THE STYLE
"Oh, Gwendolin, I'm so sorry for you. I know it must have been humiliating to fall from your height."
"Why, nonsense Patricia, doesn't the Prince of Wales do it quite often?"

WHERE REAL GENIUS IS SHOWN
Lady Visitor: "I'm told your husband has remarkable ability in telling the children fairy tales."
Wife: "Yes; but his real genius comes out in those he tells me."

HIS FULL NAME
He: "There goes Bill Brown."
She: "What's his full name?"
He: "His full name? He's usually referred to as Boozey Bill Brown."

SEE?
"Funny he should continue to run after that girl."
"Why?"
"She's already caught him."

"No—most of them would rather settle down in Lapland, I'm sure."

Letter Tells of Wonderful Relief After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Coniston, Ontario.—"After a severe operation and a three weeks' stay in a hospital I returned home so weak that I was unable to move a chair. For four months I was almost frantic with pain and suffering until I thought sure there could not be any help for me. I had very severe pains in my left side and suffered agony every month. One day when I was not able to get up my mother begged me to try your medicine. My husband got me a bottle of Vegetable Compound at once and I took it. I started a second bottle, and to my surprise and joy the pains in my side left me completely and I am able to do all my work without help. I am a farmer's wife, so you see I can't be idle long. In all, I have taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, five boxes of the Compound Tablets, two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Purifier, and have also used the Sanative Wash."—Mrs. L. LAJONNESSE.

MISS NOBODY

By TIFFANY WELLS

His first idea had been, immediately, a ginmill. Barbara vetoed that. But Kenosha was prolific of ideas. All of them involved surrender of the bright yellow disc which warmed in Barbara's left pants pocket to his safe keeping. She ignored all his suggestions. His last one was the winding up of the affairs of the firm, a just and equitable divy of all assets, and a parting—

"At the next crossroads, come with my twenty-five, you with yours. An' no hard feelings."
How does one snub among the roadsters?
Barbara looked at her in desperation. A truck was crawling out of Somerville, up the incline behind them. She moved to the side of the road.
The Falstaffian rover sensed her intention. With ugly snarl, he grabbed for her arm. She yanked loose from his grip. The driver of the truck shifted gears as he passed, and began to pick up speed. She leaped toward the truck and hopped aboard. Kenosha, puffing along, managed to get a grip on her coat.
"Hop, brother!" wheezed Kenosha. "Quick, or I'll pull you down."
Barbara lifted her right foot and gave him a poke in the mid-section. He sprawled in the middle of the road, an expression of vain rage on his large face. From the tailboard of the truck she sang out at the fast receding figure of Sir Slim de Kenosha:
"Hey! I got the luck. You got the ideas! I'll keep my luck! You keep your ideas! And no hard feelings!"
The wind carried back Kenosha's reply. She put her fingers in her ears.
She sat down and nursed a barked shin and outraged Alley, the kitten. She took the fur-ball out of her pocket and addressed it gravely.
"I've got to spend that money before somebody spends it for me. That, Alley, is what they call economics."
At Beacon the truck came to a halt in the vehicle line for the ferry across the Hudson to Newburgh.

Barbara crawled back into the interior of the truck and found a heap of gunny sacks. She nestled into them and made neither move nor sound until she felt the smooth sense of progress on water. Then she ventured out.
The slender scarecrow was the first passenger of the ferry as it rrammed the top of the Newburgh slip.
She halted before the door of a bank, where she waited a speculative foot for many minutes before she sighed and went on her way. In her sables, with Hardiman's limousine waiting outside, had been afraid of bankers long, long ago. Now, in rags, she was chilled to her diaphragm at the thought of confronting the teller with her gold pieces.
The thing called economics, working mysteriously through her consciousness of social values, guided her unerringly through the streets of the town up to where the Poles begin. There she came upon Ike's Loan Palace.
She did not immediately concentrate on the row of men's suits which hung in the rear of the show window. Her eyes lingered over the luxuries in the forepart of the display.
"Yes, sir," she nodded decisively. "We may need some of those things before long."
"Talking to yourself baby?"
The voice was husky, seductive. Barbara turned. Her pulse skipped a bit.

