Inter-Church Missionary Conferences

Under the auspices of the Canadian Overseas Missionary Conference, consisting of representatives of the Anglican, Baptist, Presbyterian and United Church bodies in Canada, a series of Inter-Church Missionary Conferences is being planned for the Maritime Provinces this Fall. The conference in Charlottetown is planned for Oct. 27-28.

Rev. H. C. Priest, secretary of the Missionary Conference, has set up a local committee to open arrangements. The committee comprises Rev. G. C. Webster, chairman, Rev. I. J. Levy, secretary, Rev. T. E. McLennan, and Rev. J. T. Ibbott. This committee met yesterday and made preliminary arrangements. A larger committee consisting of representatives of all City congregations, will be set up in the near future.

It is anticipated that Rev. H. C. Priest will visit Charlottetown shortly to meet the local committee and complete arrangements for the conference.

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

But for many women that is not enough. They want the luxuries, but they also want to be flattered and cajoled. They want their husbands to call them "little girls" after they are grandmas and never cease telling them how beautiful and wonderful they are. There is nothing they resent so much as their husbands taking them for granted. Yet, in reality, it is the greatest compliment that a man can pay his wife. For it shows that he thinks she is just all right in every way and there is no need of any comments.

However, marvel as we may over wives' desire to be called pet names, it is equally strange why husbands, who are bound to be aware of this curious feminine trait, do not gratify it. If Friend Wife yearns to be called Sweetums instead of Mary Jane, why, in heaven's name, haven't husbands the gumption to do it? When they know that their wives are hungering and thirsting to be told that they are the only woman in the world to them, why don't husbands take the trouble to tell them so in words, instead of expecting them to be mind-readers and know how they feel about them?

It would solve practically all of men's domestic problems in the easiest and cheapest way. For words cost far less than mink coats, and the husband who keeps his wife buttered up with verbal assurances of his affection doesn't have to prove it with checks.

But whether the wife who pines to be called pet names, or the husband who won't "darling" her, is the more stupid, is anybody's guess.

Ellen's Diary

By an Island Farmer's Wife

every one else in the house for I want my sleep — if you can do without yours. Of course" he added in an afterthought and in a rather insinuating manner "I don't get many afternoon sleeps." James in the house across the lane, legs crossed and arms mostly folded, rocking gently and pipe-smoke billowing was never I venture to say brighter eyed nor engaged in a more interesting nor sprightly conversation.

Due to any number of things I am not a regular attendant at our Aid meetings. Sometimes the least excuse serves to detain me at home and then again I am not aware of the impulse that prompts my certain going. It may be that I enjoy so well the brief worship period in quiet country parlors which preceded our social hour. Or it may be that it is the thought of the latter which alone has the power to draw. At any rate there are times when I find it most pleasant to leave my "affairs of state" and come away to find relaxation and inspiration in attending the Church Aid. My lot was not at all tedious today, neither were my duties heavy. The men left their harvesting at Rob's and went again to haul more bedding straw. It has been fetched in such quantities recently that James himself "is darned if I know where we'll put our own when we thresh —or if, supposing we cut down on pigs and cattle, we'll have much need for it at all." However, last loads for the day were brought here and to Rob's at dusk. I hailed and farewelled the men and teams at the end of the lane when I came there (breathless, I confess) to go with Mr. and Mrs. A. to our gathering. Jock was not always with the others. He had been busy about stables and piggery. A new son had been born to Mary, Jeanie's Jersey and if Jeanie may have been a little disappointed in his sex Mary herself was obviously exceedingly proud and contented. She bestowed warm caresses on the young creature, that stood on uncertain legs beside her, and she glared at the Tabby cat suspiciously when she chanced to prowl to that corner of the stable when Jeanie and I were at the evening milking. "That kind" Jamie informed me in a James-like way "Us always grows them up awhile, then put them up to the other farm an' then—do you know what us does with them then?" I did but I always like Jamie to complete his stories. "Us sells them to a butcher — an' away they go in a truck! Will Aunt Jeanie sell this one to a butcher?" In his everlasting groping for the great store of learning that must come to young ones in their earlier years, Jamie is bound to end his narrating with a question but then as I tell the other members of the family "how else can he learn?"

* * *

Jamie had come in the afternoon with his mother. She was lending an expert hand to help Jeanie at her preserving of peaches, which chore pleasing as it is occupied them during the afternoon. There were interruptions. Small girl begged at times to be taken up and more than one agent called there at inconvenient times. However before I came away in the dusk Karolyn had pointed towards the pretty "fruits of their labors" to tell me in a relieved voice: "We're done!" Day was edging into night at the time. I could hardly make out the hollyhocks by the pickets and the clump of golden glow which nods so sunnily by day was only a brighter shade than the rest of the flowers in the border, as I went down along the lane. And now the visiting car has gone down the driveway homing and James has entered the kitchen. The old clock ticks a warning. "Dear me, Ellen" James says, stooping to loosen his boot laces "Doesn't that Aid keep up 'till all hours?"

