

"You've heard of Burning the Candle at both ends."

Life today is constant effort. From seven to six it's usually work, then a hurried meal, off to a dance, a seat at the "movies" or other amusement, to bed at eleven or later and the same thing all over again tomorrow.

To offset this constant wear and tear on your nerves and body you need a tonic that will enrich the blood, restore your exhausted vitality, a real tissue and strength builder. VINOL is the best thing we can recommend to do this and it will do it quickly—

TALES TOLD BY MEN IN THE FIGHTING LINES ON LAND AND SEA

CANADIAN "SANGFROID"

A Toronto reservist, a non-commissioned officer in the 21st British Field Ambulance, writes:

"The Canadian contingent has caused no little envy among the regulars, because the very high wages paid. A number of good tales are told about the 'boys from God's country.'"

"The best is that of a Toronto lad on sentry, who failed to recognize his Brigadier-General. The B. G. turned and called back to the sentry: 'Why don't you salute your superior officer?' To which, I am reliably informed, the Toronto lad, quite unabashed by the 'choking off,' replied: 'Come again, I didn't getchun.' It took some time for the B. G. to grasp the meaning of the sentry's words, but he probably was converted to the uselessness of a bilingual system in Ontario.

"Another good one 'going the rounds,' is that of a Montreal lad who stayed out late a few nights ago. Wishing to save a long walk, he jumped into an auto standing conveniently near and drove off, without asking the permission of the car's owner. When some distance from town he espied a soldier walking along and good-naturedly offered to give him a lift. The soldier accepted and listened attentively for nearly half an hour to the Montreal man's story of his auto-stealing exploit. Suddenly the latter asked: 'By the way, what's your name?' The pick-up responded promptly: 'I'm General.' The 'chauffeur' promptly applied the brakes, brought the car to a standstill, reached in his pocket and found a flashlight, which he flashed into the general's face. Why, he asked: 'Gee, it's handy I came along with the car, isn't it?' The British regulars can't understand why the 'Canuck' didn't get a court-martial, but it is understood his only punishment was to return the car 'very stealthily' shortly after daybreak the following morning."

DOMINEERED BY GERMANS

A Turin merchant on his return after a long visit to Constantinople writes:

"The outward aspect of the city is normal. The habitus apathy of the Turks makes them more or less indifferent even in the face of the grievous fate which is at their very doors. This state of feeling is further fostered by the one-sided optimistic official communications, the passive conduct of the newspapers, and the fact that the ruthless scissoring of the censorship, and to the fact that food prices have not gone up by leaps and bounds as in Germany and Austria-Hungary. However, among the more intelligent section of the population dire forebodings underlie the apparent calm, and indeed broke into open panic on the occasion when the British submarine penetrated as far as Seraklio Point and did its deadly work. In any case, a popular revolt seems out of the question for the Government has taken stringent steps to sequester all private stores of firearms in order to supply the army.

What is worse felt is the notable shrinkage of the water supply consequent upon the shortage of coal. Drinking water is derived from springs, and necessitates a huge consumption of coal for drawing it up into aqueducts. This lack of coal, too, is severely shackling local industries particularly the electric mills for grain grinding. Hardly any coal is now getting through from Germany, the simple reason that Bulgaria has not a sufficient number of trucks available. I can testify that enormous quantities of war material generally are reaching the Turkish forces masked as merchandise for Red Cross purposes.

Havoc by British Shells

The Turkish resistance has been reduced to a mere economic problem, for the day when the passage of war supplies across the Balkan railways ceases altogether will mean Turkey's death-blow. When I left the Government was initiating measures to compel all factories and workshops for the purpose to start manufacturing munitions. Nearly all the local garrisons have been depleted. All soldiers not actually at the front and even policemen, have had their repeating rifles taken away, and have been given the old type breechloaders instead. About 20,000 Germans still domineer Constantinople—the bulk of them officers and military Greek officers of Turkey, with whom I talked on their return from Gallipoli, were unanimous in their description of the terrible havoc wrought by the British artillery. The soil of the war one is everywhere ploughed up by their tremendous projectiles, and Turkish files have literally been mown down owing to the Allies' marked superiority in quick firing guns. Despite the ingenuity exercised to hide the arrival of wounded in the capital and other hospital centres, it is widely realized that their numbers are far in excess of the official announcements.

I remember one day when 600 were expected, seeing six big steamers come in crammed with victims. The mortality rate among them is deplorably high. I can name you hospitals sheltering over 1,000 wounded where the medical staff consists of only three doctors—and very few of them! Let me give you an instance. One day a poor fellow was brought in frightfully lacerated by a bursting grenade, and a "specialist" received an urgent summons to come and amputate both legs. The specialist was a Greek horse doctor.

THEIR LAST FIGHTING

A private from Vancouver in Princess Patricia's Regiment, in a letter to friends in England, describes one of the last fierce actions in which the regiment took part. "In the midst of the shelling the Germans tried to advance under cover of their fire, but they were beaten back again and again. Our fellows held on like lions, and although men were being mowed down, they held the line until relieved by another regiment. We lost most of our officers killed and wounded. We were pretty well cut up when a certain British regiment came to support us. They were the proper sample of the British bulldog breed. They came to our aid in a terrible shower of shell and shrapnel fire. They calmly jumped in among us, set their Maxim guns, and handed us cigarettes. They told us that they were a little out of wind, as they had had quite a run. You may be sure they won our admiration, and we gave them quite a cheer as they came up.

