One Dead In Ontario Fire

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)
MILLE ROCHES, Ont., Jan. 2.—Fire starting early today in the confectionery store of Ernest Lank, 44, took Lank's life, destroyed three buildings, made a score homeless and caused loss estimated at $35,000 in this eastern Ontario village, five miles west of Cornwall.

In the frame buildings destroyed were two grocery stores, a tinmith shop, a restaurant, a Penitential assembly hall, the confectionery store, and five apartments. The adjoining store and residence of Percy Johnston were damaged and lesser damage done to other nearby buildings.

How the fire started was not known, but it spread so quickly that several were forced to the street in their night attire and a few of the score evicted by flames had time to save any possessions. Among those homeless, sheltered tonight by villagers, was Rev. David Goss, Penitential minister.

Looking Forward To Royal Visit

(Canadian Press)
Prince Edward Islanders are looking forward with pleasure to the visit in the near future of King George and Queen Elizabeth. But to 72-year-old John Duffy, who has been butler at Government House here for more than half a century, the event will have a special significance—for John has met King George before.

In 1913 H. M. S. Cumberland dropped anchor in Charlottetown harbor and King George then Prince Albert, was aboard. A reception was held in his honor and John Duffy was the butler in attendance.

"Of course, Prince Albert was a mere stripling when he was here before the war," Mr. Duffy, reminiscences, "but he held up his end at the speech-making. He was a nice lad. I'm anxious to see him now that he's King."

John Duffy, genial and silver-tongued, had had an interesting career. In 1897 he started at his one and only job which he has held ever since, serving 11 Lieutenant-Governors at the white mansion in a birch grove on the outskirts of Charlottetown. He was recognized of his long service at the time of the Silver Jubilee of King George V in 1935.

Light-footed and with a figure as straight as the "shortest distance between two points," John's appearance belies his years. He has never considered retiring. "Quit?" he exclaimed, "why I'm too busy to think about it."

John has served many famous people who have visited Government House. But of them all he'd rather see Prince Albert again, "now that he's King."

Spent 20 Years In America

Sir Charles who received his knighthood in 1921, was born in England and came to this country, in 1901, at the age of 10. He entered advertising as a young man and rose to the post of advertising director of Frederick Loesser & Co. in Brooklyn, and then became controller manager for the Calkins & Holden agency.

At the age of 30, having obtained a thorough training in newspaper advertising, he returned to England to become the principal exponent there of American advertising methods which he had become convinced were the best in the world.

Busy Program King Issues New Year's Honor List

May 31, and leaving at once for the east.

Eastward Journey
On the eastward journey brief stops will be made at New Westminster and Chilliwack, and a full day will be spent at Jasper Park which they will leave the morning of June 2, spending the afternoon and evening in Edmonton.

There will be a two-hour stop at Saskatoon, June 3, and brief stops at Melville, Winnipeg, Sioux Lookout, Armstrong, and Long Lac. Their Majesties will motor from Sudbury Junction to Sudbury on the evening of June 5 and will rest the following morning in the Muskoka Lakes district, then continue via Bracebridge with short stops at Guelph, Kitchener and Stratford to London for an hour's stay, June 7.

The same day there will be stops at Hamilton and St. Catharines and their Majesties will cross the boundary at Niagara Falls that evening.

Returning from the United States Their Majesties will cross the boundary near Montreal and go direct to Sherbrooke, June 12 for a half hour stop, then proceed with brief stops at Levis and Riviere du Loup to Moncton, N. B. reaching that city the morning of June 13.

From Moncton the Royal Party will motor to a business and Saint John and join their train for the trip to Charlottetown which will be reached at noon, June 14.

Return from the Island will be by boat from Charlottetown to Pictou, reaching the Nova Scotia town the evening of June 14. Their Majesties will motor at once from Pictou to New Glasgow to rejoin the train, then to Halifax which will be reached next morning, the last day of the Canadian tour.

The King and Queen will sail from Halifax at six o'clock the evening of June 15. No mention was made in the itinerary of a visit to Newfoundland on June 17, announced in the program today by Sir Humphrey Walwyn, the governor.

"It will be seen," said the Prime Minister in announcing the itinerary tonight, "that their Majesties' visits to the different localities will, in reality, constitute a royal tour from east to west and west to east across the entire Dominion."

"To ensure that the Royal train will pass through different parts of Canada, and the localities en route by day places of necessity, as well as to ensure more complete intervals of rest on the long journey, Their Majesties have expressed the desire that travel by night should be avoided as much as possible. This wish, it will be observed, has been kept in mind in the arrangement of the itinerary, as well as the obvious necessity of providing for Their Majesties' brief intervals for recreation as well as rest.

"Travel being for the most part by day places of necessity, restrictions upon the length of Their Majesties' stay in any one locality, in arranging the time to be allotted to different places, and the government will endeavor to keep in mind the strenuous nature of the many public processions in the different cities of the Dominion, other public appearances on the itinerary, and Their Majesties' four days' visit to the United States, the whole being embraced in the allotted period of one month, and in addition ocean voyages, and from Canada, across the Atlantic."

At least two and possibly three special trains will carry the Royal couple and their retinue with the press and officials who will accompany Their Majesties. No details of the official party or of the various programs have been revealed.

Mr. Mackenzie King said the public functions would of necessity be kept to a minimum. It would be physically impossible for the King and Queen to accept even a small number of the many suggestions and requests for special calls which have come from all parts of the Dominion.

Left The Army With Rheumatism Now Fit to Join Again

Twenty years ago, he left the army, crippled and rheumatic. Today, he is fit and nimble—a merry, romping granddad, 61 years young.

