THE HALIFAX HERALD SAYS:
 "With the compliments of The Charlottetown Guardian, we have received a brochure entitled 'The Golden Future,' setting forth the attractiveness of Prince Edward Island.
 "The spirit of optimism which characterizes this publicity publication is particularly commendable, and the fact that one of the provinces of Canada, in the face of a world-wide depression, is singing a song of faith and confidence, is a good indication that this Dominion has yet many things for which to be thankful.
 "Prince Edward Island, pre-eminently a farming district, has led the way in many branches of progressive farming, and also in co-operative marketing. The people are, on the whole, exceptionally contented. They invite the rest of the world to share their happiness with them. And the initiative of the Charlottetown Guardian in the publication of this strikingly illustrated little booklet is highly commendable."

One Supremely Important Task Before The World

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, former Prime Minister of Canada, tonight placed before the Goodwill Congress of the World Alliance for International Friendship, in unequivocal language, his conception of a world imperilled by war. He said, civilization must end war or war will end civilization. "War has lost its efficacy; it can only bring defeat and despair for both conquerors and conquerors."

"The policy of the governments is dominated by fear."

Must Bring About an Organization Against War

"The one supremely important task before our world today is to bring about an organization against war. Such an organization cannot be brought about without the United States. I despair of finding a substitute for armaments excepting a universal association of nations."

"The hands of force to hold in check an offender (whether an individual or a nation) is the very essence of the social contract; it is the principle by which the integrity of a nation is assured and the reign of law sustained."

The difficulties of the application of sanctions to prevent war could only be overcome, he said, by some limitation of certain attributes of sovereignty which nations had always claimed but "the truth is there is no other way in which mankind can adjust its affairs to the great new facts of this present time and make sure of survival."

Beath Claims Bro. Azarias Michael

Beloved Engineering Dean

Death Was Due to Heart Disease; Stricken in Midst of Preparation for Opening Classes

ILL OVER LONG PERIOD

Had Been Chronic Neuralgia Sufferer for Years; Proscribed Rest Falls End

On Wednesday, September 17, Brother Azarias Michael, Dean of the School of Engineering at Manhattan College, and Professor of Mathematics, died suddenly at the College. Death was due to heart disease. The deceased was in the fifty-fourth year of his age and the thirty-sixth of his religious life.

Brother Azarias, whose family name was Joseph Earl McCarville, was born in Kinkora, Prince Edward Island, on June 22, 1877. He was one of an exceedingly large family of children born to deeply religious parents. One son became a priest, another joined the order of the Brothers of the Christian Schools, and a daughter entered the convent. Under the guidance of a saintly mother, the minds and hearts of the children were early turned to things of heaven. As a boy, Joseph McCarville delighted to spend his leisure time at the parish rectory, to busy himself about the sacristy, to decorate the altars and to serve at Mass and other functions in the village church. The older residents still recall his edifying department in the sanctuary.

It is not surprising, therefore, that the heart of a youth so inclined to the things of God should lend an attentive ear to the call of the Master to come and be perfect. After having completed his elementary and high school education, he was preparing to be a teacher in the grade schools of Prince Edward Island. At that time, the late Brother Camillus who was visiting Canada, seeking postulants for the order, arrived at the parish house of Kinkora. Since a vocation to the teaching profession was already the choice of Brother Azarias, he listened attentively to the exposition of the work done by the Brothers of the Christian Schools. It made a profound impression upon him; his life appealed to him and he determined to enroll in the ranks of their Founder, Saint La Salle. He was one of a group of twenty-six Canadian youths who left home and country in July, 1894, in order to enter the religious life and to engage in the work of Christian education.

In November of that same year, 1894, at St. Joseph's Normal Institute then located at Amawalk, N. Y., he received the religious habit and the name by which he was henceforth to be known in the vineyard of the Lord. After having finished the prescribed course of that time for the religious and pedagogical formation of the young Brothers, the youthful teacher entered the classroom in old St. Mary's, lower East Side, in 1896, and later was transferred to La Salle Academy, Second Street, where he taught successfully until 1901.

