THANKSGIVING SERVICE.

An Immense Audience Present—Hundreds Turned Away—An Excellent Program Carried Out.

The Thanksgiving service in St. James' Church last night was very largely attended. In the centre aisle were the boys in khaki. The service began by the singing of the Doxology. Rev. G. P. Raymond in opening the meeting said that it was fitting that the people should assemble at a special service to render thanks to Divine Providence for a safe return. Rev. E. F. Whiston pastor of the Central Christian Church read a selection from the scriptures at the conclusion of which Rev. D. B. McLeod, pastor of Zion church offered prayer. After a selection by the choir, Rev. J. W. McConnell addressed the people. In the course of his remark he said that if he read aught the history of the world-encircling empire he was free to say that never in the world in the march of the years covered by that history have the people had greater occasion to render thanksgiving to Almighty God than at the present. We are in the closing moments or perhaps after all only in the opening moments of what in many respects is the most unique event in the annals of time. The people are altogether too near the occurrences of the past twelve months to understand their full significance but he believed that the Britons of the years to come will note these things much more closely than the people of today can. We now have abundant evidence before us that in the struggle through which we have passed the favor of Heaven has attended us and it is fitting that some expression of our sense of dependence upon God and the profound gratitude of our hearts for the manifestation of his goodness and power be given. He confessed it was no easy task to reduce to words the feelings of the heart on this occasion. He called to mind the fact that the men before him had gone to fight not for revenge, not for the acquisition of territory, not for the gold of the Rand; but to fight for the eternal principle of justice, liberty and righteousness—for equal rights between man and man, for the abolition of slavery, for lasting peace in that far off section of the world, for the unsullied glory of the English nation, not only to take their places but to hold their places beside the veterans of the Imperial army. When he thought of the task on the one hand and the return with their work completed on the other, then in was he realized the difficult task to put into words the feelings of the heart. He was sure that the people present highly appreciated the honor of meeting with the men upon their return from South Africa, the writers upon the book of Canadian and Imperial history one of the most memorable and inspiring pages. They have written history that will send a thrill calling the attention of the world to the splendid material that enters into the construction of the manhood of this, the land of the Maple Leaf and have forced other nations to recognize that the defense of England's existence, for the augmenting of England's strength, for the maintaining of England's rights, and that in the face of deadliest rifle and artillery fire were not one whit behind those trained on Scotch, Irish, or English soil. He contended that he did not believe in the survival of the church apart from the nation. God is working for the universal establishing of the church through the Empire. The grand old flag of England does not float over so much of this continent without the consent of heaven. The sturdy sons of the Island province before him had the honor of helping to place it in Africa after a perilous journey of 6,000 miles. To do the same they had faced the perils, hardships, and privations of which the people at home knew nothing. With profoundest regret and most heartfelt sympathy he was obliged to notice the absence of two of the brightest and bravest of our boys who went from our shores in October last. In a section scarcely known until lighted by the flash of cannon they went down before the enemy's fire, but they fell with their faces towards the foe, dying in defence of their country's honor. The blood of Roland Denis Taylor and Alfred Biggs shall be to the glory of this province from generation to generation. These have spirits whose mortal dust lies beneath the far distant soil seem to even now stand resplendent in the purity of their motives and the heroism of their lives. They did not die in vain, earth and heaven are richer because they are not with us as in other days. Mr. McConnell then referred to the other Canadian deaths and that by the shattering of oppression the gates of civil liberty and religious freedom has been extended to millions and so to the King Eternal, immortal, invisible, we give thanks for your return, for your successes, for all that you have accomplished, we bow in all humility and exclaim. "Not unto us, O Lord but unto thy name be all the praise, for thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory forever." The Rev. Leo Williams said that the return of our South African contingent was not only an occasion of hilarious rejoicing but of profound and sober gratitude to the Lord of Battles. In their safe return the terrible strain of anxious relatives has been relieved and in Charlottetown many an agonizing prayer will now be changed into a song of praise. As minister of the gospel and as Christians interested in the welfare of the Church Militant we are devotedly thankful that the gallant conduct and sterling manhood of the several chaplains, have brought such honor to the cloth. Frequent letters from the men have borne witness to this manly sympathy, human interest, splendid courage before the enemy combined with an unstinted devotion to the spiritual need of the men. This courageous and manly spirituality will help us to the more vividly realize that one of the noblest definitions of our calling has been defined by their noble conduct as "an unaffected manhood consecrated to the highest interests of the Empire and the individual." We see now our duty to the state. For if the Church of God sheaths the sword of battle yet in good conscience she may devote herself to the making of the soldier who wields the same in defence of the weak and on behalf of righteousness. Illustrations of how the church had in history influenced the "morals" of the British soldiers were given. If we could have gone to church with some of that English pluck and heroism which won Nelson's victory off Trafalgar, I wonder what criticism we would have passed on the sermon. Dry conventions, unemotional hammering out of our duty to God and neighbor. When upon that

YET MORE FIGHTING

Kitchener Surprises a Boer Lager. From Lord Roberts to British People.

