

Ronald Colman In "Under Two Flags" At Prince Edward

Four great stars, a cast of ten thousand, and a story that flames with the intensity of Sahara's burning sands...

Topping the star-studded story of flaming love and smoldering rebellion are Ronald Colman, Claudette Colbert, Victor McLaglen and Rosalind Russell...

The setting of the story is a sun-baked post of empire on the edge of the Sahara. McLaglen is the hard-bitten commander of a battalion of Legionnaires...

McLaglen is the slave of the tantalizing "Cigarette," played by Miss Colbert. When he discovers that she has given her heart to Colman...

Colman, however, falls madly in love with the beautiful Rosalind Russell. Sent to a fortress in the heart of Arab territory, McLaglen persists in putting Colman in posts of danger...

Just as the entire force seems doomed, Miss Colbert leads reinforcements of legionnaires to their rescue, giving her life to send the man she loves back to another woman.

The supporting cast is filled with such superlative performers as Gregory Ratoff, Nigel Bruce, C. Henry Gordon, Herbert Mundin and J. Edward Bremberg...

World's Greatest Dead Shot "Annie Oakley" At Capitol

Characterized by strong dramatic action, romance interest and scenic color, "Annie Oakley." Barbara Stanwyck's new starring vehicle, opened last night at the Capitol Theatre. It is a grand screen entertainment, decisively expressed, finely acted, understandingly directed.

Based on the life of the title character, "Annie Oakley" presents, with graphic faithfulness, many of the colorful episodes in the career of the Ohio backwoods girl who, years ago with the Buffalo Bill Wild West Show, amazed the world with her marvelous shooting skill.

The picturesque panoply of the famous show gives a rich scenic background to the cinema story. Annie Oakley is pitted against Toby Walker, expert vaudeville marksman. Lost in feminine rapture over her handsome opponent, Annie permits him to win; but her brilliant performance causes Jeff Hegarth to sign her for the show.

Successful Broiler

A marketing experiment for Leghorn broilers carried out in the Province of Quebec during the summer of 1936 at the instigation of the Poultry Services of the Dominion Department of Agriculture has met with encouraging success.

The position was this. Since the establishment of co-operative and private hatcheries in Quebec, the production of day-old chicks has progressed by leaps and bounds, but there was a drawback. Most of the poultry breeders were interested in pullets only, and consequently, as soon as they were able to recognize the sex of the chicks, the cockerels were destroyed or offered for sale at low price. In the district of St. Felix de Valois, a sexer was engaged for three years, and thousands of day-old chicks were destroyed. This was a real economic loss.

To repair this loss and find a means of encouraging farmers to rear their day-old male chicks to the age of 10 weeks to sell as broilers, the Poultry Services ultimately made arrangements with a packing company whereby 500 birds a day could be shipped to market at a charge of 4 cents per bird for killing and dressing, the birds to be graded on rail and paid on a rail graded basis. At first it was thought that if the breeders could keep their broilers and finish them in crates or pens, the birds could be dressed on the farm and shipped immediately to the trade or stored away for export. However, when the hot weather came, danger attended the possibilities of killing on the farm owing to the lack of refrigerating facilities, as well as the lack of expert killers and pluckers. As an alternative to these difficulties, the Poultry Services succeeded in interesting the packing Touring America with Toby, Annie falls in love with him, but they remain bitter professional rivals — "it's good showmanship." A mishap injures Toby's eyes slightly, and he accidentally shoots Annie. Buffalo Bill is led to believe by Jeff, who is also in love with Annie, that the act was deliberate, and fires the marksman. Annie returns to Toby, now working in a shooting gallery, after a successful tour abroad before the crowned heads of Europe, in the happy denouement. Too much praise cannot be lavished on Barbara Stanwyck; her characterization of Annie Oakley is superb. She dramatizes the role with a convincing quality charged with sympathy and charm. The same can be said in critical honesty for Preston Foster and Melvyn Douglas, and lesser losses of eulogies in comparison with their roles can be extended to Pert Kelton, Andy Clyde and Moroni Olsen.

At the outset, inquiries were received from many breeders and there were prospects of handling around 20,000 birds, but another difficulty arose. As soon as the poultry pedlars became aware of the undertaking, they canvassed the ground and offered a greatly increased price for broilers alive. Where high prices alive were available the breeders were advised to sell. Quite a number, however, preferred to test out the merits of rail grading and with those who had taken the precautions to fatten their birds the experiment proved successful.

The conclusions to be drawn are that there is a reasonable margin of profit to be derived from finishing broilers on the farm, subject to the following conditions—That the birds receive a fattening ration to promote growth and that they be supplied with adequate quarters to give them plenty of outdoor exercise up to the time of fattening. The place where they are kept must be in a hygienic condition, and the fattening must be done within fifteen days, with a proper ration to produce milk-fed and at least three meals a day given.
