THE death took place yesterday afternoon after an illness extending over several years of Thomas Casely, an old and respected citizen and for many years a familiar figure in Charlottetown. The deceased has in earlier life been engaged successfully in the coal business but retired some eight or ten years ago and since then has been living quietly at his home on the corner of Weymouth and Sydney Streets. The late Mr. Casely during his business life had much of the choice real estate of the city, including many government contracts and earned an enviable name for honorable dealing and business integrity. He leaves to mourn a wife who it is regrettable to learn is in very poor health.

Friends of The Guardian are again asked to have all their advertising matter whether of entertainments, lectures, concerts, or of a general nature, in this Office not later than 4 p. m. and of any considerable length much earlier, as it is impossible to give all the news of the day if advertising has to be handled at night, for every line of the latter prevents the appearance of the same quantity of news. For the issue of the 13th one third of a column of such advertising was set up in type at night, and readers were thus deprived of the same quantity of late news. This, of course, makes The Guardian less valuable to readers and correspondingly so to advertisers, and in future only emergency advertising will be accepted at night. Friends are asked to hand in all their advertising as early as possible each day.
