Mrs. McArthur Star Actress Is A Home Body

By ADELAIDE KERR
Associated Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, Feb. 1 —(CP)— Helen Hayes, who is making her first Broadway appearance in Shakespeare and starring in contemporary radio dramas at the same time, already is making career plans for 1941-42.

To her neighbors, "Mrs. Charles McArthur," she is one of America's tiniest and mightiest actresses. She is five feet one, blue-eyed, soft-voiced. She has handled some of the theatre's toughest roles in a way that has given her tall stature in the eyes of its world.

Miss Hayes is one actress who gets no thrill out of night clubs. Every night after the performance she motors back to the country town of Nyack, N. Y., where the McArthurs live with their 10-year-old daughter Mary, three-year-old adopted son Jamie and a brace of dogs.

BIG SUCCESS

Miss Hayes and Maurice Evans, have scored a big succes as viola and Malvolio in "Twelfth Night," plan to appear together in another play as soon as this one ends its Broadway run and a possible tour. Miss Hayes thinks that may be next fall.

Critics gave her a big hand for her interpretation of the famous role of Viola, in which she masquerades as a boy and appears for the first time on the stage in pants black and white zebra-striped knickers which made the first night audience blink. She made an innovation in the part by appearing in a swooshing white ultra-feminine gown in the last act, after her disguise is revealed.

Wrapped in a suave fitted housecoat of Scotch striped wool, she sat on the chintz-covered sofa in her charming "social" dressing room, beyond the mirrored make-up room, and talked about her first Shakespearean role on Broadway.

LIKES AVON BARD

"I'm stage struck about it," she said. "I think I've enjoyed it more than any other play. Shakespeare gives you the chance to say so many beautiful things. I'm still working on my reading of the verse in 'Twelfth Night' and get Charles to check up on me every now and then."

"Charles" is her husband, Charles McArthur, playwright, who, she says, has contributed a lot to her career.

How does she get it all done Miss Hayes just shrugs that question off.

"I thrive on work," she says. "I just do it. Besides, when you compare my program with what the old troupers of the 90's used to do it isn't much.'

P.W.C. SAVE THE CHILDREN FUND.—Enthusiasm to help the British children has been running so high in the Prince of Wales College the past week that the total contribution so far for the Save the Children Fund now exceeds $175.00 and is still growing. Over $80 have already been given in personal contributions by the college students, and about $20 was made by the sale of coffee at a college social Thursday night. The remainder has been contributed largely by the college staff. As there are a number of staff contributions yet to be made it is hoped that the fund will soon be over $200.00. A number of old college students have already added generously to the fund in response to the appeal made in the press last week. The students are expecting to raise more money for the fund through public entertainments and future socials. The entire amount will be handed over to the Save the Children Fund for relief of needy children in England. The Student Council is highly gratified with the very enthusiastic response the students have already made to this worthy cause. The college fund will be kept open, and any further contributions from old students may be sent to W. J. Duchemin of the College Staff.

TRINITY YOUNG PEOPLE'S UNION.—The devotional period of Trinity Y.P.U. was ably led by Earl Leard, assisted by Henry Clark in the reading of the Scripture. The business period followed with the president, Marion Hume, in the chair. The minutes were read and several items of business discussed. The groups then dispersed for classes after which the recreation period was enjoyed, after which Auld Lang Syne and God Save the King brought a most interesting evening to a close.

L. P. U. BALL — The annual Laborers Protective Union ball which was held last night at the Charlottetown Sporting Club was a big success. Several hundred people were in attendance and took advantage of the good music to enjoy eight hours of dancing. Long before midnight the merriment had started and many remained until the "wee sma' hours" of the morning to take in the whole show. Music was supplied by Don Messer and his orchestra.

