest priced regular Oak leather in the same vessel and it will be entirely water-soaked in one-fourth that time.

"Quick-Oak" is the safest sole leather that ever happened, because every sole of it can be relied upon for wear and water-resistance every time.

We had to sign a big contract to control "Quick-Oak" Sole for Canada, so that it can now be had only in the genuine "Slater Shoe."
These shoes are made by the Slater Shoe Company, and have stamped on the lining a steel frame with the retail selling price, $3.50 or $5.00.

"The Slater Shoe" has always been a pretty safe thing to buy, but "Quick-Oak" Soles now make it safer, longer-lived, more damp-proof than ever.

Chamberlain's COLIC, CHOLERA AND Diarrhoea Remedy

A few doses of this remedy will invariably cure an ordinary attack of diarrhoea.
It has been used in nine epidemics of dysentery with perfect success.
It can always be depended upon, even in the more severe attacks of cramp colic and cholera morbus.
It is equally successful for summer diarrhoea and cholera infantum in children, and is the means of saving the lives of many children each year.
When reduced with water and sweetened it is pleasant to take.
Every man of a family should keep this remedy in his home. Buy it now. It may save life.
