C. N. R. Financing Before Senate Committee

OTTAWA, Ont., June 24 (Special) There is a general misunderstanding regarding the amount of money which the Government has to find for the Canadian National Railways, declared T. H. Cooper, vice-president and comptroller of the system, before the banking and commerce committee of the Senate during examination of the 1948 capital budget of the C. N. R. "The public impression that the railway cash requirements amount to a considerable amount every year is contrary to the actual position," he said. "The railway has paid to the government for more than it received. The capital requirements of the C. N. R. during the last eight years totalled $59,316,000. An average of seven millions a year, and I submit that this is not a large amount for a railway with 23,400 miles of line. Our capital investment is over two billions, and the annual requirements therefore represent about one-third of one percent of the total property investment." The railway capital requirements were set at fifty-nine million dollars, by Mr. Cooper. "Because of surplus earnings during the war years, the C. N. R. has been able to pay for $112,000,000 of government capital loan, so that on balance the company has paid to the government fifty-three millions more than it received on capital account. At the end of 1939 the capital debt was $1,325,555,000, and at the end of 1947 it has been reduced to $1,272,330,000. In addition to these payments on capital account to the government the railway has paid interest to the government during the eight years period amounting to $121,647,287," he said. The value of the Canadian National Railways to the people of Canada is considerably more than the two billion dollars shown in the accounts, said Mr. Cooper in reply to questions by Senator John T. Haig, of Winnipeg. The railway has opened up vast areas for colonization made possible the development of the nation's natural resources and provided a vital transportation service at a low freight rate.

Inaugurate "All-up" Mail July 1

As announced by the Postmaster General in the House of Commons recently, Canada Post Office will inaugurate, on Dominion Day, July 1, the new system of "All-Up" mail service. Briefly this means that on and after that date all First Class mail posted in Canada for delivery in Canada, and weighing one ounce or less will be transported by air when, by doing so, delivery to the addressee will be expedited. In effect, only mail which is correctly prepaid at 4 cents, will be affected, and then only if there is a time advantage to the addressee in giving the item afloat. This will put into the air a very important and substantial class of mail, and in keeping with the historic nature of the event appropriate ceremonies will mark the inauguration on Dominion Day across Canada. Details regarding these ceremonies will be announced at a later date. In order that there may be no public confusion regarding the nature of the new service, the Post Office desires to draw attention to the following points: Air Mail service will still be available for the accommodation of all mail prepaid at existing air mail rates. In other words, a patron wishing to send an item of first class mail, weighing more than one ounce, by air may still do so by prepaying at Air Mail rates. He may also prepay at air mail rates an item to which "All-Up" treatment ordinarily would be given if he wants to make sure the letter will travel by air. In cases where the patron is depending on "All-Up" treatment of his letter for carriage by air, attention should be paid to the weight of the item to make sure it is one ounce or less. Letters, after July 1, should not be endorsed "Air Mail" unless prepaid at air mail rates. To get the fullest possible benefit from the new "All-Up" service, the patron should address his mail fully and clearly, and post as soon as possible. While the new "All-Up" service is being made available to the public by the Post Office in conjunction with Trans-Canada Air Lines, the fact that a patron may be located in a centre not directly served by T.C.A. does not mean he will not benefit. All mail qualifying for "All-Up" treatment will be given afloat from the T. C. A. centre nearest the point of origin. Party Convention To Choose Leader Unique In Empire

By R.K. CARNEGIE (Canadian Press Staff Writer) OTTAWA, June 23 (CP) — Next August, a national convention of the Liberal party will elect a leadership successor to Prime Minister Mackenzie King. It is an election procedure unique in Commonwealth politics. Nowhere else under the British political system is this typically American practice in use. And, even in Canada, it is comparatively new. The first time it was used in 1919, when Mr. King was chosen. Before that, the national leaders of all parties were selected by the parliamentary caucuses, comprising members in the Senate and House of Commons. The caucus system continues in the United Kingdom and the other Dominions. In Britain, for instance, the Labor, Conservative and Liberal leaders are chosen by the parliamentary parties, made up of the party members in the Commons and House of Lords. In the case of the Labor party, the annual meeting which in effect, is a national convention can endorse or refuse to accept the choice of the parliamentary party; but it has always endorsed him in the past. In the United States, Presidential candidates are chosen by national conventions, held every four years. President Truman will have to carry the Democratic convention this year if he wants to be the party's candidate. In Canada however, Mr. King has never had to face another national convention. The party has been satisfied with his leadership and there has never been any call to go to the trouble and expense of bringing together another convention when its result was a foregone conclusion. Conservative Conventions The Conservative party followed the Liberal example when it chose the late Viscount Bennett as its leader in 1927, the late Hon. R.J. Manion in 1938, and John Bracken in 1942. In each case the new convention was called after the previous leader retired. There is no precedent in either the Liberal or Progressive Conservative parties for a national convention to throw out one man and put in another. Certainly a parliamentary caucus would not have the power to dismiss a leader that had been chosen by a national convention. The C.C.F. has a system closer to the American procedure. M.J.

You mean the new car that's on the way? Coldwell, the present leader, has to be re-endorsed at each biennial convention. He will be voted upon at the party convention to be held in Winnipeg the week after the Liberal convention in Ottawa. An authority on Australian procedure told The Canadian Press there is little chance his country will follow the Canadian example. "We are convinced that a meeting of the party members in the Senate and House of Representa- tives is likely to make a much wiser selection of a leader than a convention drawn from all over the country with many delegates having no knowledge of the capacity of the candidate they are voting for. Members of the parliamentary party know, because they have been working with him." However, political observers here have expressed the view that, if the Liberals had not shifted from caucus to national convention in 1919, the caucus would have chosen Mr. King by a greater majority than the convention gave him.