EXECUTIVE MEETING — An executive meeting of the Queen's County War Savings Committee was held at the Charlottetown last night and plans for the forthcoming campaign, which will take place during the month of February, were discussed. It was planned to hold another meeting the first of next week and towards the last of it, call for volunteer workers. These men would be called together and arrange for a personal canvass. It is expected that 200,000 men across Canada will take part in this canvass. Mr. P.W. Turner, campaign chairman for Queen's County, presided and Mr. Alistair MacLeod acted as secretary of the meeting.

NAZIS SHUN SHIP SALE

BOSTON, Jan. 31—(AP)— The German Government's opposition to the sale of the interned 5,000-ton German tanker Pauline Friedrich today ended negotiations for disposal of the vessel to United States interests, a Boston ship broker announced. The ship broker, who requested anonymity, said the Nazi Government apparently feared the ship might be used to transport oil to Great Britain.

MILLIONS EGGS FISH OF FUTURE

OTTAWA, Feb. 1 —(CP) —Fifty million eggs—a lot of eggs even if they are trout and salmon eggs, which aren't very big, says Fisheries News Bulletin. They were collected by field employees of the Fish Culture Branch of the Dominion Department of Fisheries in the Maritime provinces during 1940. To be exact, the total was made up of 31,010,930 speckled trout eggs and 19,286,930 Atlantic salmon eggs.

The resultant baby fish are distributed in suitable waters where in due course they will grow up to match wits and agility with fishermen.

Howe not yet

Limited, a company set up by the government last summer to handle the Anson job.

"At the present moment I cannot see any guarantee that we could get planes more quickly if we upset the applecart and took this job out of the hands of those we organized to handle it," he said. "But we are still studying the situation. Our only object is to get the planes in the quickest way."

The government has not given up the idea of building aircraft engines in Canada, but does not intend to put any strain on the machine tool industry for that purpose at the present time, when engines can be obtained in sufficient quantities in the United States, Mr. Howe said.

Tank Production

Production of heavy infantry tanks may be started in March, the Minister said. Work on the cruiser tank, incorporating the best qualities of British and United States machines, is still in the design stage, and he could not prophesy when production would start.

Questioned on reports there was a heavy movement of British industries to Canada, Mr. Howe said the movement was constant, but not substantial.

It had been necessary for the government to bring over many skilled British technicians to get war production under way in Canada, and in addition there was a constant "trickle" of British technicians and executives coming into Canada to survey possibilities of moving their industries to the Dominion.

Control of the movement of capital out of Great Britain would make it impossible for any large industries to transfer bodily to the Dominion.

Mr. Howe announced another addition, costing about $5,000,000, to the government-owned gun plant operated by the John Inglis Company in Toronto had been authorized by the Department of Munitions and Supply.

"The John Inglis company's Bren gun plant had been expanded from time to time, and the proposed addition is to be used partly for the production of an anti-tank weapon, and partly for an increased production of Bren guns," his announcement said.

"The manufacturing processes of the proposed anti-tank weapon and the Bren gun are similar; hence it is proposed to take advantage of the specialized knowledge already acquired in the manufacture of Bren guns in speeding up production of the anti-tank weapons.

RUMANIAN STAMPS OF INCREASING VALUE

Now that King Carol of Rumania has abdicated in favor of his son Michael and this sadly reduced country is right in the news I would advise you to make a point of gathering as many Rumanian stamps as you can procure, says a collector.

Go through packets for copies of the original King Michael stamps of 1928. These show Carol's son as a chubby faced youngster of six or seven and will be very valuable one day.

Then again you should endeavor to obtain a complete set of Rumanian stamps bearing portraits of past kings. There was King Ferdinand on stamps of 1919, 1922, 1926 and 1927. King Charles II (as Carol was called) on a variety issued from 1927 onwards; and King Charles I on a number of other stamps.

Portraits of three Rumanian kings appeared on a stamp in 1929 to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the Union of Rumania and Transylvania. It is, therefore, historic in the light of recent events. The kings shown on it are Ferdinand I, Etienne the Great, Michael the Brave, whilst the other two portraits are of two great Rumanians named Corvin and Brancovaunu.