Deadly Shelling

"Early next morning we were relieved and rested that day. The following day we had a very hard day's work. Broad daylight, under heavy shell fire, and the Germans seemed to have an open road. We had to crawl like snakes along a drain by the side of the road, as we were on to Maxim and rifle fire as well. One of my friends was shot in the head at the time. He and I, with another young fellow who was killed a couple of days before had worked in Vancouver together, joined together, and had been together most of the time. My second friend was about ten feet ahead of me when a shell burst, and he got cut in the head. After lying there a couple of minutes he looked up and told me he was hit. I went to him and started to take the field dressing out of his coat to bind up his wound when a shell burst—right in my face as it seemed. I was shot in the head, and he died in a few minutes. He never regained consciousness, so I just crawled over his body and continued my journey, as the troops must have ammunition at all costs. I was rather cut up at losing my two friends in a couple of days like that. Well, I got safely back, and on the way buried my comrade along with another fellow. I just made a rough wooden cross for him and one of the boys put his name etc., on it while another said a few words of prayer. So we departed."

SLEEPING IN A GRAVEYARD

Sapper R. Logue, Canadian Engineers, writing to his sister in Scotland, says: "I have slept in some queer places since I came to this country, but this is the first time I have slept in a graveyard. Of course, the country all around this part is a huge graveyard, but where I have to sleep at present is a regular graveyard, with wooden crosses up. On one cross there are the simple words: 'Here lie the remains of three gallant British soldiers, and no names.'"

LATEST FROM THEATRE

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE, BOSTON

"The Blindness of Virtue" will begin the third week of its run on October 18th, at the Castle Square Theatre. "Common Clay" was put on last year has a play given by the Craig Players made such an instantaneous hit with the public as has "The Blindness of Virtue."

It would seem as if every mother and daughter in Boston were taking the advice of Mary Young and mother in this play which teaches such a powerful lesson to parents.

"Don't let your daughters struggle blindly through the awakening years of their womanhood. If you do, you are not fit to be a mother." is a line of Gosmo Hamilton's drama.

The story is of a girl who is not told by her mother of the physical facts of existence and through her ignorance she is nearly betrayed. It is only her guilelessness that keeps her father from believing that she has lost her innocence through love for young Archie Graham.

Miss Young, William P. Carleton, Betty Barnicot, Donald Meek, Theodore Friebus, Mrs. Vida Sidney and Justine Adams are in the cast.

CANNOT EXPECT TO WALK OVER SERBIA

AMSTERDAM, via London, Oct. 15.—Major Morha, military correspondent of the Berliner Tageblatt, in reviewing the military situation, says: "We must not expect that the operations in Serbia will proceed with any exceptional speed or that we shall march with colors flying to Nish and Prishina."

"Sanguinary protracted firing is certain and there probably will be guerrilla warfare behind our lines and on our flanks."

"We have had no war experience in this mountain country, and must therefore regard the enemy as formidable, especially as they know they are fighting for their existence."

FAREWELL SERVICE TO SIEGE BATTERY NO. 2

The world they were ready, but their main purpose was to live and serve the cause. I do not like this idea of people feeling that when a man puts on the King's uniform he is sentenced to death. It is not worthy of us in a free country. I do not know of anything that will cause us to look with such respect on manhood as to see a man wearing the King's uniform. He is not sentenced to death, but the man has dedicated himself on the noblest altar of history. In these old days, men were required to give their lives, not their mere bodies, unblemished, pure and spotless to the service of their God and country. Men, that is what I ask from you today. You are going into a holy cause. You must serve in purity of spirit, you must give God the very best that is in you. You must keep your lives as those who are serving a God who cannot tolerate anything that is unclean. Men, you are going where the world's greatest product will be seen at its best, and that great product is clean, strong manhood. You will see the men of Australia and New Zealand, the men of every British possession, and such men as only the British Empire can produce. We are sure that you will make us proud of Canada. That you will go in the strength of pure, consecrated manhood to do and to dare for God and the Empire, that for all time to come Canada and Canada's soldiers will be a word to conjure by, when men talk of that which is great and heroic. It is of the essence of sacrifice that we should give the purest—that we should give entirely without reserve. In the Jewish system of sacrifice the victim was laid on the altar and entirely consumed. There were no conditions connected with that offering. It was given with a free will and entirely. So when you give yourself to King and Empire let it be in that spirit. Men often talked of their rights and I know what it is to feel the spirit of revolt against injustice. I know how men often say they have no right to be deprived of certain privileges, that the officers have no right to order this. Men, when we have given ourselves on the altar we have done with that. We have to trust to the men who are as good as ourselves, men who have the interests of the camp at heart, men who will do the best that in them lies for every man in the ranks.

"When General Colin Campbell in the Crimean war said to his men, 'Men, will you follow me?' as he led them up to the opposing Russian lines. 'Yes, we will follow you to the Russian ranks and to Hell, if necessary.' That is the way I would like you to look upon your action.
