

WHO ARE YOU?
The Romance of Your Name
By RUBY HASKINS ELLIS

The derivation of this name is supposed to have come from one of two sources. Either the Gaelic word, meaning "the pet," or from the German meaning "godfather."

The name as a surname appears first in the West of England on the border of Wales. The family is found later in Cheshire and Shropshire, both counties bordering on Wales. Both of these families used practically the same armorial bearings. The three golden crescents commemorated some exploit against the Crescent (the sign of the Turks) in the period of the Crusades.

Among some of the remote persons of this name was the Reverend John Dodd, a distinguished clergyman of Cheshire, about 1549. He had sixteen brothers and sisters and twelve children, which are sufficient to account for a numerous race of Dodds both in the British Isles and in America.

It is also very interesting to note that one of the descendants of the Dodds family, seated in County always appear in print. But I am happy to help you with your problems and I think that every young man

BEAUTY QUESTIONS ANSWERED
SOS From the Sterntr Sex

Dear Miss Leeds—Perhaps you will think that I am butting in when you read this letter from one of the opposite sex. But I read your beauty column and find it so interesting. Would you answer one of two personal questions for me? I feel sure that a great many men enjoy your talks but are afraid of writing to you, so here goes. (1) My hair is becoming very thin and it is dry and falls out. I am not old and I would like to save my hair, as I do not want to join the bald heads so early in life. What would you suggest? (2) Another problem that bothers me is my skin. I am rather dark complexioned, but my skin is rather sallow looking at times and it seems very sensitive, especially after shaving. Could you suggest some cream or lotion that I may use regularly?

DAVID L.
Answer—No, indeed, David, I do not think that you are "butting in." I receive a great many letters from readers of the sterner sex," but they usually inclose a self-addressed, stamped, envelop and so their problems do not

What a Dreary Old Age Self-Centered People Are Laying Up for Themselves!—The Lady-Killer—Why Do Women Cherish Little Attentions in Marriage?

Dear Miss Leeds—We have two friends, maiden ladies nearly 70, but strong and healthy and exceedingly well-to-do financially. They have a beautiful home and plenty of money, but for all of that they are grifters. They never do anything for any one else, but they expect every one to do for them, and are always putting you in a position where you have to do favors for them. Ever summer when it nears vacation time they begin sounding out their friends to find out who is going to have a summer cottage so they can get a vacation without board. That is just an example of how selfish they are. Don't you think that instead of asking so much from other people they should occasionally, at least, do some nice things for others? MR. AND MRS. R.

Answer:
Selfishness should be met with selfishness. The friends of these miserly old ladies should be just as selfish as they are and refuse to be victimized by them. There is no merit in suffering yourself to be held up and robbed.

Rather it is weakness and cowardice to submit to it. There is no virtue in giving free board in your summer cottage to rich old women who force themselves upon you as uninvited guests, but it would be a fine and benevolent thing to give two poor women, who cannot afford to go to a hotel or boarding house, a vacation in the country.

But what a sad old age these stingy sisters are preparing for themselves! For our old age is the harvest time in which we reap what we have been sowing during our whole lifetime, and if we have failed to scatter seeds of kindness, if we have implanted in the hearts of others no love nor gratitude, the sheaves that we gather in are bound to be so few and meager that we shall spend our last days starved for affection and companionship.

If we had no natural impulse toward kindness, if no well of sympathy budded up spontaneously in our hearts it would still pay us to be good and helpful and generous and sympathetic to our fellow creatures in our youth for the dividends that we would collect on it in age. Because age is forlorn at best, and it is an almost unendurable curse if we must bear it alone without love and companionship.

Everybody from Poor Richard down has impressed upon us the necessity of laying up money for our old age. It is just as necessary to lay up affection for our latter days as it is to provide ourselves with a bank account, and we can only do that by investing in the hearts of those about us.

We must live for others instead of ourselves. We must give, not only money, but ourselves. We must give our interest. We must give our sympathy, our help. We must weep with those who weep and rejoice with those who rejoice. We must take new-born babies into our arms and fold quiet hands on the still breasts of the dead. We must whisper words of hope and encouragement and forget secrets that have been told us.

And those who do this get their reward in age. It comes back to them a thousandfold. They are loved and cherished. Doors are open to them. Hands stretched out to them. They are never lonely nor forlorn.

