ROOSEVELT

cle' Ted," came from the White House in Washington to give her away.

Days of Bossism

Roosevelt, from 1905 to 1910, devoted his time to his law, and divided that time between New York City and Hyde Park. In the fall of 1910 the State of New York was rocked by scandals involving public men. Bossism had become a burning issue. The few Democrats in Columbia, Putnam and Duchess counties were hard pressed to find a candidate for state senator for their district. One after another of the so-called leading local figures refused the nomination.

Finally, as the story goes, Franklin Roosevelt was brought into the picture.

Roosevelt came back in 1912 to win the senate seat again for another two years. This same year he carried on another fight against Tammany Hall and Boss Murphy when he openly espoused the presidential aspirations of Woodrow Wilson at the Balitmore convention.

Wilson won. Daniels became secretary of the navy. He in turn looked around for an assistant and decided on Roosevelt.

Roosevelt with his wife and three children Anna, James and Elliott, moved to Washington. There he astounded the country by declaring the navy to be in a state of hopeless inefficiency. He asked for more men and pleaded that the "first line of defence" be brought up to its authorized strength.

Roosevelt saw the war on the ocean first hand. He went across aboard a destroyer. "When the ship rolled me all but out of my bunk I lit a cigarette and tried to be composed," he said.

Roosevelt was the candidate for vice-president in 1920. He stumped the country from one end to the other, making more than 800 campaign speeches. But the cry of "Normalcy" and "Article 10" was too much for him. He went down to defeat with James M. Cox in the Harding landslide.

Roosevelt had resigned from the navy to embark upon the vice-presidential campaign. When that was over he returned to the law practice with Basil O'Connor in New York City. In the summer of 1921 he went to his Maine cottage for the first rest he had known in several years. He was tired and his arduous duties had sapped him of much of his reserve strength.

Infantile Paralysis

In Maine Roosevelt went sailing and indulged frequently in his favorite outdoor sport, swimming. He took cold. Two days later he was near death. He was suffering infantile paralysis. He was but 39 He determined "to beat this thing." Recovering slowly, he exercised the affected legs daily and then finally he was told of the beneficial properties of the pool at a run down summer resort at Warm Springs, Ga. He investigated, went into the pool daily for three weeks and discovered that improvement was marked. He discarded the crutches that everyone though he would carry for the rest of his life and with a set of strong braces he faced the world with a renewed vigor.

It was Smith, the "Happy Warrior," who called Roosevelt back into active politics. Al, the Democratic nominee for the presidency in 1928 was casting about desperately for a strong candidate to head the New York State ticket. Roosevelt had declined the nomination.

Appointed Governor

The Democrats met in Rochester, N. Y., for their state convention. After 24 hours of fruitless effort, Smith finally got Roosevelt on the long distance telephone and virtually drafted him for governorship.

In the race that fall, Smith lost New York State. Roosevelt won over Albert Ottinger, his Republican opponent, by 25,000 votes.

Roosevelt assumed the governorship, January 1, 1929. There was the no mean problem of a Republican, and distinctly hostile legislature to deal with.

His first administration was featured by a waterpower battle that resulted in a signal victory for him. Roosevelt succeeded in having the legislature approve two years afterward the creation of a state power authority to develop state-owned power sites along the St. Lawrence river and to seek means by which cheap power, thus generated, could be sold at low cost to users throughout the state.

The Democratic party renominated Roosevelt for the governorship in its 1930 convention. In the election he won over his Republican opponent by the staggering mapority of 725,00 votes, the largest majority ever given a gubernatorial nominee in the history of the state.

It was during this campaign that the governor definitely committed himself to the policy of repeal of the 18th amendment.

Advises Foxmen To Ship Furs Early This Season

That foxmen should ship their furs early during the present season is the opinion of Mr. A. J. Ashford, representative of Anning and Cobb, fur buyers of London, England, who has come to this country to introduce his firm to the field of Canadian furs, and who arrived in the city yesterday. Accompanying him is Mr. A. Levin, president of the Levin Fur Co. Toronto. Mr. B. Roy Holman local representative of the latter company, and Mr. L. D. Murray, manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia returned here with them from Moncton.

The advent of Anning and Cobb to the fur market of Canada is an important step, as it introduces new methods of direct buying, a particular feature of which is advances on the spot made through the Bank of Nova Scotia. Previously the firm has done business privately through larger dealers, but their policy is now to include in their regular auctions Canadian furs as well as those from European, Asiatic and Australian markets.

