The HOUSEWIFE and HER ACTIVITIES

MY BUSINESS My business is not to remake myself. But to make the absolute best of what God made. —Robert Browning. THE BEST The best preacher is the heart, the best teacher is time; the best book is the world; the best friend is God.—The Talmud. QUALITIES What we live for is to make the world less difficult for each other. —George Elliot. OTHERS We love in others what we lack ourselves, and would be everything but what we are.—R. H. Stoddard. IDLENESS Idleness, pride, and folly are our heaviest taxes. ACCURACY Accuracy in business is a virtue beyond esteem.—Elbert Hubbard. PURPOSE Strong purpose is a great safeguard. FIVE-MINUTE EGGS. Place number of eggs required in a pan of boiling water. See that the eggs are quite covered. Put lid on pan and remove from heat. Stand for five or six minutes, when the eggs will be ready. Eggs cooked in this way are more digestible than when boiled in the ordinary way.

Boys Owe it to Their Mothers to Take Them Out Occasionally no Matter What the Girl Friend Has to Say About it

Dear Miss Dix—Once or twice a week I like to take my mother out to a show or to dinner. Most of the chaps I know like to do the same, but to show our mothers a little kindness and courtesy seems to be a crime with the girls nowadays. If a boy is halfway decent to his mother, he is due for some catty remarks about being a "sissy" or tied to Mamma's apron strings. Can you tell me why a girl expects a man to regard his mother as a nuisance, a bore and a pest? My mother is a grand sort of person and I enjoy being with her and I am proud of her. I feel that trying to give her a good time now and then is little enough for all she has done for me. I like to spend my money on girls. I have a car and I like to take them about, but I'll be darned if I like listening to a diatribe against women who are the mothers of boys I have known all my life. DAN.

Answer: Probably the reason that girls resent their Boy Friends showing any attention to their mothers is because they want to monopolize all of their time and money. The thought that Tom or John is giving Mother a good time while they are sitting at home turns them sour.

Nobody, however, can explain the antagonism that virtually all young women feel against the mothers of the men with whom they go about. It seems to be congenital, like the hatred of snakes, with which they are born. No matter how angelic Mother may be, no matter how cordial and friendly, they look upon her with suspicion and resentment and are far more jealous of her than they are of any rival of their own age.

Considering that all girls have mothers and expect to be mothers themselves, you would think that their attitude toward boys' mothers would be full of understanding and sympathy, and that they would applaud Sam and Bill for their attentions to their mothers. You would think that they would say: "Goodness knows, nothing a son can do can repay his mother for her suffering and sacrifices, work and worry in bringing him into the world and rearing him. The least he can do is to take her now and then to some place of amusement to try to make up to her for the nights she has walked him when he was a cocky baby, or watched beside his bed when he was sick, and to give her a few flowers now instead of waiting to put them on her coffin."

But, unfortunately, girls don't feel that way about Bill's and Sam's and Tom's mothers. They think they should have the orchids, the candy, the theatre tickets and the automobile rides and that they are being defrauded on their just rights and privileges when these favors are bestowed upon a mere mother instead of upon them. Hence the claws.

It is selfishness. It is greediness. It is the possessive instinct. It is jealousy of the woman who was a man's first love and who has been part of his life that makes girls catty about men's mothers. And there is no help for it. They were born that way.

Dear Miss Dix—How much should one sacrifice for one's family? How much should one let one's family influence one about marriage? CECIL.

Answer: Not much, I think. Self-sacrifice is one of the virtues that lean to vice's side and it often does harm than good. Especially is this the case where one son of daughter is elected the family god and offered up on the family altar, thereby encouraging and promoting selfishness, laziness and parasitism in the remainder of the family.

We have all seen this happen a thousand times. We have seen the oldest son in a family taken out of school and put to work to help support the family while he was still a mere child. We have seen him denied an education that the other children might go to college. We have seen him give up all thoughts of marriage because he had to help take care of the wives and children of the brothers and sisters who were too shiftless to support their own.

We have seen a young girl made a slave to a querulous old mother and father who wouldn't let Mary marry or follow a career because they didn't want her to leave them and nobody could boil an egg just to suit them except her. And we have seen how futile were the sacrifices made of their lives.

