The Jere McAuliffe Company opened their season in Charlottetown Opera House last evening with liberal patronage. The play Between Love and Duty, better known as The Rebel, is laid in the south during the war of the rebellion in a home where various members from a sense of duty take opposing sides. The serious conflict of love and duty is enlivened by a strain of comedy. The play was well staged and played to the apparent satisfaction of all present who gave frequent and hearty applause. Between acts a number of specialties were brought on, and Jere himself was encored times without number as he sang his latest scene, introducing local hits, among which was the Ward Two election, the North River Bridge, the post office repairs &c. The Belle of Richmond is announced for tonight and will no doubt prove an attractive bill in the hands of this capable company.

By telephone from Murray Harbor North last night The Guardian learns that no trace has yet been found of Archibald Dunn who was supposed to have been drowned Saturday afternoon. The unfortunate man went out alone with a moderate breeze about three o'clock to set traps and three hours later the boat was found drifting about empty by James Condon. As searching party at once went out to grapple for the boat but the only thing to be seen was four traps near where he had been working. No boat was near at the time and it is not definitely known how the accident occurred though it is supposed he may have been pulled from the boat as the life was running out. He was about 25 years of age, son of the late Matthew Dunn, and leaves a mother, four brothers and three sisters. The young man had for some time been in the tailoring business with Gavin McClure, Murray Harbor North.

Mr. Mathieson spoke in support of the amendment. After speaking for some time he moved the adjournment of the debate at 1.20 this morning. This motion was defeated on a party vote 13 to 9. Capt. Read as Chairman of the Committee of Public Accounts condemned the Opposition members of the committee for not asking that the committee be called and Mr. McLean replied, maintaining it was the duty of the chairman to summon the committee.
