In Memoriam

DANIEL H. MACLAREN
The people of Souris and surrounding districts were shocked to hear of the unexpected death on Friday, January 24th, of Daniel Henry MacLaren, aged 44 years. The deceased had lived in Souris all his life being employed as clerk at Matthew and MacLean's for the past ten years, previous to which he was truck driver for the same firm. His ready smile and willingness to serve made him many friends. He acted as Fire Chief of the Town for several years a duty which he capably filled. Besides his aged father there are left to mourn the passing of a devoted husband and father, his sorrowing wife and six small children, Margaret, Wendell, Martin, Billy, Barbara, Anne and Ray. The funeral was held on Sunday, January 26th, from St. James United Church which was largely attended by a concourse of friends and neighbours, members of the Fire Department attended in a body. Rev. W. A. MacQuarrie, conducted the funeral service both at the church and graveside. THE PEACE OF GOD

Without a thought of literary effect the writers of the Gospels often achieved it in a remarkable degree. An example can be found in the fourteenth to seventeenth chapters of St. John, perhaps the most lovely and most loved pages of the New Testament. No literary artist could have contrived more skilfully to convey their special atmosphere, or to suggest more fully the contrast between the serenity of the upper room, where the Master brings peace of mind to his disciples, with those tumultuous scenes of violence which follow, and the excited babble of the Jerusalem streets at Passover-time. "Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid," Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you." So in that little haven of quiet, cut off as it were by his power from the storms of the world, the words of St. John, in after years St. Paul, knowing from experience the reality of the gift, wished for his Philippian friends that they also might know the peace of God which passeth all understanding. That phrase has become the more familiar because it is incorporated in the blessing which, in the English Prayerbook, ends the service of Holy Communion. Yet the exact force of the sentence seems often to be misunderstood. To say that the peace of God is not merely to declare that it is unimagineably deep, or greater than anyone could understand. Rather the phrase indicates the quality and end of the divinely given peace. There are two different ways in which freedom from anxiety may be gained, of which the first is knowledge and the second personal trust in a Human knowledge and human comprehension of God's ways, must always remain imperfect. But where understanding is halted, trust can go forward. Those who suffer from disquieted minds are unlikely to find the tranquillity they seek if they demand that it must be justified by complete understanding. It is the other peace, independent of and passing all understanding, brought by personal trust in a personal God, which alone can fulfil their need.

Learn Job First

For the man to make up his mind that housework is an easy job just because he didn't get worn out drying the dishes for one meal or got through a day of taking care of the children, after his wife had left the house in apple-pie order, cooked enough food to last all day and promised to be home in time to get dinner on the table and put the kids to bed, is comparable to a woman's going to her husband's office, taking a few telephone calls, straightening up his desk and then saying: "Your job's a snap." And if you've any more comments like Thomas Bennett, how about sticking to a subject you know something about—temporary housing, for instance?

NURSES THROUGH REFRESHER COURSE

An over-flow attendance was reported today by the McGill school of graduate nurses at the refresher course on "Head Nurse and Clinical Supervision" which is being given on Wednesday evenings by Miss Marion Lindburgh, director of the school, and special lecturers. Some 200 nurses enrolled for the course which had to be moved from the spacious classroom of the Biological Building on the campus. Hospitalists represented in the registrants include Royal Victoria, Neurologist, Allen Memorial, Montreal General, St. Mary's, Queen Mary's Military Hospital, St. Anne's Military Hospital, Children's Memorial, Verdun Protestant, Ruddy Memorial, Homeopathic, Shriners, Royal Edward Laurentian, Grace Dart and the Lachine General.

over the radio even before the newspapers have it, and when we do our shopping by telephone, we are not dependent upon neighbors, as our grandparents were. Nevertheless, something very fine, sweet and gracious went out of life when we had no more neighbors. Now they are only some people who live next door, whose names we don't even bother to find out.

The good neighbor spirit is gone, but the need for it right now is just as great as it ever was in the pioneer days. For the war has torn thousands of people up by the roots from their old homes and shifted them to different parts of the country, where they are strangers in a strange land to whose ways and customs they do not know how to adapt themselves.

They are lonesome. Especially the women. They are homesick, hungry for woman talk. They miss their old groups, their old clubs, their bridge foursomes. At home they were somebody. They headed committees and organized charities. There wasn't an activity in church, or politics, or society in which they did not have a finger.

But in the strange new place to which they have been transported, they are nobodies. Even when they bring their identification card along in the shape of a letter of introduction, all they get is the polite gesture of an invitation to a tea or a cocktail party. Or, perhaps, they are asked to join a club where they remain on the outside fringe, instead of getting into the very heart of things. And sometimes, it is years before anybody calls them by their Christian name.

