Rescued From Misery of Cruel Indigestion and Bad Nerves by Fruit-a-lives

MRS. H. D. writes: "For years I suffered knife-like pains from indigestion, was badly constipated and a nervous wreck. I decided to try Fruit-a-lives. Happenings of the Week

Little Princess Margaret Rose has attained the dignity of having a rose named after her. A creamy pink variety was among the new roses shown in the Royal Horticultural Show and the Duke and Duchess of York have allowed it to be named after their baby daughter.

While the King and Queen have been at Windsor the state departments of Buckingham Palace were thoroughly "spring-cleaned" in readiness for the courts and other functions of the London season.

Past District Deputy, after receiving a cordial welcome from all members present, Miss Clayton was called upon to address the meeting and gave an instructive talk on the aims and objects of the Order. Sister Cobb, District Deputy, then made a few remarks and presented the visitor with a very beautiful gift.

ILLUSTRATED LECTURE—Those who attended Rev. J. C. St. Clair Jean's illustrated lecture on "Merrie England" on Thursday evening in the Presbyterian Hall experienced a rare treat. The beautiful scenes depicted on the screen were very enchanting. England is particularly noted for its lovely wild flowers and pastoral scenes. The lecturer started with Dover, that lovely garrison city on the south coast, with its ancient castle and keep. Skirting London they journeyed up the Thames. Many lovely villas and gardens are to be seen from this famous river. Hampton Court palace with its lovely terraces and beautiful gardens, where grows the oldest and largest grape vine in England; also the Botanical gardens at Kew were among the show places flashed on the screen. They visited the Midlands and Shakespeare's country and then into Devonshire and Cornwall. Some very old cathedrals, including Canterbury, were shown. Quaint villages, Stonehenge and ruins of many famous castles brought historical England vividly before the audience. The seaward towns of Devon with descriptions of their maritime adventures were most interesting. Mr. Jean recited some beautiful poems dealing with some of the best known of the old mariners. Some of England's cities were shown including Bristol, Exeter and others. Miss Amanda Cannon and Mr. Lowell Hancock sang some appropriate solos, and a chorus of the young people rendered some old English songs. A vote of thanks was extended to the speaker for his delightful lecture. S.

P. J. MacDONALD "Where You Buy The Best For Less"

Pathetic (Ottawa Journal) Those New York despatches telling about the "crack detectives" that are after the Lindbergh baby murderers, plus phrases about "the most concentrated man-hunt the world has ever seen," are enough to make one scream. About the only thing these "crack detectives" have done so far is to get themselves photographed, and the widely-circulated picture of last Saturday, showing all these brilliant sleuths posing in examination of the spot where the body of the dead baby was found, was pathetic.