We have known how much better and finer and stronger men and women the younger brothers and sisters would have been if they had been forced to bear their part of the family burden, work for what they wanted and make their share of sacrifices instead of letting George do it all.

And often we have seen that it would have been better even for the family if George had refused to sacrifice himself to it, for if he had gone his own way he would have made more money to give them than he has by sticking to a little job and letting them rob him of every cent so that he had no money to take advantage of the opportunities that presented themselves.

And when we have seen an old maid, unwanted, living around as an unwelcome guest in the homes of her brothers and sisters, nieces or nephews, we have thought how worthless, even to her family, was the sacrifice she made when she gave up her opportunity to marry or to go into some business of her own in order to stay at home and take care of her old parents and younger brothers and sisters.

When one is picking out a husband or wife, one's own heart and judgment should determine the matter, not the prejudices of one's family. Husbands and wives are a matter of taste. Those who are going to have to live with them are the only ones who have any right to a say-so about them.

Dear Dorothy Dix—The man I am engaged to earns a small salary, but we could be married and live comfortably on it. I also earn a good salary and the question is: Shall I continue to work and save my salary toward making a first payment on a home, or should I stop working and we just have each other in a rented home? I have always felt that a girl should not work after she was married. PEGGY.

Answer: Whether or not you give up work when you are married is a matter for you and your husband to decide. Unless the money is urgently needed I think there is a greater chance for happiness if the wife goes domestic after marriage. Don't make the mistake of sacrificing too much to the fetish of owning your own home. It is a good thing to own one if you can afford it, but it is a curse upon you if you have to sacrifice everything to keep up your payments and live in dread of losing it. DOROTHY DIX.

The Queens' Birthday

THREE YEARS OLD! Babies no longer—in fact, quite the young ladies, these quintuple queens of Callander. And very sturdy, healthy young ladies, too.

Two and a half years ago the Dionne Quintuplets received their first feedings of Carnation Milk—the evaporated milk they use still. Through some of the most important months of their lives, Carnation was the main food in their diets.

Less widely heralded, but just as effective, is Carnation's use in literally thousands of homes where babies are growing to sturdy childhood on this good milk. Carnation is pure, nourishing, super-digestible. It is irradiated, adding valuable bone-building "sunshine" vitamin D to the diet. ... And it is just as fine for cooking and creaming as it is for babies and children.

A Morning Smile

Mother: "I really don't think, Donald, that you can eat any more cakes." Donald: "Oh, yes, I can, mother. I'm not going to let my stomach boss me!" Husband: "I've had a slice of luck while you've been out." Wife: "Have you really? How?" Husband: "The landlord called and said as how he's fed up calling here and getting no rent, so he said we could have the house for nothing." Wife: "But surely you didn't take it?" Husband: "Why, of course I did!" Wife: "Well, all I can say is you are a fool. We'll have to pay taxes now."

THE COOK'S CORNER

- SCOTCH SHORTBREAD. 1 pound butter 1 cup closely packed brown sugar (yellow sugar) 2 1/2 cups flour or 3 1/2 cups unbleached flour or 3 1/2 cups flour and 1/2 cup rice flour. Cream butter well, add sugar and cream together. Gradually add flour and mix well. Place on a baking-board and knead for 20 minutes. The secret of good shortbread lies in the kneading of it. Shape either in round cakes or in finger lengths and bake in a slow oven, 275 degrees F. for the first half-hour, and 300 degrees F. for the last half hour. The total time for cooking is approximately one hour.
- CREAM CHEESE COOKIES. 1 cup sugar 1 small pkg. cream cheese 1 egg 1 teaspoon baking powder 1 cup butter 2 1/2 cups flour 2 1/2 cups lemon juice. Cream butter, add sugar, lemon juice and rind and cream cheese, mixing well together. Then add slightly beaten egg. Add dry ingredients, sifted together. Knead well. Place in a square tin, patting dough down to 1/2-inch thickness. Bake at 350 degrees F. for 15 to 20 minutes. Cut into finger lengths and when cold ice with plain butter icing and sprinkle with chopped nuts.
- DROP BRAN COOKIES. 2 tablespoons peanut butter 1/2 cup shortening 6 tablespoons prune juice 2 egg yolks 1 3/4 cups flour 1 1/2 cups baking powder 1/2 cup chopped prunes 1 cup brown sugar 1 teaspoon vanilla 1 1/4 cups bran
