Hatchet Killer Busy in New York

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—Through the haunting labyrinths of New York's Chinatown police plainclothesmen moved today to find the long murderer of George Sang, whose body was found yesterday behind a partition in his Chinese laundry in Brooklyn.

Only one clue was available—the hatchet, which police described as a typical tong executioner's instrument with short handle and broad edges.

Sang's body was discovered when small boys told police the laundry had been locked up for a day and a night. One of them boosted over the transom, opened the door for the officers.

The hatchet killing of Sang came while police were questioning Chin Guey, 50 year old Chinese, concerning the death of Mrs. Kate Smith, a white woman, a few days earlier. When Mrs. Smith's body was found, Chin Guey was in a semi-conscious state in another room of her boarding house.

Bribe Is Taken From A Woman

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 21.—The dismissal from the Metropolitan Police force of a detective sergeant because of his conduct in connection with a case recently heard at the Old Bailey was mentioned in the Court of Criminal Appeal.

The Lord Chief Justice, Lord Hewart, Mr. Justice Avory, and Mr. Justice Tait dealt with the case, which was an application on behalf of William Chadwicke to appeal against his sentence and conviction.

"I suggest," said counsel, Mr. Frederick Levy, "that the whole trial was improperly carried out through the gross misbehavior of the police officer, who tricked Chadwicke and his sister."

The court granted Chadwicke, who was not present, leave to appeal, and, after some argument, to call three witnesses, including a woman he was alleged to have assaulted.

Is Aviation A Necessity

TORONTO, Dec. 21.—(C.P.)—Recalling her experience in Toronto as a V.A.D. during the war, Amelia Earhart Putnam attributed the beginning of her aviation career to what she experienced in this city. Although working in the hospital all day from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m., she found time to visit the flying fields. "They could hardly be called airports," she said. "I remember the sting of the snow in my face from the propellers' whirl. The aviation bug entered my system at that time and probably has never left it."

"Whether you will or no, aviation enters your life because it is simply transportation," Miss Earhart said, declaring that it should be accepted as a matter of course. "My husband is too busy a man now to rely on any other form of transportation, and of course, when I'm going the way he is he rides with me. I would like you to feel that the experiences in aviation are not different from other experiences in life. They are not strange. I may be a little odd, but that isn't the fault of aviation."

Three Years' Sentence

Chadwicke, said Mr. Levy was sentenced at the Old Bailey to three years' penal servitude for causing bodily harm to the woman. While he was awaiting trial after being committed by the Marylebone magistrate the detective sergeant in charge of the case was Chadwicke's sister.

He told her, said counsel, that it would be better if her brother were not represented at the trial, and that if she gave him sums of money he would interview the judge and get Chadwicke bound over.

"In her simple way," added Mr. Levy, "the woman believed the police officer, and parted with £12."

"Chadwicke pleaded guilty, and was not represented at the trial before the Recorder. No evidence was called on his behalf, and he was sentenced to three years' penal servitude."

"The police officer has since appeared before the disciplinary board at Scotland Yard, and has been dismissed from the force. The woman has received from the authorities a sum equivalent to that which she handed to the officer."

"If Chadwicke had been represented at the Old Bailey many mitigating circumstances would have been placed before the court, and the Recorder might have taken a different view with regard to the sentence."

Lady Physician Surveying Hospital

TORONTO, Dec. 21.—(C.P.)—Dr. Gertrude Hertzfeld, F.R.S.E., noted British surgeon was guest of honor at a luncheon at the Granite Club when the Alumnae of the University of Toronto Medical College entertained her in this city recently.

Dr. Hertzfeld, who is spending a month on this continent, is chief surgeon of the Royal Hospital, of Sick Children's Hospital, and a surgeon at the Hospital for Women and Children, Edinburgh. She lectures in the University of Edinburgh on disease of children and is an examiner at the Royal College of Surgeons. Dr. Loudon introduced this distinguished woman as one of the outstanding surgeons of the day, and Dr. Hertzfeld recounting some of the surgical triumphs of her own hospital expressed gratification that women of skill are accepted in the hospitals of Britain on a par with men of skill.

She has made a survey of hospitals specializing in gynaecology and child surgery in New York and Boston and in Toronto spent much time at the Hospital for Sick Children, the General Hospital, and the Women's College Hospital. She was delighted at the remarkable results being obtained in the treatment among the children and also with the progress which the women of the medical profession in Toronto are making.

Leicester May Make Ruling Regarding Childless Couples

LONDON, Dec. 21.—A proposal to forbid married couples to occupy three-bed-roomed houses unless they have a baby was made by Dr. C. Killick Millard, medical officer of health for Leicester, Eng., at the Public Health Congress.

"It seems sheer waste to allow a couple without children to go on occupying a municipal house with three bedrooms," he said.

"I would not accept such a couple as tenants unless they furnished a medical certificate that a baby was expected, and even so I would always give preference to those already with families."