But those who have lived a selfish and self-centered life, who have never gone out of their way to do a kindness, who have never given a dollar to one in need, who have never troubled themselves to write a word of congratulation or of sympathy, who have never sacrificed themselves for another, are left to their own dreary company when they are old. These are the old people who claim that they have no friends and that everybody has forgotten them. It is true. They have no friends because they deserve none.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a middle-aged woman and I have been married half my life. Recently because of a misfortune to my husband I have gone to work to try to help out. A few months ago a young chap was taken on by my firm and I treated him just as I did all the other men, friendly and cordial but to my amazement I find that the poor boob thinks he is such a woman killer that nothing female can resist him. I overheard him talking about an old woman being crazy about him and I found out that it was I. Isn't it enough to make a woman of my age rage to have a young cub who would bore me to tears in five minutes, imagine a thing like that just because I am friendly and don't go about as if I had had pickles for breakfast?

S. B. A.

Answer:
I don't wonder that you are disgusted, but console yourself with the reflection that it doesn't hurt you, and what a whale of a kick he is getting out of it.

Also forgive him because of his youth and unsophistication, because it is only while a man is in the silly stage that he believes himself a lady killer and that no woman, and especially no middle-aged woman, could fail to fall for him. Some men never get over this and to their dying day they hold to the theory that every woman and especially every widow, is just jining to marry them.

When your young cub has had some half-dozen girls turn him down good and hard, it will shake some of his conceit out of him, but in the meantime I don't blame you for wishing that you could turn him across your knee and spank him.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—The boy I am going to marry is very good and kind and generous to me, but he never shows me any of the little attentions that women love. He has never brought me a flower or a box of candy, or remembered an anniversary, and it is the little things that count with women, don't you think?

BELLE.

Answer:
I think little things count much with women. They put entirely too much stress on small attentions. It is silly to make the fetish they do of anniversaries.

Of course, it is nice and romantic to have your sweetheart or your husband always remember your little fads and fancies and send you flowers on the anniversary of the day you first met and the day he popped the question and the day you got engaged and your wedding anniversary and your birthday and so on. Probably there isn't a woman living who doesn't get a thrill out of having the man she loves send her violets because they are the color of the dress she is going to wear, or orchids because she wore them the first time he ever saw her.

But after all these are just the meringue on the lemon pie of life. They are not the real thing. A man can say it with other things just as well as flowers and a beefsteak is just as much a token of affection as a box of chocolates.

Yet I have know women married to fine, domestic men who were good providers, who made themselves perfectly miserable because their husbands always had to be reminded about their wedding anniversaries and their birthdays and gave them checks instead of some misfit present they had picked out on Christmas.

Don't be silly about little attentions. Try to see them in their true perspective. The big thing in marriage is everyday living. Getting a man who is good and kind and generous and who supports you in comfort. If you have enough common sense to look at the matter fairly you will see that it doesn't make much difference whether the man who pays your bills without a murmur sends you flowers or brings you candy or not.

"When a girl is fascinating," says dainty Alice White, whose vibrant charm carried her so swiftly to stardom on the screen, "you may be sure of one thing. Her skin is lovely!"

"Beautiful skin always attracts. It is certainly the most important charm any girl can have."

"In Hollywood, you know, the directors all found out long ago that if a girl is to win millions of admirers on the screen, her skin must have that peach-bloom smoothness that is so ravishing."

"The glaring close-up lights would reveal even the slightest imperfection in the skin. And so, of course, every star in Hollywood guards her complexion most carefully."

"So when I say we use Lux Toilet Soap—almost all of us—you may be sure we think it is a splendid soap."

Such soothing lather, and it leaves the skin so exquisitely smooth and soft.

"It is such a simple way to keep the skin lovely! Any girl can follow it, with the same good results."

Women are turning to Modess for comfort

Gracious softness, a yielding pliancy, rounded sides which cannot irritate, greater absorbency—these refinements assure greater comfort.

Trained nurses in our employ have interviewed thousands of women. Practically without exception, women who have used Modess tell these nurses that they prefer it because of its greater comfort and efficiency.

We have discovered that the saleswomen in the stores carrying it almost invariably prefer Modess for their own use. This fact alone has influenced many customers to try Modess.

These few simple proofs that every woman who tries Modess is impressed by its fineness will, we hope, encourage you to test it yourself. Buy one box of Modess. We will be surprised if you are not convinced that it is far superior to the kind you have been using.
