at the bicycle park. For some reason or other they could not get the barrels on the motor truck from the warehouse and so had to get a truckman.

Yesterday Morning's Evidence

D. O'Brien (sworn) repeated the story of the appearance of the mysterious stranger at the shop on the afternoon of June 7th; of the bargain made for the rum at $20 a gallon, and of the subsequent events at Carter's warehouse on the following morning as testified to by Geo. Essery in his evidence. The stranger when he made the bargain said he represented the Canadian Distributing Company. Witness did not go into Carter's cellar. He did not know there was any rum being stolen at the time.

They belonged to Wedlock and testified to by Geo. Essery in his evidence. A car was burned at another time in his possession, belonging to Mr. Wedlock. On another occasion a car was burned while witness was driving it but only the wires were damaged. Witness slept on the night of June 7th with Essery at his boarding house. Dan Cronan boards here. Did not know whether Cronan sold liquor or not. Did not know whether Cronan attempted to pass liquor into the jail or not. Had read something about an attempt of this kind in the paper but did not know anything about it. Att. Gen. Johnston—Was Cronan to visit you while you were in jail?

Had Your Iron Today?

Boy Scouts Know

Go on hikes in summer—sun beating on their heads. But they get there fresh. Carry little raisins to sustain energy. It's a regulation with some troops. 1560 calories of energizing nutriment per pound in practically predigested form, so it goes to work almost immediately; yet doesn't tax digestion and so doesn't heat the blood. Fatigue-resisting food-iron, too—good for stamina. Heat got YOU this summer? Try the Boy Scout's way. Put back the vitality that hot weather saps. Try two packages and a glass of milk for an energizing, healthful summer lunch.

Witness—Yes, he was a couple of times.

"Was he on the outside or on the inside?"

"He must have been outside before he got inside."

Witness knew Leslie Worth, teamster for Carters. He used to work at Larges. Witness used to hang around Larges. Worth did too.

"Did Leslie Worth tell you about that rum being taken to Carters?"

"No, Sir."

"Did you tell anybody that he did?"

"No Sir."

"Does Worth visit your shop at anytime?"

"No, not that I know of."

Witness did not know how the fire in his livery stable started where the cars were burned. There were no horses lost. He did not know how or when the fire started.

The strange man who came to see him on June 7th looked as if he did not have a shave for two or three days.

Witness—You were innocently taken in by these men, weren't you, O'Brien?"

"I was, yes."

"You were innocently abroad?"

Witness was surprised to see the stranger at Carter's. He thought it was the last place in the world to get rum. The stranger opened the door and witness followed him in. He did not have any suspicion. He had not heard of any liquor being stolen at Maddigan's. When witness saw the stranger he did not have the time for the rum he wanted he was not very fussy about talking to him. The stranger did not seem to have any key—he just put his hand to the door and walked in.

"Didn't you ask the stranger how he got in?"

"I seen how he got in, he walked in."

"And you didn't see him unlock the door?"

"No."

When they got inside one puncher was up and the other was nearly level with the floor. Witness did not know whether the electric motor was left running or not. He did not know anything about running an electric elevator. The money to buy the rum was put away in the shop on Grafton St., and so far as witness knew it was there yet. Witness left after he saw there was no rum to be bought. He intended to go to the shop and he was called back by Essery and he was called back by the stranger, who told him not to be fussy that they would get the rum sometime during the day or evening. This was before Hennessey arrived with the jigger. Witness sat down inside and saw two punchers loaded from the side door. The stranger then let witness and Essery out the front door. The watchmen were standing on the corner outside. The stranger said, "Go with the truck." They thought they would get the rum at the other end.

TIGNISH.—Don't forget the Annual Parochial Picnic at Tignish July 26, 1922.

Rev. Dr. M. E. Genge (Sworn): I am residing in Charlottetown 15 months pastor of Central Christian Church. He boards at Lennox Hotel at present, near the ferry wharf. Witness has a boat and is well acquainted with the wharves. He remembered reading of the rum robbery in the paper. One morning about ten days previous to the robbery, about 9 a. m. when he was painting his boat he saw a strange man, about 5 ft. 8 inches, weighing between 145 or 150 on the wharf. He had a grey check suit and a green hat. He opened conversation with witness, who was in overhauls. The stranger had a slight Hebrew accent though he was probably Canadian or American born. His clothes were of the best quality. He remained on the wharf about 30 minutes. He spoke a good deal to witness and appeared to be out looking for a boat to take 200 gallons of rum to Pugwash. He did not know he was talking to a clergyman but he knew before he left. He did not succeed in making a deal with Dr. Genge. This happened a week or ten days previous to the robbery. The stranger was clean shaved with a little Charlie Chaplin moustache. When he could not get the boat he turned around and walked up the wharf.

Fred Kenny, 101 Sydney St. (Sworn): Keeps shop of boarding house kept by his mother, Staw Essery between 1 and 2 o'clock in the morning going to his room in the house with Danny O'Brien. They got up at 3.45. (Cross Examined): Essery has been boarded at the house 3 or 4 years. O'Brien is with him 2 or 3 nights a week since they started business together. Witness had been in jail for an hour before his fine was paid for smashing a Chinaman's window. He did not know of any rum being taken out to O'Brien and Essery in jail.

the Square, walked around town in the morning and in the afternoon went out the Park with Sam Craig and Harry Riggs. They went from there to the Chinamen's restaurant and thence to their own shop, from where they were arrested. Witness telephoned Mr. Shaw and Mr. Inman from the jail, also Mr. Stanley Wedlock, who had a note of witnesses. He came out to the jail and wanted to know if witness could not pay something on it. Essery did not send for him, so far as witness knew. Mr. Wedlock came about half an hour after he was telephoned.

Witness—Yes, he was a couple of times.
