CHAMPIONSHIPS

330 V with Gordon McMillan's Cornwall 64 V reserve.

The placings of the various groups—senior herd, junior herd, senior get of sire, junior get of sire, etc., are shown elsewhere. These classes are important from a breeders standpoint and the winners were naturally jubilant.

Non-Registered Classes

After the completion of the above classes for non-registered foxes was called with the pale silvers being first on the table. These were very attractive and many of them were most desirable foxes showing that breeders of unregistered foxes have some wonderful material.

Winners were: Section 1, Mrs. Raoul Reymond, Southport; section 2, Wilfred J. McDonald, Covehead; section 3, C. F. Willis, Covehead; section 4, C. F. Willis, Covehead. Others winning prizes in these classes will be found elsewhere.

Class 8 non-registered full silvers consisted of these types. All three sections were won by Mrs. Raoul Reymond, Southport.

New Types Judged

About 230 judging got around to the new types with Class A, Marked Silvers, pale, occupying the table. These marked silvers are bred from white faces or ring necks mostly of the McNeill strain crossed with Is in silver females. They have increased tremendously in number in the three years since first introduced here and bid fair to be a very important feature of silver fox production in the years to come.

Many types were represented on the table, some with full ring necks some with very little white markings on face but with the other characteristics of the white face. There were many beautiful specimens and none that could be classified poor or undesirable.

Section 1 for adult males was won by the Island Platinum Fox Company's PMN, P-11—with Low-Hancock, second; J. A. MacDonald, third; Southport, third and Cudmore Bros., fourth.

The adult female class was won by Wellington McNeill with Southport AUB 311, second place went to Mrs. Raoul Reymond, third and fourth to R. V. Woodside.

Section 3 for male pups was won by Ernest T. Mill with HE 108V; W. B. McArthur second; Frank McKay third; L. W. Hancock fourth.

Section 4 female pups was won by Stewart and Lewis with Ben Glen Lady GUL 168V; second place went to R. S. Humphrey, third and fourth to the Island Platinum Fox Company.

Today's judging will commence at near 9 o'clock as possible as there are no less than 20 sections to be tabled ranging through standard platinum silver lights and extra light, standard platinum medals and lights and standard silver pearls. These are the big money classes and are held at high figures for breeding purposes.

The entries will be almost altogether from either the McNeill or La Forest strains. The McNeill strain was developed by Ollie McNeill formerly of Southport, P.E.I. but now of Port Qu'Appelle, Sask. Its progenitor was a magnificent ring-necked full silver bred from parents purchased from the McLaure and Macintosh Silver Fox Farms, Ltd. This type of fox is now found in many of the principal ranches of Canada and the United States. The La Forest strain was developed by a very small French-Canadian rancher and recognized by Dr. J. A. La Forest of Quebec City as a somewhat unique and developed by him into an extremely well publicized type.

At noon today there will be a departure from usual procedure, namely the presenting of the trophies to the winners in the registered silver classes. Usually this was left to the last but as spectators and exhibitors are always in a hurry to get away at the end of the show the new routine was thought preferable.

self. There, said reports from the front, the German columns, although there was a terrible fire from mortars and machine-guns as they retired, were pushed back toward the Volga river.

Southwest of Kakhin, Russian detachments were said to have crossed the Volga and successfully raided the German rear.

Subsidiary artillery also was reported against what is apparently the nearest German position to Moscow, a salient driven to Narfominsk, 35 miles southwest of the capital, apparently from the main German southwestern line about Maloyaroslavets. The German force there was described, however, as a "unit" and this implied that it was small.

Of the far southern theatre, the Moscow front declared tonight that Soviet defenders were holding their ground both before Sevastopol, the main Red naval base in the southwestern Crimea, and Kerch, on the eastern Crimean peninsula facing the Caucasus.

The Germans, it was added, are beating at Sevastopol with rising fury—and with rising losses—but have gained no ground in repeated violent assaults headed by tanks and bombers.

The Soviet Black Sea fleet was described as still a strongly effective force; it was said to have ably supported Russian ground troops and aviation in breaking German efforts to breach the Kerch positions.

He said the mandate given the government by the people at the last general election was given on the basis of no conscription and the people had not changed their views. "I don't think the government has a mandate for many of the things they are doing," said Mr. Rowley.

He said Canada had imposed conscription for home defence but the government had no mandate for that. He said he failed to understand how Conservatives could be taken from the farms where they were needed and put in the army. There was conscription for service in Canada where there was no fighting but no conscription for service where Canada's first line of defence stood, on the English Channel.

Mr. Casgrain's speech came after two other Conservatives, E. E. Peley of Qu'Appelle and Douglas Ross of Toronto-St. Paul, referred indirectly to conscription.

Mr. Peley said Canada's two big tasks were to maintain war production and provide men for the fighting services. To do both were directions from the government was necessary.

"To my mind," he said, "the only way it can be done is by a system of selective national service. I don't care how you do it, whether by a party government or some other kind of government."

