
"He wants to know can she borrow a package of crisp, delicious Grape-Nuts Flakes until tomorrow?"

"Sure thing, Ukluk, we always keep an igloo full of malty-rich, sweet-as-a-nut Post's Grape-Nuts Flakes."

"Brother, we can use that good nourishment in Post's Grape-Nuts Flakes: carbohydrates for energy; proteins for muscle; phosphorus for teeth and bones; iron for the blood; other food essentials."

"Those two golden grains, wheat and malted barley sure are cleverly blended, baked and toasted to achieve that glorious flavor and honey-golden crispness of Post's Grape-Nuts Flakes."

"Know what? We're going to cook up some cookies and muffins too, from those recipes on the Post's Grape-Nuts Flakes package. Better make it the big economy size."

Olga Rocco, 26, victim of one of New York City's most bizarre murder attempts, gets a kiss of welcome from her mother, Mrs. Rose Trapani, 71, as she arrives home from the hospital. Her husband, since killed by police, arranged for her to be slain by a shotgun disguised as a camera, but she escaped with the loss of a leg. Now she wants only to forget.

It is the intention of the Exchange to have an office and warehouse with telephone connection in Mt. Stewart.

The decorations were keyed to the occasion, and consisted of hearts and arrows, and red and white streamers, interspersed with small valentines. "Meet Mr. Valentine" formed a lively introduction to the evening's entertainment, and was followed by games, contests and relays bearing on the same theme. The hall rocked with laughter when "Bringing Up Father" was presented. The selecting of lunch partners by the Heart Frame caused further amusement. After a delicious lunch games and music were continued until midnight. The musicians for the evening were Mrs. Sheldon Abbot and Mr. Bobbie Howard. The W. I., who sponsored the entertainment are grateful to all who made it such a success, and hope for their continued patronage at further gatherings.

WISDOM

Men have always thirsted for knowledge, not only of nature and the universe but of spiritual reality, and, not least, of themselves. The importance of self-knowledge was fully recognized by the ancient Greeks, whose precept "know thyself" the Latin poet Juvenal speaks of as "having come down from heaven."

Knowledge of the self is indeed of very high value, and modern psychology is adding greatly to this knowledge; but it is only as men learn to know God, "in whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge," that they will most truly understand themselves. To acquire knowledge seems to be one of the main purposes of human thought and endeavour. It must be God's will that men should use to the full the gift of reason and intellectual curiosity with which they have been so generously endowed.

Modern science is elucidating more and more of the mysteries of creation, though every discovery lures man on to ever deeper searching; for the penetration of each mystery opens up before him other and more profound problems which challenge his intellectual capacity. As he follows the path of investigation new vistas of knowledge unroll themselves before him, as in climbing a mountain each peak surmounted may reveal another that is still loftier.

But experience has shown that knowledge of itself is not enough; it may even be a dangerous possession. Man has learned to control the forces of steam and electricity, to fly at incredible speeds and heights, and all these achievements he has used for both good and evil, though, as a scientist has recently affirmed, in the long run the good uses have tended to prevail. To know how to utilize atomic energy can be either an untold blessing or the ultimate source of man's destruction. Everything depends upon how knowledge is used. So that with knowledge there must be the wisdom to use it for beneficial purposes.

Wisdom is indeed the right use of knowledge. It has frequently been said, and with justice, that man's intellectual attainments have outstripped his moral development; that he has unleashed forces which he finds it almost impossible to control. What he needs is that wisdom which in the Bible, and especially in the Book of Wisdom, is seen as a gift from God.

In Memoriam

JOHNNIE SAMUEL BEATON

The sympathy of the entire community of Brooklyn and surrounding districts is with the family of the late Johnnie Samuel Beaton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Preston Beaton who departed this life on February 7th at the early age of 2 years seven months.

Johnnie was a remarkably bright child, friendly to everyone and beloved by all who ever saw him.