Brother Azarias also labored in Syracuse and Troy, in the Christian Brothers' Academy and La Salle Institute, respectively. In 1910 he was sent to De La Salle Institute, 59th Street, New York, to take charge of the engineering courses given there at the time. In order to prepare himself for the new Engineering School to be opened at Manhattan in 1912, Brother Azarias attended Harvard University. He was then assigned to the college in charge of the Mathematics department, and continued actively engaged in teaching for the last eighteen years of his life.

Perhaps the most characteristic trait of Brother Azarias during thirty-four years of teaching was his untiring zeal and abiding interest in the welfare of his pupils. In all that time he sought neither duties nor social renown. He twice declined the presidency of Manhattan College and likewise offers of directorship, feeling that his best work could be done hidden away in the classroom, and that his special genius was in the direction and guidance of young men. In his earlier essays in class work he had been impatient and impulsive; his efforts did not always meet with an immediate response, but wider experience and mellowing years softened the asperities of temperament. The students of Manhattan came to know him as a man of unvarying equable disposition, easily approachable, penetrating and correct in his judgments, always just, yet final in his decisions. He was the embodiment of their ideal of a "square man."

It was this characteristic trait of abiding interest in young men, his unquestioned ability to deal with them during the formative years of early manhood, his clear vision of their future life-work, his knowledge of human nature and its vacillating moods in growing youth, his undeviating exactitude in causing them to measure up to his high standards, and a paternal guidance and encouragement that made him as a teacher the embodiment of our proud boast that Manhattan is the Maker of Men.

Besides winning the confidence and respect of his students, Brother Azarias also enjoyed the esteem and sincere admiration of his conferees. In religion and he was always foremost in setting the example of a generous and whole-hearted assistance in any additional services required in community life or in class.

This beneficent influence of Brother Azarias extended even beyond the community circle and made itself felt in the intellectual life of the Brothers of the New York Province. As a member of the committee directing the studies of the Brothers, his excellent judgment and sound advice did much in bringing about a uniform standard in professional improvement. In the extension department of the college and in the summer school sessions conducted for the benefit of the members of the order he was for years one of the most inspiring and indefatigable teachers.

In like manner during the ten years he acted as Dean of the School of Engineering, he was largely instrumental in increasing the scope of the work, in enlarging the curriculum and in securing laboratory equipment and facilities to bring the engineering department up to the highest standards of efficiency. The last work he had engaged in was the installation of apparatus in the new laboratory of Electrical Engineering, the course he had planned to inaugurate this present semester.

In another phase of college work, too, Brother Azarias was a dominating force. For nearly twenty years he had engaged in the installation of apparatus in the new laboratory of Electrical Engineering, the course he had planned to inaugurate this present semester.

humble but gifted son of St. La Salle. A solemn high mass for the repose of his soul was sung in the college chapel on Saturday, September 20, at 10.00 A. M. Rev. Joseph C. Fleming, pastor of St. John's Church, White Plains, was the celebrant. Rev. Francis J. McKeon of St. Frances of Rome Church, Wakefield, acted as deacon, and Rev. John J. Harney of St. Mary's Church, Williamsbridge, assisted as sub-deacon. Rev. Denis P. Coleman, St. Frances of Rome Church, was master of ceremonies. A very impressive eulogy was delivered by Rev. James T. Torsney, chaplain of the college. Present in the sanctuary were twelve priests, members of the diocesan clergy, Passionist and Dominican orders. The mass was sung by a quartet under the direction of Frank T. Molony, '05, a pupil of Brother Azarias at Second Street, Edward Doyle, '27, acted as organist, and engineering students assisted as week pallbearers. A congregation of eight hundred including relatives from Canada and New England, friends and the student body attended. The interment was in the Brothers' plot in Gate of Heaven cemetery. A cortege of thirty cars accompanied the body, and the final absolution was pronounced by Rev. John T. Jordan, '99, pastor of St. Frances of Rome, Wakefield.