Bleachers-and-Cream
She carried a bundle under her arm in which were a khaki shirt for warmth two pieces of underwear for decency and a purple tie for foolishness. Her feet were low-shod over lisle socks a half dollar pair. The two extra pair of the left coat pocket, symmetry being satisfied by the corresponding bulge of Alley in the right. In her pants pocket she now had a tooth-brush and a tube of tooth-paste.
The residue of her funds totaled $10.10.
A fortune. Enough for her to dismiss easily the remnant of impatient rage which had been her weak response to Ike's harsh bargaining for survival. But she would be a noble, clear-visioned, wandering philosopher. Ten dollars and ten cents. How many doughnuts could be purchased for that? Enough to last her for the rest of her life. She would never hunger again.
She could smile indulgently at the folkies of awaiting mankind. That reminded her. She, too, was one of the sweating. She craved a bath. That was the sole missing link of her personal millennium. A bath, praise be, was a simple matter. One found a hotel. There you are.

Bleachers-and-Cream
The hand-me-down blue suit with the pin stripe wrought a sartorial miracle. The limp scarecrow who had staggered into Somerville the day before was now a slim, handsome lad, and insouciant, figure whose get-up was marred by but one detail—the gardener's boots—purchased at Ryneck.
Across the street from Ike's down a block was a shoe store. There Barbara spent four more of her dollars, and a clerk marveled at the smallness of her feet. It was difficult to fit her. She was humiliated, disconcerted, by being escorted to the children's department.
She bought, in addition to the shoes, three pairs of socks and managed to get her feet into one pair without revealing the copy of the Mt. Casco Sentinel which had served her as hose.
She was glad to get out of the shoe store, away from the prying eyes of the clerk.
She strode along buoyantly, a gallant young figure, and became aware of a sudden change in the way people looked at her. Before the metamorphosis there had been amusement, sometimes suspicion in their glances. It was different now. Women, particularly, were prone to scrutinize her, too closely, she thought. Several of them smiled at her.
"Of course," it occurred to her. "Right now I'm the best looking boy in the world."
It was nice to have money, to be well dressed, not to be too hungry. After an hour of study before shop windows, into which entered a thousand nice adjustments of aesthetic fancy in economic fact, Barbara further enriched the trading element at Newburgh by several dollars and herself with a wardrobe she considered fairly adequate.
She carried a bundle under her arm in which were a khaki shirt for warmth two pieces of underwear for decency and a purple tie

in this FAMOUS HOSIERY
Choose from 27 Paris colors

IN 5 unique ways Holeproof guards against the flaws that lie hidden until you put hosiery on. Striking smartness results. And the sheerest chiffons may be selected with perfect safety.
This fine hosiery has won the favor of two million women. No other kind, they tell us, is so uniformly perfect.
Its styles are accepted as authoritative. Each one, as judged by Paris, is fashionably correct. Holeproof, of all fine hosiery, offers you these 5 safeguards. Note each one carefully:

- [1] No imperfections. Style vanishes with imperfections. And here Holeproof safeguards you by nine separate inspections. It is a fact that few other fine hose are so uniformly perfect.
- [2] Correct Paris shades. Paris authorities select the newest colors. A unique scientific dyeing process keeps them clear and bright. Our anti-fade treatment protects from fading.
- [3] Superlative transparency. Even in the heavier weights there is no cloudiness, no streaks. First, the silk is specially tested, then it undergoes the special scientific Holeproof treatment.
- [4] No loose ends. Loose threads mar appearance. So Holeproof carefully trims the inside of each stocking by hand.
- [5] Exquisite clearness. In sheer chiffons, clearness comes only with the use of uniformly even thread. The lack of it in cheaper silk causes unsightly shadow rings. So, at greater cost, Holeproof selects China silk, judged finest of all oriental grades.
Every Holeproof stocking has this five-fold fashion safety. And in these hose alone can all of these points be found. Go to your Holeproof shop today. New French colors and new styles have just arrived. See especially the smart chiffons.