His passing was an unforgettable blow to his family, as until a short time before his death he was in his usual good health.

He was in the Prince Edward Island Hospital during which time every possible effort was made for his recovery but God willed otherwise and the gentle little spirit passed into His tender care.

The funeral service was held at the home of his parents and was attended by a large number of relatives and friends.

The service was conducted by the Reverend T. A. A. Duke who gave a comforting message to the bereaved family.

The hymns sung were: When He Cometh, When Mother's of Salem and Standing on the Promises which was his favourite hymn.

He leaves to mourn his passing his parents, two brothers Wilfred and baby William; his grandparents Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Beaton of Brooklyn and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel MacPherson of Glen Martin. Also a host of aunts, uncles and friends.

The floral tributes were as follows:

Pillow—The Family.

Spray—

Grandpa and Gradma Beaton

Earl Hume and Family.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack MacPherson, Charlottetown.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce MacPherson and Andrew, Charlottetown.

Mr and Mrs. Ed. Acorn and Jane Warren. Charlottetown.

The pall bearers were:—Arthur MacKinnon, Hughie MacPherson, Lloyd MacKinnon, Angus MacPherson.

Interment was in the Brooklyn Cemetery.

Gone is the face we loved so dear
Silent is the voice we loved to hear
'Tis sad, but true, we wonder why,
The best is always the first to die.

Lovingly Remembered by His Mother and Father.
(Patriot please copy.)

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. and Mrs. Preston Beaton of Brooklyn, wish to thank their friends for their many acts of kindness during their recent bereavement, those who sent flowes and messages of sympathy, the doctors and nurses of the P. E. I. Hospital, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Acorn and Mr. and Mrs. J. P. MacPherson and family of Charlottetown.

In Memoriam

In fond and loving memory of Henry J. Murray of Pleasant Valley, who passed peacefully away March 4th, 1934.

And with farewells unspoken
He calmly entered home.

DANIEL N. WARD

On the ninth day of November, 1946, Daniel Neil Ward of Hampshire heard the call from the great Eternity and passed peacefully on to His Reward for life and service on earth. Mr. Ward was born at Clyde River, P. E. I., in 1870 where he lived until a young man when he went to the U. S. A., where he spent 17 years of his life. He then returned to P. E. I. and made his home at Hampshire where he became a successful farmer. During the past forty-two years of life he lived to endear himself to all who knew him as neighbor and friend, one who was ever ready and willing in community life and welfare. He was a loyal member and Deacon of the Baptist Church at Kingston, a member of King William L. O. L. Kingston. Those who mourn the loss of a beloved husband and father are his wife, one son Earl at home, a daughter, Mrs. Lloyd MacLeod, Brookfield, P. E. I.; also brothers and sisters, Frederick of Charlottetown; Mrs. Stanley Feener, Bridgewater, Mass.; Mrs. Bertram Auld, Clyde River, P. E. I.; Spurgeon, at Weymouth, Mass., and William of Rockland, Mass.

The largely attended funeral at the home on November 11th was conducted by the Pastor, Rev. A. E. Todd assisted by Rev. J. R. Skinner of the United Church and Stephen Ackland a neighbor and brother Deacon of the Kingston Church for many years. Mr. Murdock MacLeod very appropriately sang "No Night There." Hymns were by a Community Choir. Burial at Kingston Cemetery was conducted by the Pastor and Rev. J. R. Skinner who led the L. O. L. burial service. Pall bearers were William Green, George Beer, Bertram Auld, Elmer Younker, Andrew Dollar, James Jewell.

The many tributes of sympathy were a small indication of the high esteem in which the departed was held by all who knew him in his own and surrounding communities of his life.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Annie Warren, who passed away March 4th, 1929.

They say time heals all sorrow
And helps us to forget
But time so far has only proved
How much we miss her yet.
Her voice keeps whispering
Be loving, brave and true
For at the end of the lane of sorsows
I'll be waiting there for you.

