Ellen's Diary

By an Island Farmer's Wife

experienced fishermen with jaunty creel and supple rods which cut the air lightly above the old fishin' ole angled up and down the waters to their hearts' content. Entire families spread hitches and ale in the open and the usual couples strolled leisurely along the stream. I have a notion that the peace and serenity of the surroundings would be an appreciable help to any affair du coeur today for given the setting as Jeanie quotes "in the Spring a young man's fancy" could do nothing else but "lightly turn to thoughts of love". Uniforms were (happily) missing this twenty-fourth and from our afternoon seat in the porch, neither Jeanie nor I noted any close caress between any man or maid.

It was a year ago, that Jeanie seeing a lad touch his lady-love's cheek with adoring lips, gasped "Did you ever see the like of that?—in public?" Guests at Alderlea today included a lady eighty-one years young, gowned modestly in a pretty aqua green dress and over it a short matching jacket of rose wool—an extremely dainty ensemble and one that a younger lady might envy or imitate. The team work continued—brisker today. We must take advantage of this fine weather" James said pausing only briefly at his meals. Today for the first, "golden eldoradoes" of gandelions glinted goldenly in lawn and pasture. "Grass flowers" Jeanie calls these. He came with Rob but lingered only while he visited the robin's nest in the rowan tree, ever anticipating a fourth egg. "Only three yet" he remarked, turning away. His mother busy with an in-

"Fire? Goodness, no! Since I've been serving Grape-Nuts Flakes for breakfast, my husband decided the stairs were too slow."

"Would you believe it, I've found that same thing everywhere I've called this morning—people rushing downstairs to taste that malty-rich, nut-sweet flavor of Post's Grape-Nuts Flakes."

"And you should see my family tear into the day's activities on that good nourishment Grape-Nuts Flakes give them: carbohydrates for energy; processing number of chicks; her flowers and garden; Rob's comings and goings in connection with the cropping to say nothing of Jamie's varied interests wishes "There were three or four of me" to go at the many duties incidental to the season's work about a farm-house.

It's a congenial gathering we have this evening, James has come indoors to join us and Jack and Jeanie from the house across the lane. Ann who has been making a "bus-man's holiday" since they came from the anglier, looks up from her book to help the conversation. Ellen's book too is neglected in her lap. I would say is a school book—a grammar believe, for Matriculation examination time can now be counted in days. James is speaking "It's a curious thing" he says sighing deeply and looking from one to another of the three woman-kind "but I can't understand these. He came with Rob but lingered only while he visited the robin's nest in the rowan tree, ever anticipating a fourth egg. "Only three yet" he remarked, turning away. His mother busy with an in-