Rent Rebate Scheme

"To those who have already been given municipal houses I would say at the end of twelve months, 'Produce a baby, or make way for a family who will derive more advantage from the house than you do.'"

"This is going to be a very unpopular proposition. Municipal tenants have become a very important part of the electorate."

There should be some scheme of rent rebates based on the number of dependent children, said Dr. Millard, the rebates ceasing automatically as children reached a certain age. Such a scheme should be combined with a means test.

The objective of toy repairs is 15,000 before Christmas day.

The funeral was held from the residence of her sister Mrs. Michael Murphy, New Haven on October 29th at Saint Joseph's Church, Kelly's Cross where a Requiem High Mass was sung by Rev. Clarence Pitre, P. P., who also officiated at the grave.

AMATEUR FIREMAN BURNS HIS FEET

OTTAWA, Dec. 21.—The next time Ernest Levesque does the fireman act he will put on his shoes. He awakened today to find stovepipes overheated and, in his haste, forgot his shoes. He climbed above the stove, slipped, fell, feet-downward, on its glowing top, badly burning his feet.

Niece of Duchess Is Greengrocer

Every morning at five o'clock, wet or fine, the niece of a duchess makes her way to Covent Garden and there joins the brisk crowd of buyers from town and country.

She mingles with them, keenly appraising the quality of produce and swiftly calculating whether it is worth the price asked or not.

For this niece of a duchess, the Hon. Flavia Forbes, is herself in the green-grocery business. For some months now she has been running a shop of that nature in a quiet little street off Belgravia, and though she finds the work hard, she is thoroughly enjoying it.

Miss Forbes is the daughter of Lady Angela St. Clair Erskine and niece of Millicent Duchess of Sutherland.

Good Old Earth Essential to Life

CAMBRIDGE, England, Dec. 21.—(C.P.)—Councillor Mrs. Stevenson of this city speaking before the National Union of Guilds for Citizenship said: "The English ideal is a cottage and a garden. Contact with the soil is essential to human life and nothing so endears a man to his house as being able to sit at Sunday dinner and watch his family eating cauliflowers and potatoes which he has grown himself."

"In Cambridge we are supplying cottages of three bedrooms, kitchen, bath, garden, etc. at from $192 to $264 per week and there is a waiting list of 1,800 families. The cottages cost about $1200."

"The Ministry of Health maintain that lodgings are all right for young couples with two or three children, and refuse to sanction their transfer to Council houses until larger families are accommodated. We feel that this postponement of real home life of young married people is anti-social. In the provinces we really burn at the dictatorship of London."

Mastered The Job

There is nothing of the "stunt" nature about her entry into the ranks of green-grocers. "When I decided to give up the social round with all its trivialities for some worth-while occupation and hit on this idea, I decided to learn the job thoroughly," she said, "and with that end in view I worked for a solid year as an assistant at a greengrocery shop in another part of London."

At first Miss Forbes, as well as doing the Covent Garden buying, also carried out the delivery of orders to the Mayfair residences of her customers, this part of her job taking her to the kitchen doors of houses at which in out-of-business hours she was often a guest.

An Old Fashioned Christmas Home

OTTAWA, Dec. 21.—(C.P.)Irene Dale in the Ottawa Journal says: "Gone are the days when mother and aunts and grandmas—if the family were fortunate enough to have one with them—and 'the hired girl' and everybody, spent weeks preparing delectable food in anticipation of Christmas festivities. About two weeks before Christmas the young people in the family with the mother's help, commenced to make candy. Batch after batch of fondant was made and put away to ripen, and a few days later, fruits nuts and flavorings were added and a most delectable array of confections produced. At that time one of the nicest of gifts was a box of home-made candy. It was so much more than an ordinary box of candy that one could buy anywhere. Usually it was packed and filled with the especial taste in flavoring and color of the recipient in mind, and when completed was worth more than any certificate or diploma in household science, as indicative of the degree of efficiency in the culinary art of the maker."

Merry Christmas
GOFF BROS., LTD.
Happy New Year

Homemade cooking sales to the contrary notwithstanding one wonders how many girls can make really good candy—not only fudge or maple cream but many kinds. True they do many things the girls of the 90's had not yet learned, but one is inclined to think a great deal of pleasure and profit as well as training have been lost through the present day tendency to buy everything ready made. During the Halloween festivities this year, the write observed that most of the youngsters were masquerading in costumes someone else had made, the decorations had been purchased, they were eating bought candy instead of making their own taffy and pulling it. Homemade decorations and costumes hastily improvised are much greater fun, and the training of imagination and fingers in producing these things for one's self is worth infinitely more than the finished perfection of the factory article.

He said he had been disillusioned while visiting the site of the city during a brief halt in the cruise.

"I like Pompeii as a picture," he declared, "but I hated the statues because they were so cold. 'Altogether Pompeii is a fake'"