EIGHT SMALL EIGHTS NO DRINKING ORGIES

Show Boer Activity—Their Prisoners Admit Having Large Losses. To Disgrace Home-Coming of Soldiers—Good Conduct in Africa.

BOERS PUT UP EIGHT FIGHTS. LONDON, Nov. 3.—(Special.)—Lord Roberts despatches from Johannesburg reports no less than eight fights at different points, all unimportant but it signifies the great activity of the Boers. KITCHENER SURPRISES A LAGER. Lord Kitchener, after a night's march surprised Schoeman's Lager at Steer Kampsburg and pushed on but the Boers trekked North. HEAVY BOER LOSSES. The Boer prisoners say that in the fight with Barton 25th, 140 of their force were killed, wounded or missing. eventful day off Trafalgar, amidst the smoke of battle and looking down upon the death throes of that bloody conflict, there fluttered from the masthead of Nelson's flagship "England expects every man to do his duty." The iron that had been instilled into British blood and fibre from every country and cathedral pulpit, so turned into the iron grip of courage and steely British pluck that twenty French sail had struck their flag ere the sun had set. It is also with deep thankfulness that the consciousness of the Empire recognized as essentially an ethical one. Her people are profoundly convinced that mere commercial lust and greed of Empire bringeth forth sin, and sin bringeth forth death. The national sentiment of our people would be outraged if we had suspicions for a moment that the sacred blood of our gallant dead was shed on behalf of multi-millionaires or hungry cooperations. When we come to erect the monument to their inspiring memories, without one question of accusing conscience upon it, we may inscribe—"Fallen in the sacred cause of God and their country." Rev. T. F. Fullerton in replying said it was certainly impossible for him to do adequate justice in way of reply to the flattering reception given on Friday evening and renewed this evening. It is impossible to be insensible of the hearty greeting after a return from many narrow escapes. On the morning that Biggs fell it was providential that two whole companies were not out off. It was not necessary to say that the regiment was forcibly impressed by the poisoned water which they were compelled to use. Not one man but all suffered from fever or other disease. He then referred to the passing of the Islanders across the firing zone; through shot and shell and he assured the audience present that they appreciated deliverance on that occasion. He then narrated some incidents of the battle of Johannesburg, the wily Boers setting fire to the grass in order to make a dark background so as to easily locate the boys in khaki. Notwithstanding all their precaution Canada's men went through the attack as fearlessly as the Gordon Highlanders. After the battle he and Lieut. McDonald went to represent the Canadians at the burial of the dead. It was a sight never to be forgotten, nineteen stalwart Gordons were conveyed to the trench as the bagpipes wailed lamentation and while there they thanked God that none of the number belonged to Charlottetown. None had done more valiant service on the battlefield than the quota sent from P. E. Island. On the morning of Majuba Lord Roberts was aroused by firing and upon inquiry learned that the Canadians were advancing and in reply said: "It will be alright the Canadians are advancing" then turned over and went to sleep. After the distinguished record won by the Canadians on the battlefield and on the march the men are grateful to be permitted to return in a few days the remainder of the draft will reach our shores and deserve a royal welcome as has been given those that have returned. Of their record we may well feel proud and grateful for what God has accomplished. Rev. A. D. McDonald, Montrose, also spoke expressing thanks for the safe return of the Boys. Rev. G. M. Young then offered prayer and the National Anthem brought meeting to a close. During the service Miss Florence Earle rendered a beautiful solo. The choir was composed of members of other choirs. Hundreds were unable to secure even standing room. KIDNEY DISEASE AND BACKACHE Mr. Patrick J. McLaughlan, Beaumaris, Que., States:—"I was troubled with kidney disease and dyspepsia for 20 years and have been that had I could not sleep at nights and suffered terrible agony. I tried all sorts of medicines but got no relief until I began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They made a new man of me and the old troubles seem to be driven out of my system."
