Lewis' tough young rider but the best he could do—and that was plenty—was to gain three minutes and forty one seconds of the four minute handicap.

In connection with the celebration today and on Thursday of the 75th anniversary of the founding of Notre Dame Academy, the programme of which appeared in yesterday's Guardian, the following historic sketch will be of interest: Notre Dame Academy was founded in 1857 by His Lordship, Bishop Bernard McDonald who brought the first sisters, Reverend Mother St. Eulalia, Superior, Sisters St. Pulcheria, St. Felicité, and St. Claire to Charlottetown from Montreal on September 25. On October 12 they took possession of their convent—a wooden house donated by Honourable Daniel Brennan—and for some time labored under very great difficulties. Notwithstanding all their disadvantages their work prospered. Sister St. Eulalia remained as Superior for eleven years and was replaced by Reverend Mother St. John of the Cross, though Mother St. Eulalia herself returned three times as Superior to the mission she had founded. In 1869 the present stone structure was begun by Mr. Corbett.

Sister St. Cornelia replaced Sister St. Eulalia as Superior in 1883 and four years later Reverend Mother St. Peter Chrysologus, a native of the Island, took charge of Notre Dame and remained for twelve years. Mother St. Catherine of Sweden, who had been in charge of the first class for seven years then assumed the office of Superior which she held for the next eighteen years. During her regime, an addition, which now contains the Chapel, Assembly room and Dormitory was built—the official opening taking place February 7, 1912. So visibly has the educational work of Notre Dame prospered during these seventy-five years that she now ranks among the leading educational institutions of the Maritime Provinces, and long may she continue to carry on her noble work.
