No child should be allowed to suffer an hour from worms when prompt relief can be given in a simple but strong remedy—Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator.

A SUITOR TOO MANY MILDRED BARBOUR

"... If there's a man at Dorothy's studio, he's somebody you know and want to see... Jealousy was burning now in Herbert's eyes."

CHAPTER 6 THE GUILTY CONSCIENCE

"That the door of Lila's dressing-room happened to be ajar as she talked over the telephone to Dorothy, and that Herbert happened to be passing through the hall at that moment, was one of those maddening coincidences that occur in real life with even more devastating surety than in fiction."

He had paused at the door, arrested by a lover-like impulse to kiss Lila before going to his dressing-room. They were dining out, and he had just come from his office, with only time enough to change—to be late for an appointment with the second of the Seven Deadly Sins—but his infatuation for Lila was strong enough to make him risk it.

With his hand outstretched to open the door wide, he heard Lila's voice: "Dot, you frighten me! What is it? What has happened?"

And, a moment later, with a hint of panic in her voice: "What man? ... I don't ... No, no don't tell me over the telephone, if it's—it's ... Yes, I'll come at once ... At once, Dot!"

Herbert saw her hang up the receiver. He saw also that her hand was shaking. And then he spoke sternly: "What man?"

"Darling, I didn't hear you come in," she hurried to him, her slim arms outstretched. He kissed her rather coldly, held her at arm's length, and searched her face with his candid gaze.

"What were you saying to Dorothy?" The necessity for a quick fix nearly made her dizzy. "Oh—she wants me to come to her at once. She—she's in some sort of trouble—"

"You said you were frightened," he reminded her sternly. "Yes, yes—for her," insisted Lila feverishly. "You mentioned a man. What man?"

"I wish I knew!" thought Lila desperately. Aloud, she said hastily: "That's just it. It's a—er—a man who's bothering Dot, pursuing her, you know. She—she can't get rid of him. You know what I mean, she ended lamely.

Herbert's eyes were stern. A flicker of jealous suspicion had lit in them. "I know of no one more capable of taking care of herself than Dorothy Caine. It strikes me that she could handle any man pretty well."

"Not this one," insisted Lila desperately. "I've got to go to her, Herbert. Really, I must, darling. I promised."

Herbert took out his watch deliberately. "In half an hour we're due to go for dinner. You know I can't tolerate tardiness. You haven't time to go to Dorothy."

"Oh, but I have. I'm nearly dressed, you see. All but my gown. I'll simply throw it on and rush uptown and be back here again before you're ready yourself."

Herbert studied her face deliberately, noting her suddenly flushed cheeks, her averted eyes. "I will go with you," he announced. "Panic seized Lila, she clug to a semblance of outward calm. "No, no, darling. It isn't at all necessary. I can make it so much quicker—"

Mt. Stewart Notes

Mrs. E. Duff and children, Douglas and Dorothy, Somerville, Mass., are spending some time with relatives and friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Jardine, Somerville, are spending some time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Jay and Mr. Albert Jardine.

Strawberries now ripening, and this the vacation season. You can guess the rest, or to quote H. W. Longfellow, "With thy red lips, redder still, kissed by strawberries on the hill."

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Stahl, Boston, Mass., arrived Saturday to spend a holiday at Mrs. Stahl's former home here.

Their many friends will be glad to learn that Mrs. Lawson Douglas, who has been ill, and Miss Bessie Jardine, who underwent an operation at the P. E. I. Hospital, have both returned to their homes at Head of Hillsborough, much improved in health.

Mr. Fred Leard, our expert electrician, has just completed installing an electric motor in the workshop of Mr. Edwin Clark, who finds it very convenient for running his emery wheel, small saws, etc.

Dr. James Walsh purchased a new Chrysler '32 last week, and the doctor knows a good car, believe me!

Now with the farmers' season gone for potato-hillers, planters, etc., has come the season for sprayers, scuffers, etc., a number of which have been sold to the different farmers by E. P. Clark, agent for the Massey-Harris Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Jay, Borden, spent Sunday at his former home here.

Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Clark, Brighton, were among the motorists to Mount Stewart Monday.

Mr. R. C. Clark, agent, received a shipment of Chryslers Monday.

"It's an ill wind—" The ice-cream parlors are certainly reaping a harvest this warm weather.

On Sunday evening, July 8th, while Mr. Melvin Jardine and his sister, Miss Emmeline, were driving home towards Mt. Stewart to Head of Hillsboro, a vicious dog ran at the horse, frightening him so badly that he smashed the harness, broke the shafts and badly damaged the carriage. Luckily both occupants escaped uninjured.

With her face buried in her hands, she wept convincingly. They were the first tears that Herbert had ever seen her shed. They terrified him. He was routed. He asked her pardon, dragging her hands from her face and kissing away the drops that lingered on her long lashes.

Lila seized her advantage instantly. "I'll forgive you," she promised prettily, "if you prove you trust me by letting me go to Dot—alone. Anyway," she played another trump, "we couldn't make it together and be in time for dinner. So just let me run—"

In the car—fortunately it had not been returned to the garage after bringing Herbert from downtown—Lila tried to gather her thoughts. Now that she was alone, terror took possession of her. She shivered in her furs; her hands were clammy.

But terror of what? she asked herself. At Dorothy's studio, a man was waiting to see her. She told herself that she was being an idiot to let that simple face demoralize her. But who was the man? Farquhar was dead and buried. But intuition told her that some phantom from the past had risen and was waiting for her behind the bronze-green door of Dorothy's office.

MT. HERBERT SCHOOL

At the conclusion of the examination a short program consisting of a reading by Marian Mutch and a short play entitled, "The Society for the Suppression of Slang" was rendered by the pupils.

Prizes were then presented to the following pupils for general proficiency: Grade VIII Elma Jenkins. Grade VI Marian Rayner. Grade V Luella Wilson. Grade IV Doris Wood and Russell Farquharson (equal). Grade III Ralph Rayner. Grade I George Jenkins. Public School Certificates: Edna Jenkins, Marian Mutch, Harvey Jenkins, Spurgeon Jenkins.

The singing of the National Anthem brought a very pleasant afternoon to a close.

HEAVIER APPLE CROP EXPECTED IN CANADA

(By WILLIAM MARCHINGTON) (Staff Correspondent of The Globe) OTTAWA, July 9.—British Columbia apple growers estimate an apple crop in excess of last year. In spite of adverse weather conditions, Ontario is also expecting a heavier crop. A 50 per cent. increase is anticipated in Quebec. New Brunswick expects a heavier crop, while with favorable conditions Nova Scotia looks forward to a 10 per cent. increase. Last year the apple crop amounted to 2,810,800 barrels, valued at $10,411,035.

These estimates are based on reports received by the Dominion Fruit Commissioner. ALEXANDRA SCHOOL MEETING The Alexandra School meeting voted $150.00 as a supplement to teacher's salary, and $170.00 for pairing and running expenses. The board of trustees are Alphonse McKinnon, Seymour McLennan and Gay Judson. The trustees have engaged Amy Smith of Fownall to teach the ensuing year. Layton McCabe, Secy.