Perhaps the most interesting of all Rumanian stamps is, however, one that is beyond the reach of most collectors. It is the crudely printed 27-paras stamp of 1858. Worth over a thousand pounds today, it is circular and was in current use in the state of Moldavia, which, with Wallachia, made up Rumania.

Auxiliary to Canadian Legion Elects slate

The 14th annual meeting of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion B.E.S.L. was held Friday evening, January 31st at the Legion Rooms when the following officers were appointed for the ensuing year.

Mrs. Bradford W. LePage, Worthy Patroness.
Mrs. W. S. Stewart, Honorary President.
Mrs. Geoffrey Fitzgerald, President.
Mrs. I. E. Croken, 1st Vice President.
Mrs. E. Sterns, 2nd Vice President.
Miss E. Bagnall, Secretary.
Mrs. James Kelly, Treasurer.

Executive

Mrs. Allan B. Cosh.
Mrs. H. A. Messervey.
Mrs. George Sherren.
Mrs. Frank Walker.
Mrs. Philip E. Palmer.
Mrs. George McDonald.
Mrs. Norman Lowther.
Mrs. Gordon Worth.
Mrs. T. Edgar McNutt, Pianist.

The usual routine of business was conducted and nine applications for membership received.

The matter of raising funds for the Recreation Hut was discussed and committees appointed to take charge of various branches of this work.

The following report was submitted by the retiring President, Mrs. George Sherren:

The time has now come to hold our 14th Annual Meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Charlottetown Branch of the Canadian Legion, which marks the end of my term as your President. You did me the honor of electing me to this office on three successive occasions. Although I shall not be able in the future to play such an active part, I shall always be glad to give your new President all the assistance in my power and shall always remember the co-operation and help given me by all, during my term as your President.

Before entering into the details of my report, I would like to allude to the great loss we sustained in the sudden passing of our immediate Past President, Mrs. MacKenzie. The late Mrs. MacKenzie was one of the most devoted members who worked tirelessly for the welfare of the Auxiliary. Her passing leaves a vacancy at our meetings and she will always be remembered by the Members of the Auxiliary with affection and esteem.

Due to the war the Auxiliary has been very active and as shown by the Secretary's report, a great many activities were entered into, particularly with regard to providing comforts for the troops.

During the Canadian Legion War Services' drive for funds in February last, the Members of the Auxiliary undertook a house-to-house canvas and collected over $1100.00 for this very worthy cause.

We were very pleased that Mrs. B. W. LePage, wife of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province, consented to act as Worthy Patroness of our Auxiliary.

In co-operation with Mr. Albert Dinnis, Canadian Legion War Services' Entertainment Officer, the Auxiliary played a very active part in the entertainment of the troops —a banquet at Beach Grove Inn as a farewell to the Artillery stationed there—entertainments for the R.C.N.V.R. —a dance in the Sporting Club for all troops in training and a dance in he I.O.O.F. Hall for troops, especially the R.C.N.V.R.

In August our Province was visited by the Earl of Athlone, Governor-General of Canada, and his Consort, the Princess Alice. Your President had the honor of representing the Auxiliary at the formal reception held for them.

The Members of the Auxiliary attended a luncheon held in honor of the Dominion President of the Canadian Legion, Mr. Alex. Walker of Calgary, during his visit to this province.

As usual the Auxiliary undertook the sale of Poppy Wreaths for the Charlottetown Branch of the Legion and is glad to be able to report, as in previous years, a great success. We appreciate very much the generous support of the people of Charlottetown given each year during the Poppy Campaign.

On November 11th, we attended the Remembrance Day Service at the Monument and placed a wreath.

Our assistance was given the Branch in the sale of tickets for the picture which they sponsored "Shipyard Sally."

We are grateful to Mrs. LePage for the use of Government House, where a very successful afternoon tea was held by the Auxiliary.

I will not enter into any further details, as the Secretary's report so fully covers all the important phases of our work during the past year.