Inserted by Her Family.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Jerry Adams wishes to express her appreciation and thanks to the many friends and neighbours for kindness shown and for messages of sympathy during her recent bereavement.

Ellen's Diary

By an Island Farmer's Wife

of the family, who chose to travel: Jeanie with a steaming drink to her flock of poultry; James toting the turnips to the cattle or Jock carrying the pails of water from the pump to supplement the dry feeding for the inmates of the piggery. Many of these are now in a condition that is extremely interesting to all of us, when we consider any future prosperity and also fraught with some anxiety on this account, especially to James, who leaves so little to the workings of fate. When my expectations soar, James will take time to remind me that the farmer is never sure of a cash return from any crop, until as he says "he has it counted into his hand."

"Beautiful, this morning, isn't it?" Jeanie greeted us, when she was on her way to the mailbox with the mailings. I wondered then if she would happen to see my friend, the chatty squirrel. Strangely enough when Jamie accompanied me thither, on a recent morning, even though we spent some time searching for her in the woodland there, we had to come away disappointed. But many a time when I come there alone or with Pard, who loves to scout along ahead, before I reach the mailbox, I hear her warm greeting and find her without any trouble perched high on a feathery hemlock branch or below on a stump. "Guess her doesn't feel hungry 'till after dinner time" Jamie said that day, as without hailing her, we turned to retrace our steps. Very lovely indeed was this Winter scene set before us today, and this was the very snow, for which ours and other farmers had awaited in order to do the heavier hauling. And so along the road and by wood trails that wind so intriguingly along the fields, all such continued busily. James, himself owned to having small time to relax today.

Between times from his chorings he was there to help at the unloading, when Jock fetched loads of wood from the bush—odds and ends of sticks from the lumbering, gay birch and darker maple, discarded as unfit from that intended one day, for the hardwood flooring. Rob was hauling from the same source, and try as I will to find out the secret of it, I have never yet learned by what magic measure or rule—unless perhaps it might be the one that is Golden—they divide such things so amicably and satisfactorily. Rob's route, from there leads in the opposite direction and takes him to a still lonely farmstead, with only the patient Mutt-dog there to keep him company. However, Karolyn and her new son are doing well, and distressing as the remarks were when I considered "man's ingratitude" Jamie, with, apparently no shade of regret has already been heard to say: "When will I be able to begin to pack my things a go home?"

On this road of ours, which for a goodly ways, flirts with the mill stream, cars moved amid wintry surroundings and it needed ingenious motorists, to mount the hill leading to the highway at the corner store. Island hills can be vantage points of delight, though there are times and seasons when they are particularly challenging to car drivers. "There now!" James used to say with evident relief, when in his younger days, we reached the summit, and came to the level road beyond. Teams of horses that seem to fit better into the present landscape, and hitched to roomy farm sleighs turned into the old mill road, laden with their grists of grain-fattening cattle and hogs nearing the weight will be getting that finished appearance from this, at once lifting them from the commonplace to the preferred class. Now that I recall seeing them out to the watering this afternoon, I remember that our cattle-kind can still make their way unassisted down and up from the stream and a neglect to respond to James' musical: "Cub, cow; cub cow" and a frisking and a locking of horns indicated that in spite of James' yearly uneasiness in regard to emptying hay mows and grain bins it appears that some of them will survive to reach the grass, the water, and the sweet juiciness of our Spring pastures.

"But Ellen" James tells me "for the love of goodness, quit that writing and call Rob to see how things are getting along in there!"

Until tomorrow — Diary —Goodnight.

New hat worn by stylish Mrs. Dick was bought for her by Mrs. Donald MacLean, aobve, her mother.

Frank Boehler, 19-year-old farmhand (above), surprise witness in the Dick murder trial testified he heard three shots and saw a man's leg, partly visible, in the back seat of car he pulled out of mud on Ancaster road, Hamilton, Ont., last March 6. When asked to identify the person at the wheel of the car he nodded at Mrs. Dick.