"I came out of the army with rheumatism," he writes. "It was especially bad in my feet. I started taking Kruschen Salts, and in a few months I found relief from my rheumatism. I became nimble on my feet. Now, at 61, weighing 138—I am cheerful, energetic, and always ready to play with my grandchildren."—E.E.B.

FOUR PEERAGES

The list included four peerages, two baronetcies, 64 knighthoods and scores of lesser honors, including one to the man who wrote the invitations to the coronation and to a railway dining car porter who was associated with the centenary of the country's biggest railways.

The new barons are: Sir Frederick Arthur Greer, former Lord Justice of appeal; Sir Maurice Hankey, former secretary of the cabinet and to the committee for Imperial defence; Cecil Blisshop, Harmsworth, younger brother of the well-known publisher, the Lord Northcliffe and Lord Rothermere. Cecil Harmsworth held several positions in Britain's wartime ministry, including that of acting minister of blockade and now is treasurer of the Empire Press Union; Sir Laurence Richard Philipps, Welsh industrialist who equipped and donated to the nation a hospital for paralyzed former servicemen.

Mr. Hon. R. B. Bennett, former prime minister of Canada, who has been mentioned as a possibility for a peerage now that he has decided to take up residence in England was not on the list. He may figure in the King's birthday list, to be issued next spring.

Nothing was done to settle the status of the Duchess of Windsor. It is known the Duke of Windsor and his wife are in the style of "Her royal highness" but the King has taken no step to grant his brother's wish.

Unofficial forecasts that Prime Minister Chamberlain might accept some recognition for his aerial peace missions to Germany proved unfounded as did rumors that Anthony Eden and Viscount Bunclick might be honored in some manner.

Bertha Marie Sybert, who is harried by a spirit or something, sits in the chair that witnesses say moved backward with her when she refused to go to bed. Reason Bertha wouldn't go to bed was that her bed bounced. The case of the 9-year-old girl, who lives near Jonesville, Va., is attracting national attention. Her family claims she has slept little since bed bouncing began Nov. 16.

ONE OF 1939'S BIGGEST NEWS STORIES WILL BE VISIT OF 'TWO SIMPLE PEOPLE'

NO ROYAL POMP WILL ACCOMPANY GREAT BRITAIN'S PLAIN - LIVING RULERS TO AMERICA NEXT SPRING

BY MILTON BRONNER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Dec. 30 — A trans-Atlantic trip by two simple people will give America one of its biggest news stories of 1939. And there is pre-view of what Americans will see when that event—the visit next spring of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth—will be the most interesting of the year.

The women of America will be more interested in the clothes the Queen will wear.

Well, ladies, Her Majesty is bring about better conditions for the man who works. As Duke of York, he went to factories to learn conditions for himself. He became President of the Society for Industrial Welfare. To break down snobbery and class feeling he established a summer camp where boys from the universities and boys from the factories meet as equals. As Duke of York he camped with them. As King last summer he once more joined in their meals, their games and their song fests.

And if the President wants to talk of his other hobby—stamps—well, King George inherited from his father one of the finest collections in the world.

The women of America will be more interested in the clothes the Queen will wear.

Well, ladies, Her Majesty is

Queen Elizabeth attenas a crown function in a crinoline gown — mode she has helped to bring back in vogue.

partial to skirts and trains strewn with sparkling embroidery, sequins and paillettes. She likes off-the-shoulder lines which give a nice poise to her shapely head. She made fashionable the heart-shaped neck in her dresses and the Bertha collar. Also the sash or cape. She used to go in for pastel shades, but has more recently worn black and white ensembles. When she went to France, she took with her an all-white wardrobe which enchanted the critical Parisians.

At the most recent courts at Buckingham Palace she has helped bring crinoline back to its vogue. To make herself look taller she has picked hats with higher crowns. Her favorite jewels are diamonds and pearls. For ornamentation she also goes in for artificial flowers, taking by choice those to be found in old-fashioned English gardens.

The doughboy asked: "Who is the little guy in khaki?" His friend replied: "You big chump, that's the English King."

Exclaimed the doughboy: "The heck he is! Where's his crown?"

King George VI will not be bringing his crown along with him to America. Nor his robes of crimson velvet with train, and with ermine trimmings. Nor his sceptre. He may bring along some of his uniforms as top man in the British army, navy and air force. Or he may choose, in democratic America, to appear in simple lounge suit during the day and in conventional evening clothes at night.

In the King, Americans will see a slender, youthful-looking man of 43. He has no movie good looks. But he has a face with character in it, a countenance which crinkles up into a pleased smile when he is amused.

Queen Elizabeth is rather short and going plumpish. By any standard she would be called a pretty woman. She would be called so even if she were the wife of a London corner grocer.

Like all the members of the House of Windsor, the King is high-brow. Neither is he a low-brow. He is a genuine middle-brow. His virtues are those of the middle class—love of family, quiet evenings at home when his duties allow it, honest and assiduous attention to his job.

He will not be at a loss for subjects of animated talk with President Roosevelt. F.D.R. was Assistant Secretary of the Navy during the World War. He is a great collector of models and prints of ships. King George, like his father, did not expect to be King; and, like his father, therefore chose Britain's senior service, the navy, as a career.

As Prince Albert he was a sub-Lieutenant on a battleship when the world broke, and took his risk with ordinary seamen, serving in a gun turret in the great battle of Jutland in 1916. So as a naval man, he will be able to talk ships with Roosevelt.

The distinguishing feature of Keenly interested in social welfare work, King George VI of England, in plain dark sweater and shorts, joined in games and song fests at a summer camp where factory lads and 'varisty toffs' met as equals.