The Levin Fur Co., will represent Anning and Cobb in Canada. Newand-up-to-date quarters of the company in the city have been secured on Queen Street. Mr. Ashford states that he does not look for any improvement over present prices. The prices may be lower later in the season when larger quantities are being offered.

The firm which Mr. Ashford represents has been established for about 100 years and speaking with regard to present day conditions in the British Isles, he stated that they were generally better than they have been for some time past. While there is still some unemployment he said, prospects seem brighter for the future.

Of the recent Imperial Economic Conference held at Ottawa, under the chairmanship of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Mr. Ashford stated that in England the agreements had been very favorably received and that everyone looked for the outcome of the conference to cement trade between the Dominion and the United Kingdom.

Mr. Ashford will be in Prince Edward Island for several days during which he hopes to meet local foxmen.

From here he will proceed to Winnipeg to look into the fox fur industry in that province and from there will return to New York from where he will sail for home.

EXPLAINS

In 1928 election Hoover got 21,392,000 popular votes, while his opponent got 15,016,000. But in the electoral college Hoover got 444 votes against Al Smith's 87. The reason why he got more electoral college votes than his popular majority in the country shows is that the minority popular votes in the states which voted to Hoover, were wiped out.

The vote in the electoral college will be as follows.

Election Law

United States election law requires the parties to make periodic statements, not only of their expenses, but of their receipts. The name of every contributor to campaign funds, and the amount he gave, must be stated. These reports, delivered to the clerk of the house of representatives and issued by him to the press, are always given prominence in the newspapers and make illuminating reading. The latest show that between June 1 and the last week in October, practically the whole period of the campaign, the Republicans collected $1,554,817 and spent $1,454,179, while the Democrats collected $1,065,654 and spent $926,208. These are national committee receipts and disbursements only.

The figures seem large, but in fact they reveal how hard times have cut down donations to party war chests. In the 1928 election the Republican national committee spent $4,064,517 in electing Mr. Hoover. while the Democratic national committee spent $3,157,453 in its unsuccessful attempt to elect Alfred E. Smith. One result of the poverty of the parties has been that the crop of ballyhoo has been less luxuriant in 1932 than it was four years ago. Another result has been that more of the burden of campaigning has fallen on the candidates. The parties have had to cut down on pamphlets, billboards and advertisements, and also on speech-making trips for the minor personages who in 1928 travelled about in swarms. It is said the relative cheapness of this campaign will tend to hold down expenses in future presidential years. Now that it has been proved that the two national committees can put on a battle with a mere $2,500,000 between them, contributors will think twice before shelling out in the grand old style.

Receipts of Interest

Some of the more interesting items on the list of party receipts are these: The Republicans received $25,000 from Andrew W. Mellon, ambassador to Great Britain; $50,000 from J. P. Morgan; $12,500 from Harvey Firestone, and a mere $100 from William H. Vanderbilt, head of that noted family. Among gifts to the Democrats were $45,000 from Bernard Baruch, the New York financier; $25,000 from W. R. Hearst; $25,000 from John J. Raskob, and $100 from Bobby Jones the golfer.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. WILBERT S. ROSS

Citizens of Charlottetown were greatly shocked to learn of the suddent passing of Mrs. Wilbert S. Ross which occurred at her home 33 Park Street on Thursday morning Oct. 13th at the early age of 27 years. The late Mrs. Ross (nee Bertha J. Ferguson) was a daughter of the late Henry E. and Mrs. Ferguson of this city. She will be greatly missed by her many friends and relatives but her loss will be more keenly felt in the home as her bereaved husband and three small children come to realize the great void that will be felt in the home. She was identified with the work of the Central Christian Church and a member of the choir. She leaves to mourn besides her husband three small children, Arthur, Garfield and Walter also the following brothers and sisters: Harry G. Ferguson, Watson Ferguson and Walter Ferguson, Mrs. W. Josey, Mrs. G. D. Burgoyne, Mrs. J. R. Cudmore, Mrs. D. McCallum all of this city. The funeral was held on Saturday afternoon Oct. 15 from her former home 29 Park Street, and was largely attended. The services at the house and grave were conducted by her pastor, Rev. W. L. Outhouse assisted by Rev. G. C. Webster of Zion Church. Among the hymns rendered by the choir was a special favorite of the deceased, a duet, The Old Rugged Cross, being very beautifully rendered by Mrs. McLellan and Mrs. Platts. The pallbearers were John Perkins, Wm. Ferguson, Wendall Wood, Roy Huestis, Whiston Smith and Christian Nielson. The large number of floral tributes and mesages of sympathy received show the high esteem in which the deceased was held. They are as follows:
