PARIS WINTER STYLES REFLECT FASHIONS OF BYGONE DAYS

BY MARY KNIGHT
United Press Staff Correspondent

PARIS, July 17 (U.P.)—Thirty-three Paris creations in the form of feminine finery have just shaped themselves into a huge mirror, wherein is reflected definitely the trend of the mode for the approaching fall and winter.

These 33 models were exhibited by the "Grand Prix de l'Elegance," style show of 1931, just held in the Grand Palais in the Champs-Elysees.

Theatre and movie stars, favorites of the French capital, acted as mannequins, displaying gowns that were the living, breathing images of the 1760's, 1830's 1860's and 1870's

First prize for the most stunning costume was awarded to Mlle. Suzy Vernon, French film star, who wore a chic black and white afternoon ensemble. Incidently, 12 of the 33 gowns exhibited were combinations of black and white, with white predominating.

Variations of the 1830 model hat known as the "feminine bowler." "Amazon." "Pudding basin," "English walking hat," and the "Tilted boat-shaped bonnet," were outstanding features. Some of these new hats were worn so far on the side of the head that they had to have tiny velvet ribbons tied around the head to keep them from falling off. Practically all of them were trimmed with feathers and plumes.

Next in favor to the black and white models—white with offsetting points in black—was aquamarine. Graduated ruffles, all the way from the waist to the floor, pointed the way to the entrance of "period" styles for the fall and winter. Lace bodices with skirts of satin, crepe or chiffon, formed another interesting feature of the incoming styles. Backs of evening gowns will grow noticeably and trimmed with fur, will grow longer.

So dominant an influence is the past holding over the present and future trend contour that it has even affected hair, and curls are appearing where curls have never appeared before—for the present generation. Mme. Mary Costes, film star and wife of the transatlantic flier, emphasized the old-fashioned idea by a tiny black and white lace sunshade and little ear ringlets and curls that fell almost to her shoulder.

Mlle. Vernon's prize-winning frock was of black satin, with a short white coat, very snug-fitting and trimmed with black fur. Fingerless lace mittens in black and white will be conspicuous by their presence with many types of ensemble, and when hoops begin to find their support to bouffant skirts lace pantaloons will be a corresponding necessity. The hoops will be collapsible, as in the old days, to permit easy bus riding, subwaying, tramming and taxiing.

TREATMENT FOR EXTERNAL PARASITES OF POULTRY

(Experimental Farms Note)

The hot days of summer is the time that calls for close attention if the flock is to be kept free from external parasites.

Body Lice—If the surroundings are kept in a clean sanitary condition and a dust bath is provided, not much trouble will be occasioned with body lice so long as the birds are in good health, but let any bird get out of condition and it becomes a veritable propagating place for lice. These lice, however, are no great menace as they may be readily controlled. There are numerous lice powders on the market, any one of which will get good results. Ordinary fine road dust with a little flour of sulpher added, about a quarter of a pound of sulpher to a quart of road dust, will be found to give satisfactory results, when carefully dusted through the feathers. Blue ointment, a piece about the size of a small pea rubbed below the vent and underneath the wings, will also prove efficacious but the latter should not be used on setting hens. The most convenient remedy, however, that has been tired out at the Central Experimental Farm is Black Leaf 40, which can be purchased from any seed merchant. Paint the sides of the roosts immediately before the birds go to roost and the fumes will effectively rid the birds of all vermin.

Mites—Mites are a much more serious menace to the poultryman's profits as they are much harder to get rid of than the body lice, but here again cleanliness is absolutely essential if the pest is to be successfully coped with.

When mites are found to be present, the first step in banishing them is to give the house a thorough cleaning. Remove all droppings and old nesting material, scrape and sweep out every particle of dirt and burn it. Then if water pressure is available turn on the hose, forcing the water into every crack; if, as is the case on most farms, you cannot use this method it is advisable to scrub down the walls with a brush or old broom, but in any case they should be thoroughly sprayed or painted with a good strong disinfectant. This wash should be repeated in a few days to destroy the mites which hatch after the first application. The disinfectant may be applied with a hand spray-pump, or, if one is not available, a brush will do, but in either case the fluid should be used liberally and every crack flooded.

A good strong solution of any of the coal tar disinfectants comminly offered for sale will prove effective. Ordinary coal oil will kill the mites, but as it evaporates quickly the effects are not lasting. An excellent "paint" to apply to the roost and nest-boxes is composed of one part crude carbolic or possibly better still Black Leaf 40, to three or four parts of crank case oil.

Even after the house has been cleaned, the cracks in the roost and nest-boxes should be flooded at regular intervals throughout the summer either with the aforementioned "paint" or with coal oil.

For further information write to the Poultry Division Central Experimental Farm for circular No. 80