Disappointed With Premier

Mr. Ross said he was disappointed with Prime Minister Mackenzie King's statement on Wednesday that he would not recommend compulsory military service without consultation with the people. He thought the prime minister should state his reasons for that stand at a secret session of the House and declare there should be no equality of sacrifice in mobilizing the country's entire manpower.

Mr. Casgrain said he felt it his duty to give the people without making his views known. He said the fact the people had not changed their minds on the questions submitted to them in 1940 was shown by the return of government candidates in by-elections.

"I can say that the entire population of Quebec is as one in supporting the policies of the Privy Council," he said. "The feeling of the province of Quebec is that we should follow the provisions of the mobilization act that was adopted about a year ago without any compromises are ready to serve anywhere from the Atlantic to the Pacific in the defence of our country which is a sacred obligation which all decent Canadians understand."

"Up to the present the mobilization act has done all that it was expected to do, except to reduce the number of the Minister of Defence within the last six months 105,773 men enlisted in the army, the navy and the air force which I think is a very good record."

Canada had reason to be proud of their record in building up the forces and of the position occupied by the Canadian forces overseas but before suggestions from the Opposition were considered seriously it should be shown the mobilization act had not achieved the results expected of it.

"Somebody people wish to make it seem the province from which I come has not done its full share," he added. "I do not say these people point directly at us and single us out but they claim that if recruiting is not as active as they would like it that has been due to lack of interest in the affairs of the country and because our people have not done what they should."

"I want to say most emphatically that the people of Quebec have responded to the call to the best of their ability and that any changes had been made and improvements brought about the response would have been even better."

of staging such a practice. The advisory committee consists of Hon. H. H. Coox and Major Poole of whom were present last night and are members of the sub-committee for the city.

Other members of the sub-committee who met to discuss organization plans were: Inspector J. A. Wright and Sgt. K.W.H. Engel, both of the R.C.M.P.; Mr. C. Beer, Provincial Fire Marshal; Chief Angus McEachern of the City Fire Department; Chief A. Birwhistle of the City Police Force; Mr. J. A. Fullerton, City Clerk; Mr. Harold Messervy, City Engineer; Mr. Ivan Reddin, Assistant engineer and members of the City Council, Group Captain E. A. Blake, O.B.E., M.M., Officer Commanding the R. A. F. was present and named Squadron Leader Edwards to act on this committee.

It was decided that each poll chairman, both Conservative and Liberal, be asked to get some of their workers and patrol their particular block during the blackout to make sure all the lights would be put out.

Mr. V. Ainsworth pointed out the difficulty which would arise in the cases where store lights were left on all night. There would have to be some arrangement concluded with the proprietors to have these extinguished. Mr. Ainsworth and Coun. Laphorn were appointed as a committee to meet storekeepers and work out a plan in this connection.

ACCUSE BRITISH

drove them nearly half the distance to Tripoli, then fell back last spring when a large portion of his forces was diverted for service in Greece.

Mr. Shinwell asked whether defence of Britain's Oriental empire represented the government's idea of a second front and, if so, whether this strategy was approved by the Russian government.

Insisting that he was not accusing Mr. Churchill and several others in the government of "harboring subversive thoughts," Mr. Shinwell added, "we are not sure of all the others."

A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, made the government's reply to Mr. Shinwell, but it tapered off into a heated exchange over Mr. Shinwell had declined to accept a post in the Churchill government.

Mr. Shinwell, Alexander said, seemed to have chosen the role of a "self-appointed critic" who receives the applause of the less-informed among the multitude rather than to work in self-imposed disciplines and silence."

The prediction of a possible general strike in the United States came from Austin Hopkinson, Independent, in support of his statement that despite the United States' contribution Germany was a greater production and uses that capacity better than we do."

He said that "trade unionism in the United States... has increased at a tremendous pace and hasn't got the experience that British trade unionism has got. The result may be leading up to a general strike simply due to the inexperienced of trade union leaders."

"And employers," James Griffiths, Labor, interjected. "I agree that employers in America on the whole have the most primitive ideas. There are exceptions," Mr. Hopkinson said.

Mr. Hopkinson said that an expert in the matter of blackout should be brought from Halifax. This might save a lot of time as he could tell the committees what steps to take in connection with staging a practice here and would probably be able to give suggestions that would prevent traffic accidents. The military men in the city would inspect out would not be responsible for organizing blackouts, he said. Coun. Chandler was appointed to represent the sub-committee in the militia.

Group Captain Blake announced that machines from the airport would be sent up during the practice and would report on it. They would also be able to report on the blackout in the royalties and other parts bordering on the city which will be in charge of the provincial committee.

The question of providing a suitable siren to warn of a blackout was brought up by Group Captain Blake. It was decided that Hon. Mr. Coox and Major Poole would take up the matter of purchasing a siren with the government, immediately.

Mr. Beer, as secretary, announced that the Carry On Canada Corps would assist the committees in any way possible.

Group Captain Blake explained that if householders would prepare one or perhaps two rooms in their homes for such blackouts it would simplify matters. It is difficult to blackout a whole house but if screenings were made from such material as cardboard packing boxes for the windows of one room the lights could be left on in that particular section of the house.