Until tomorrow — Diary — Goodnight.

A Final Tribute to the Late John Dalziel

The death of John Dalziel occurred at his home at 53 Victoria Avenue, on August 4th, at the age of 69 years. Although ailing in health for the past months his death came as a great shock to all who knew and associated with him. He will be greatly missed in the home and by his many friends and neighbours as he was always ready and willing to help in time of sickness or need.

He was an employee of the Maritime Electric plant for the past forty years. He was attended during his illness by Officers in charge and members of the Salvation Army of which he was a member. He was a life-long citizen of Charlottetown.

He was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Dalziel who predeceased him some time ago.

The funeral was held from his late residence on Tuesday afternoon at 1.30 P. M. The large number which gathered was a splendid tribute and token of the high esteem in which he was held by all who knew him. The service was conducted by Major and Mrs. G. V. McLean of the Salvation Army of which he was a member; prayer was offered by Major M. Wheeler of the Sunset Lodge, two of his favorite hymns were sung, "O Boundless Salvation" and "Precious Promise." The service was conducted at the grave by Major and Mrs. G. V. McLean, the hymn sung was "My Jesus I Love Thee."

The pall bearers were: Peter Connolly, James Connolly, George Bell, John Conway, Dave Carr, James Hughes.

He is survived by his sorrowing widow, two sons, Edward and Fred and four daughters Bessie (Mrs. Neill Beaton); Fanny (Mrs. Harry Carr); Lily (Mrs. Nathan Young); Ida (Mrs. Jack Bradley) and seventeen grandchildren — two brothers William, Robert, of Charlottetown.

The following floral tributes were received:

Fill up the Cream Pitcher for only a few cents...

DO you like to "cream" your coffee richly? And your breakfast cereal or fruit—your pudding or other dessert at dinner? Then learn about Carnation Milk. For Carnation is ready for the cream pitcher, just as it pours from the can. Creamy color, creamy taste, and a world of creamy smoothness!

Undiluted Carnation is good, whole milk, doubled in food value by the evaporation of part of its natural water. It's homogenized to give it that unseparable smoothness, sterilized to make it keep indefinitely in the unopened can, and irradiated to make it an excellent source of vitamin D.

You'll find Carnation a grand milk for all uses—including the cream pitcher.

MRS. WILLIAM PYE

At her home in Cape Traverse, on Saturday, August 3rd, there passed to her rest, Mrs. William Pye, in her sixty-ninth year.

The late Mrs. Pye was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Crossman of Little Shemogue, N.B., and was twice married. She was first married to George Irving of Cape Traverse. To this marriage there were two sons Dewey and Frank, and one daughter Lyla, Mrs. Ernest Hazard, all predeceased her. In her second marriage, besides a sorrowing husband, she leaves one son, Wilfred of North Dartmouth, Mass.

The funeral which was largely attended was held on Monday, August 5th from the Cape Traverse Church of Scotland, which followed a short service at the late home. Interment was in the church cemetery. Services were conducted by Rev. J. H. Bishop.

The pallbearers were Hazard Gardener, Walter Ford, Fred Trenholm, Chas. Crossman, Arthur Campbell and Leeman McWilliams.

Card Of Thanks

William Pye wishes to thank all kind friends for their many deeds of kindness in his recent sad bereavement, especially the Doctor for his many acts of kindness.

MRS. JOHN J. McKINNON

The death occurred at her home New Annan, on August 29th of Mrs. John J. McKinnon, leaving a sorrowing husband and one daughter Bertha, who tenderly cared for her mother during her long and painful illness. The deceased was a most estimable lady of quiet and reserved disposition. About six months ago she was taken ill and for the past month was unable to leave her bed, but despite the best medical attention and loving care she passed peacefully away. She bore the burden of her painful disease with that Christian fortitude that is attained by an exemplary moral life. She was frequently visited by her Pastor, Rev. R. F. MacDonald who administered to her last rites of Holy Mother Church.

She was a daughter of the late Daniel and Mrs. McInnis of Centerville, Bedeque, and was born there seventy-nine years ago. Also surviving are three brothers, Ambrose of Summerside; John, New Annan and Joseph of Franklin, Mass., who came to visit her in August and remained for two weeks. Three brothers and a sister predeceased her.

Funeral took place to St Mary's Church, Indian River, on August 30th and was largely attended. Pall bearers were Alonzo Cameron, Allie McNeill, Joseph Cameron, Charles and James McInnis and John Evans. Many Mass Cards and Spiritual Bouquets were received testifying the high esteem in which deceased was held.

Card of Thanks

John J. McKinnon and family wish to thank all friends and neighbours for any kindness shown them during illness and death of Mrs. McKinnon.
