Every Canadian Has a "Stake" in Export Trade

It Affects Earnings and Employment

WHETHER they realize it or not, practically every person in Canada is affected by the trend of Canada's export trade.

Canada's farms, forests, mines, fisheries and factories can produce far more than we at home can consume. Our problem is to find markets for this surplus production. On our success in doing so depends the livelihood of one-half or more of our population.

How Markets Are Found

To aid in finding markets outside of Canada, the Federal Department of Trade and Commerce maintains 34 trade commissioners in strategic centres of the world. Their task is to investigate export markets, to find opportunities for new or increased business in Canadian products. They are located in the world's great commercial centres where they can work to the best advantage on behalf of Canadian exporters.

Advertising Campaigns

The Department of Trade and Commerce is sponsoring extensive advertising and merchandising campaigns to promote the sale of Canadian wheat, bacon, butter, cheese, eggs, apples and manufactured products in the British market. It is important that the merits of Canadian products be made known not merely to British importers but to the public who consume them, if we are to increase our trade in this highly competitive market.

Empire and International Exhibitions are also widely used to bring Canadian products to the attention of importers and consumers.

Statistics The Background of Business

The Canadian Bureau of Statistics, a division of The Department of Trade and Commerce, is constantly collecting and tabulating statistics and preparing reports on Canada's domestic and foreign trade. These reports present the true background of Canadian business without which there would be no reliable guide for planning private business and governmental operations. Every day the officials of the Department of Trade and Commerce at home and abroad are working to extend both domestic and export trade so that Canada may be more prosperous and more workers employed.

Exporters Invited To Write

With a population of only eleven million people, Canada stands fourth among the nations in export trade. More than a billion dollars worth of products were exported last year, or four million dollars worth a day. It is vital to Canada's welfare to maintain this position and to increase exports where possible. The more products we sell abroad the more work for those who grow them and make them. Exporters are invited to write the Department for information as to the possibilities of finding markets for their products in other lands.