In conclusion, I wish to thank the members of the Executive and all the members of the Auxiliary for their kind co-operation and feel confident that they will give the same assistance to our new President.

Do You Use Cliches?

A cliche might be termed common property, which everyone uses free —and freely!

Have you ever stopped to figure out how many common cliches are in use, or how many are used in the course of an ordinary conversation? Perhaps you won't believe it, but there are more than forty.

Ever hear some person say, "He as cool as a cucumber," or "I'm as warm as toast" Sure you have, and those are common cliches.

But more than forty. Surely there can't be that many, you say.

Well we'll try to enumerate some for you. Some of the commonest are: As bold as brass, as timid as a rabbit, as mad as a hatter, as green as grass as cold as ice—and of course in the summer time, there's that old standby, as hot as hades.

Here are others used quite frequently in everyday conversation: As pretty as a picture, as ugly as sin, as straight as a string, as white as a sheet, a crooked as a corkscrew, as black as night as square as a die, and another great favorite, as drunk as a lord.

These most likely were born as pretty apt similes, but became cliches through frequent use. Even Dickens made a play on as dead as a doornail, in his immortal story, A Christmas Carol. As slippery as an eel, as strong as steel, as weak as water, as fit as a fiddle, as sick as a dog as soft as butter and as hard as nails, are others that may be called to mind.

Writers go out of their way to use old cliches, and few use as frisky as a colt, as fearless as a lion, as weak as a cat, as busy as a bee, as meek as a lamb and as fat as a pig

Here are a few more to close with: As brown as a berry, as snug as a bug in a rug, as sober as a judge, as wild as a bear with a sore head, as sweet as sugar as round as a barrel, as sour as vinegar, as thin as a rail, and as pleased as a pupl

Some Good Ironing Tricks

Nancy's laundress was ill, which left her with a whole flock of Susan's dresses to be ironed. It was was some time since she had spent more than a few moments at an ironing board. She did some experimenting and found that she could iron the gathers in the skirts quite easily if she kept the heat of the iron low and then wiggled or worked the iron slowly back and forth as she pointed it toward the waist band. The wiggling motion keeps the iron from pressing down definite lines. Zipper fastenings need care, she found. She had best results when she closed the zipper and then pressed the packet as flat as possible. She worked the iron upward, nose first but was careful not to let the iron go onto the zipper itself. Unless the side or basic zipper is ironed dry, however, it will wrinkle and look messy.

She tried ironing the pockets on one dress by pressing them on the right side first. But that did not work well. For the next dress she turned it wrong side out flattened and straightened the pocket under the top part and ironed back and forth slowly until the material was practically dry. Then she turned the dress to the right side and finished the drying, paying particular attention to the seams or cording — that part that was heavier and did not dry so well. She found she had not dampened the clothes as well as she should. First thing she knew she saw little wrinkled patches that were to dry when pressed with the iron. She tried pressing again after laying a damp cloth over the dry spot, but usually the material of the dress bunched up somewhere under the damp cloth and she found herself ironing wrinkles right in. She finally stopped and dampened the clothes over again. Then she knew she had to let them stand for a short time to even the moisture throughout.

While the dresses were rolled and waiting. She attacked the handerchiefs. She straightened a whole pile before she began to iron, ironing the top one and then working her way down, handkerchief by handkerchief But she decided that was too much work. It went faster when she pressed a handkerchief flat, ironed it on all four sides and then across the middle. She folded it, ironing in each crease. By working fast, she discovered she could do two handkerchiefs in a minute. Sometimes three if there were no tricky embroideries or trimming.

After the handkerchiefs were done, she did the dish towels. The bath towels were not ironed but given a sharp shake or two and then folded and put away. And now she was back at Susan's dresses. She was glad that none of them had pleats, because these take time even when the edges of the pleats have been stitched.

DUBLIN, Jan. 31 —(CP) —Eire may find herself obliged to fight for liberty, Sean Lemass, Minister of Supplies, said tonight.