It isn't because people are snobby that the stranger within our gates so often goes through the purgatory of loneliness. It is just because everyone has his own friends and his own set in whom they are more interested than he is in outsiders, and because he does not realize how cruel he is in never holding out a welcome hand to the new comer.

Let's revive the old good neighbor spirit and put welcome on our doorsteps for the new arrivals in our midst.

so," she said. "It was a dingy waiting room and a rather dingy doctor, but he was a human old fellow. "Ah! Miss Petanel. I'm glad you're better. Your mother told me of the operation." "This gentleman knew mother years ago, doctor." "Indeed." "Is it advisable for her to enter a home?" Brereton asked. "An inebriated home? It might be—that is, if she would go. Her heart is in a bad way apart from her—or—trouble. Such homes are expensive." "That doesn't matter—in reason." "But I doubt if she'd go. It would mean rigid abstinence—in most of them." "It might. Usually, in my experience, the effect is not permanent." "Would a nurse be of any use?" "That, too, I doubt. You see she isn't ill in the ordinary sense—unless alcoholism is a disease. It would take more than a nurse, I'm afraid, to keep her away from it." "Have you any suggestion, doctor?" "It's a bad case," he said. "If supplies were cut off, she would probably collapse. There is always that danger in such cases." "Has she been like this long, Sonia?" "On and off for two years. If I'm with her I can reason with her sometimes. And—and limit supplies." "Have you seen her to-day?" the doctor asked. "Yes," said Sonia. "How is she now?" "Very bad." "I'll look in to-morrow morning and see how she responds to the suggestion." "Will you be so good, doctor, as to see that everything that can be done for her is done?" Brereton asked. "I am responsible." He gave the doctor his card. "I'm sorry I can't see her to-day." "I'm going on to my club for an hour or so," he said. "I'll meet you outside the flat at seven this evening. Meantime you'll want some money," he went on. He took out a case and gave her five five-pound notes. "But I don't want all this," she protested. "It's always useful," he said with a smile. "Until seven, my dear!" We hope to be able to supply our Fertilizer Customers with their reasonable requirements. Our being able to manufacture after the fire of October 10th which completely destroyed our Factory and Machinery was made possible by the efforts of Premier Jones and his colleagues, who procured for us the use of Hangars at the Airport near Charlottetown. Deliveries will be made from this Airport and from Summerside where the Summerside Fertilizer Company kindly consented to manufacture some for us. We can now deliver from Charlottetown 4-8-10-1M and Superphosphate, and from Summerside 3-15-6, 4-8-10-1M, 5-10-10-1M and Superphosphate. Other mixed Fertilizers will not be available before April. Nitrogen-supplying materials and Potash are at present in short supply resulting in the time of delivery being uncertain.

FERTILIZER

Prices Ex Factory in Paper Bags, and subject to change without notice are:

	Per Ton	3-15-6	Per Ton
Ammonium Nitrate	$80.10		$36.34
Cyanamid	48.30	3-15-6-3B	39.30
Sulphate of Ammonia	44.50	4-8-10	33.90
Superphosphate 20%	27.50	4-8-10-1M	34.50
Muriate of Potash 60%	51.40	5-10-10	37.90
		5-10-10-1M	38.90

FERTILIZER FACTS

In the following table we make an endeavour to show the plant food content of various Mixed Fertilizers, commonly offered for sale in this Province, and to indicate the relation in quantities of the materials from which they are made.

Pounds Materials That Will Make One Ton

Formula	Units Plant Food in one ton	Price per ton ex our Factory	Sulphate of Ammonia 20%	Super-Phosphate 20%	Muriate of Potash 60%	Other Materials sometimes called Filler	Total Pounds
2-12-6	20	$31.20	200	1200	200	400	2000
3-15-6	24	36.30	300	1500	200	None	2000
4-8-10	22	33.90	400	800	334	466	2000
5-10-10	25	37.90	500	1000	334	166	2000

In the above table Sulphate of Ammonia is shown as the only source of Nitrogen. In factory practice Cyanamid and Ammonium Nitrate are used in addition. These aggravate further the filler situation. When Borax or Magnesium is used the quantity of filler is slightly reduced.

2-12-6 and 3-15-6 are largely used for similar crops—Grain, Hay, Turnips and Pastures. The latter contains more plant food and less "other materials", resulting in a lower cost per unit for the plant food. 4-8-10 and 5-10-10 are largely used for Potatoes. The latter contains more plant food and less "other materials", resulting in a lower cost per unit for the plant food.

"Other Materials" is usually Limestone, Sand, or a mixture of both. There is a limit to the quantity of Limestone that can be safely added to Mixed Fertilizers.
