GARDENING

TIME FOR BULBS

Few phases of gardening are as simple and satisfactory as the culture of spring flowering bulbs.

This is the ideal time to plant these bulbs in most parts of Canada. In the warmer districts, the job maybe put off until late October.

It is important to get full sized, heavy bulbs, free from any mildew or other disease.

As a general rule these spring flowering bulbs are planted to a depth of three times the diameter.

Are Wives Responsible for Wrecked Marriages?

Dorothy Dix

Puts Blame on Both Parties

Wife Who Desires to be Kissed Must Keep Herself Kissable, But How Can a Woman Whisper Sweet Nothings in a Man's Ear While He Reads the Newspaper? — It Takes Two to Make a Happy Marriage

A man asserts that 99 per cent of the women who lose their husbands do so because they do not take the trouble to keep them, and that if wives would use the same allure and make as much effort to keep their husbands fascinated as they did to get them in the first place, matrimony would become a grand sweet song instead of the scrapping match it mostly is now.

easy and be certain that she had landed her catch, and that it wouldn't flop back into the stream and onto the line of some other fisher-woman.

For a woman's selling herself to her husband isn't a stunt that she can put over once and be done with. It is a job that she has to do over again every day as long as she lives if she keeps him content with his bargain, and prevents his turning covetous eyes on the newest thing in flappers with streamline effects and fresh paint and all the new gadgets.

And, alas, only too many women never realize this. They think because the men to whom they are married once loved them they will go on automatically loving them to the end of the chapter, no matter how unattractive and disagreeable they become.

Undoubtedly if all women kept up after marriage the art and wiles with which they lured their husbands into the holy estate, it would make a tremendous difference in domestic life.

It is much more agreeable to spend an evening at home with a wife who is cheerful and chatty and a good listener, who lends an attentive ear while her husband talks about himself and his plans and what he said to the boss and the boss said to him, than it is to have as a freside companion a wife who is a bore or a whiner or a complainer and whose only topic of conversation consists in demanding to know why he doesn't make as much money as some other man does.

Certainly the wife who desires to be kissed must keep herself kissable, and the one who wants to keep her husband glad he married her must wreath matrimony with roses instead of sticking it full of thorns.

But if women so often seem to fold away the glamour of courtship with their wedding veils, the fault is not always wholly theirs. Just as often it is the man's, because he would not play up to them, and no woman can give a very convincing impersonation of a Lady Love without a lover.

No woman can whisper sweet nothings to a man who doesn't even look up from his paper and who only grunts uh-huh when she tells him how much she loves him. No woman can put any temperature into a kiss when a man turns the rim of his ear to receive it.

Nor can any woman put much pep into doling herself up for hubby if she knows that instead of a compliment she is going to get a knock about the money she spends in beauty shops and that instead of telling her how becoming her new frock is he is going to demand to know what it cost and raise the roof over her extravagance.

And nobody can deny that there are millions of husbands who thus trample all of their wives' romantic dreams under foot, and make it im-

THOUGHTS

When I can make my thoughts come forth To walk like ladies up and down, Each one puts on before the glass Her most becoming hat and gown.

But oh, the shy and eager thoughts That hide and will not get them dressed,

Why is it that they always seem So much more lovely than the rest?

LOW-HEELED SHOES FOR FALL FOOTWEAR

Low heeled shoes have made their debut in Paris as the latest note in fall footwear fashions.

Heels only an inch high marked the kid and patent leather shoes which a leading designer displayed with street clothes in 1934 style shows.

Strapped pumps and a "theo" tie fastening well up on the instep are shown for afternoon wear, while oxfords are displayed as the correct shoe accessory to street suits.

Sandals and strapped pumps are the favorite evening models. They are generally fashioned of velvet or heavy crepe dyed to match the color of the gown and often finished with piping of gold or silver kid.

IODINE STAINS

When iodine is applied to children's cuts or bruises some of it generally manages to stain their clothes or handkerchiefs.

For a woman is to her husband just what he sees her to be, and if he sees her only as a cook or a nursemaid or a whipping girl on whom he can take out his ill-temper when things go wrong in business, why, that's all she is and all she can be.

No woman alone can keep her marriage from becoming sordid. That is a two-handed job that requires the united effort of both a husband and wife.

So it is folly to talk about wives holding husbands who want to get away, and who will not play the game. If they knew the secret of every vamp from Lilith down to Peggy Joyce, they still couldn't do it, because you can't put any pep into making love to a jellyfish or a refrigerator.

the part and rubbing in fresh bicarbonate of soda until the stain disappears. Then rinse well, and wash and iron in the usual manner. After this treatment there will be no trace of an iodine stain.

COLD IN THE HEAD EASILY TRANSMITTED

Although the ordinary cold in the head is passed from one person to another by the discharges from the throat and nose, it can also be transmitted in other ways.

All handkerchiefs should be boiled for at least three minutes after being used, otherwise the germs will not be killed.

One mustn't forget too, that the handkerchief goes back into one's pocket or bag after it is finished with, and thus infects them.

It is a wise precaution to disinfect them when the cold is better. Use a swab soaked in an antiseptic solution, such as carbolic. There is then no fear that the germs will be carried to pastures new.

