Big Seizure Of Illegally Fished Lobsters

By using the highly unusual device of spotting from the air, much as they used to spot submerged submarines during the war, from five to eight tons of live lobsters fished out of season in the vicinity of Alberton have been recovered and returned to the sea. The operation was conducted by members of the Department of Fisheries in patrol boats with the assistance of one of Paul's Flying School planes with a fisheries inspector on board.

For some time it has been suspected that poaching operations on a large scale were being conducted in this area but it has been difficult to combat until this scheme was organized. When the men in the plane spotted a crate they would drop a net to the boat and the men in the boat would search the area till they found it. The lobsters were kept in large traps or crates, some of them floating and others on the bottom.

Fifteen Crates In One Area

On discovery, the lobsters were released. In one instance fifteen crates were located in one area, each of which contained about 200 pounds of lobsters of all sizes packed tightly together.

It is understood that no prosecutions will follow as the result of these seizures because while the identity of most of the poachers is suspected there is no evidence that might warrant a conviction.

The value of spotting from the air in combatting poaching is considered to be very great and it has been suggested that if a pontoon equipped plane were provided it would be much better because they could find the scene of suspected illegal fishing operations and obtain evidence for court proceedings.

It has been reported that on one day in daylight seven boats were hauling traps out of season but the identity of the persons concerned could not be detected from the air. After the lobsters are fished out of season they are either sold on the mainland or are packed illegally and sold by the can. - S.

FIRST FIELD

After the official words of welcome, Mr. R. C. Parent, Superintendent of the Experimental Farm, announced to the large gathering of visitors that two separate tours would be conducted through different parts of the farm. Those wishing to view experimental work in field crops and livestock should follow him but those who had an interest in horticulture and poultry should join the tour being conducted by Mr. E. F. Tinney, Assistant Superintendent, and Mr. G. C. Warren, Assistant in Horticulture.

Mr. Parent's group first visited the barns where the visitors were shown the famous bull "Evans Sir Roderick" and his son "Charlottetown Sir Roderick VII." The sire is being used extensively to improve the quality of stock by means of artificial insemination. Mr. Parent explained, as well as on the Farm's own herd. The next item of interest proved to be the pig testing station for advanced registration which are kept pigs "as fine as may be found anywhere in North America," stated Mr. Parent. These hogs are from prominent breeders around the province.

Tour Fields

As the tour continued through the fields the Superintendent commented on the growing size of the Farm. This year the 168 acres have been supplemented by two additional purchases of 62 and 163 acres together with a woodlot to be used for experimental purposes.

MEMORIAL SERVICES

ST. JOHN'S PRESBYTERIAN, BELFAST (The Church Of The Pioneers) Sunday, August 29th, 3 p.m., Rev. R. S. Quigley, Ph.D., will speak on - "THE SELKIRK SETTLERS: THEIR TASK AND OURS" Special Music by the Choir, assisted by "The Brooklyn Trio" and Mr. William Williamson, soloist. Dedication of Bronze Plaque, presented by Mr. George Sinclair, son of the Rev. A. MacLean Sinclair, a former minister of the church. An Offering will be taken for the Cemetery Fund.

MR. W. R. SHAW (Continued from Page 1) operation it could not be a success. He noted that the reports from the various Junior Farmer organizations seemed to have a good deal to say about the organization of sports centres. Sport was necessary, but he thought he should remind them that life was far from being a sports affair and that agriculture and its development was a serious business to which one must give serious study and attention in order to succeed. He believed that the young people should have their sport and their social affairs as well but that their program should be that it would be well-balanced.

Requires Much No profession in the world, Mr. Shaw said, required more of a man than the study of agriculture. Changes in the Province for plant diseases, for soil fertility, for soil conservation, for animal breeding, and a hundred and one other things necessitated up-to-date reading and a general agricultural training which required the best any man or woman had to give.

Mr. Shaw predicted that within the next few years the methods of transportation would be revolutionized in the Province. Already, he said, shipments of such farm products as strawberries were going in large quantities to the United States and Newfoundland by air. Referring to the aerial service which United States and Great Britain are now conducting to bring food to Berlin, he said it may not be too long before some of the farmer's other products will be flown vast distances by air.

Mr. S. C. Wright, fieldman for the Provincial Department of Agriculture and head of the club organization in the Province, outlined the number of teams which will be allowed to represent the Province in the various contests at the Maritime Winter Fair. The livestock judging, Mr. Wright said, will have five teams; there will be two members in the seed contest; and two for the public speaking contest. Any member of a junior club or any member of the Junior Farmers' organization, eligible between the ages of 16 and 25 are eligible.

Reports Read Brief reports of the activities being carried on by the following local Junior Farmer organizations were read: Beedee, Milton, Hillsborough, St. Peter's, Eastern Star, Farmington, and St. Margaret's.

Resolutions were unanimously passed (1) that the Junior Farmers should co-operate with the Women's Institute, Credit Union League and various church organizations throughout the fall and winter on problems affecting the welfare of the young people of the Province; (2) that the Provincial Government be requested to hold the annual leadership course from Jan. 3 to Jan. 8 including (3) that thanks be extended to the Provincial Government, local Experimental Farm, Department of Physical Fitness, and all other departments or organizations which had contributed to the success of the fair day.

Mr. Lloyd Martin, Cherry Valley, vice-president of the Junior Farmers, presided.

Following the business meeting the floor was cleared by the young people for dancing.