LUCK

Luck doesn't float around the air and light on Tom Dick or Harry, just anyhow or anywhere.

The wit to know the thing you want, the will to work, the faith to fight,

The strength to use but tempered tools and only weapons honor-bright;

The spirit and the spunk to dare, the hope, the grit to bear,

And when disaster falls, the pluck to grin and start again— That's Luck!

Keep the Children Healthy

There must be iron and vitamins in a child's diet, for, without them, no child can thrive!

Pot Roast With Vegetables

4 pounds pot roast of beef Flour 4 tablespoons frying fat 1 cup dried apricots 1 cup chopped celery 1 cup sliced carrots 6 small potatoes Salt, pepper Parsley

Cover or dredge the meat with flour and sear in a heavy pan in the hot fat. When the meat is a deep brown on all sides add the washed apricots, celery, carrots and peeled potatoes. Season well with salt, pepper and minced parsley.

Beef Souffle With Tomato Sauce

Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter with two tablespoonfuls of flour, one scant teaspoonful of salt, two dashes of white pepper and one teaspoonful of onion juice. Add to this one pint of hot milk, and cook until it thickens.

Then add one pint of cold pot roast chopped fine, half a cupful of dried bread crumbs, rolled fine, and the yolks of three eggs.

Take from fire and add the whites beaten stiff.

Bake for 25 minutes in individual cups or, if preferred, in one large baker, in a pan of boiling water.

Serve with tomato sauce. Cold mutton, chicken or lamb may be used.

HEARTS AFIRE

By MARY CHRISTIE

CHAPTER 42 A PRAYER

Whatever shall I do? Over and over in the girl's distraught brain the helpless, hopeless thought reiterated.

A dollar and fifty cents with which to face the world. No, there was another fifty cent piece that she hadn't counted! That made two dollars.

But—could one get a bed in the city for that price?

Her lamentable ignorance of life rushed at her like a devastating torrent, almost submerging her with terror of the future.

What was there for a girl like her to do?

The monotonous murmur of the wheels got on her nerves until she could have screamed aloud. They seemed to taunt her with a sound like—'Nothing . . . nothing . . . nothing! . . . over and over again, in a jibing refrain.

How long did the train take, until it reached the city? Twenty minutes past eleven now! New York was a long way off. Three hurst Buildings are!

How long did the train take, until it reached the city? Twenty minutes past eleven now! New York was a long way off. Three hurst Buildings are!

Frightened run-away, fervently wishing she'd stood ground at home, and got her nerve to tell Mrs. Van-altair, quietly and coherently, how truly innocent she was of the unfortunate affair at Winston Towers.

"It will look exactly as though I were guilty!" she thought miserably, as the train whirled her at express speed through the night.

But the longest, dearest journey does come to an end, and at half past two A. M., the weary girl found herself in the big deserted terminus, with a few sleepy porters staring curiously at her, and not a place to go!

She went out into the streets and tried to get a quiet-appearing hotel. But the night porter wouldn't let her in. It was strictly against his orders, he told the girl, with an unpleasant wink, to admit stray young women without luggage.

Prudence felt great waves of shame sweep over her, and blindly turned away.

Even though it meant courting sure rebuff she tried another hotel or two, only to meet with similar experience. No, they had no rooms for her. The wording was sometimes curt, very often brutal, but even when the hotel-clerk put it kindly, saying the place was 'full', she was made to feel her position openly.

Twice she asked the way to Midhurst Buildings. No one knew its whereabouts.

Once a furtive-looking creature spoke to her, mumbling something in her ear. Prudence, terrified, turned and ran, for nearly a mile.

There, panting for breath, she leaned against some buildings, until a burly policeman told her brusquely to 'move on, please.'

Feeling like a criminal, she dragged on to a big open square. It was an extraordinarily hot night for May, and not a breath of air was stirring.

In the square ten down-and-outers slumbered, fotsam and jetsam flung hither and thither by life. "Shall I become like one of these one day?" thought the heartick girl, vistas of a friendless future rising up before her, without home, money, friends, or love.

What would Peter Armstrong think, if he could see her now? Tomorrow the countryside would ring with the story of the theft. Would he believe her guilty?

"Flying Boat"

EAST PITTSBURGH, Sept. 16.—The "flying boat" has come through its first practical test with "flying colors", according to Dr. Oscar Titjens, noted for his research in stream-lining of airplanes, racing automobiles, Zeppelins and railway cars.

A 14-foot boat with a normal maximum speed of about 12 miles an hour was used in the test. When converted to a "flying boat," by attachment of hydrofoils, or wing-like planes, the craft attained a speed of about 24 miles an hour on the Delaware River at Essington, Pa.

"The hydrofoils act in water as an airfoil acts in air," Dr. Titjens said. "When a certain speed is reached the airfoil, or wing edge, lifts an airplane off the ground into the air. Similarly, my hydrofoil lifts the boat clear of the water."

EGG WHOLESALER The definition of a "wholesaler" in the egg regulations includes any person who sells eggs to anyone for resale, or to any restaurant, hospital, hotel, boarding house, bakery, logging, mining, or construction camp, transportation company or other organization for its or their use in baking or cooking or for serving to inmates, guests, patrons or employees— Dominion Live Stock Branch.
