ENGLISH TOWN GETS A SCARE

(Special to The Guardian.)

LONDON, Dec. 22.—Extraordinary scenes took place in Dukinfield, on the border of Cheshire and Lancashire, about 6 o'clock Wednesday evening when a severe thunderstorm and blizzard broke over the town. Chimney pots and slates were sent flying in all directions and in the Main Street a number of people were thrown down by the force of the storm. In view of the end of the world story many women became hysterical and rushed about looking for refuge.

MR. IRWIN'S PRINTERY CONVERTED INTO COMPANY

The Well-Known Printing Business of Mr. Archibald Irwin Floated as a Joint Stock Company.

Mr. Archibald Irwin, has converted his large and steadily growing printery, book-binding, and paper ruling business into a joint stock company with capital of $40,000. Mr. Irwin has had long and extensive experience in the business, having been practically all his life a printer.

Nineteen years ago he started business on his own account, and by steady application to business and the adoption of the most modern appliances, combined with artistic taste and systematic methods, succeeded in reaching the front rank of printers, not only in Charlottetown but in the Maritime Provinces. No better work is turned out anywhere than from the printery of Mr. Irwin. He has found it necessary to increase his premises on more than one occasion to cope with the increase of business, and now finds that he is again crowded to capacity. The reason is not far to seek for his motto in business is "Quality and Service." He has during the past years retrieved many thousands of dollars heretofore spent with Montreal and Toronto houses for loose leaf printing and intricate business forms which local houses were not in a position to handle.

Gradually, however, Mr. Irwin has procured the very best machinery procurable in order to be able to complete with foreign houses, and today it is possible to obtain at home the class of work demanded by modern houses.

About a year ago, a Lanston Monotype was installed, and this machine, which is the acknowledged superior of all composing machines for book composition, places the office on an equality with the largest plants in Canada in relation to book work and general composition, rendering the establishment independent of labor shortage and avoiding all delay owing to limited supply of material. The Monotype is equal, as regards output, to a force of eight or ten compositors and the type supply is unfailing as long as there is metal at hand for the melting pot.

With all these latest time and labor-saving devices it is not surprising that Mr. Irwin's trade has grown so quickly as to demand further expanding, and next year it is his intention to build a modern plant on his lot on Rochford Street between Grafton and Richmond Streets.

In this building in which care will be taken to secure modern convenience, comfort and efficiency, Irwin Printing Company Ltd., proposes to continue to handle their trade and reach out for much more work which it has been impossible to look after because of lack of space and for want of the proper machinery.

The objects for which the new company seeks incorporation are set out as follows:

To build, operate and maintain a plant for the purpose of carrying on the business of printing and bookbinding in all its branches.

To print and publish newspapers, books, pamphlets and commercial printing of every description. To operate and maintain cylinder and platen presses and to sell and trade in all the products thereof. To operate offset presses and presses for printing on wood and tin and to sell and deal in the products thereof.

To design illustrations and to operate and maintain plants for the manufacture of printing cuts from such illustrations or other objects by the zinc etching, halftones, or other photographic or direct processes and to use and sell the same.

To operate monotypes, linotypes, intertypes, or other typesetting machines or slug making machines for the composition required for newspapers, books, periodicals, catalogues, pamplets or general job printing and to use and sell the matter composed on such machines; and to operate type casting machines and to sell the material made thereon.

To do all kinds of color printing for labels and illustrated work.

To design and to make rubber stamps and to sell the same.

To do embossing and die stamping by relief or other processes.

To make and print paper and cardboard cartons and boxes.

To do Bookbinding in all its branches, including edition work, extra forwarding, blank book manufacturing, edge golding, marbling and the allied branches.

To operate ruling, perforating, punching and numbering machines, wire stitchers, power paper cutters and such other machines as may be necessary or required in the Printing and Bookbinding business.

To make and deal in all kinds of loose leaf binders and loose leaf sheets, indexes, flyers, etc., and to manufacture same.

To operate special presses for the manufacture of retailers' counter check books and to sell the same.

To employ travellers and canvassers to secure orders for and to dispose of the products of the said company, or of other firms, companies or individuals.

To purchase and deal in all kinds of news and book papers, flat papers, tag and tagboard, envelopes of every description, gum paper, coated and litho paper, pulp board and cardboard, printing ink and such other supplies as are required for the Printing and bookbinding business and to use and sell the same.

The shareholders mentioned in the application are Archibald Irwin, A. Malcolm Irwin, Wm. G. Gillispie, Isaac Carter, S. A. MacLeod and others, and the Guardian wishes the new concern every success.

Is a Well And Happy Man Now

GRATEFUL SYDNEY MINER WOMAN WANTS WORLD TO KNOW HOW TANLAC HELPED HER

"I just feel so happy over what Tanlac has done for me that I have come in here today to tell you about it and I want you to publish it to the world," was the enthusiastic statement made the other day by Mrs. James Watson of Sydney Mines, Nova Scotia, when she called at Turnbull's drug store in Sydney.

"It was about three years ago that indigestion first began to trouble me," continued Mrs. Watson, "and my condition grew worse and worse each year. It looked like every single thing I ate soured on my stomach and caused so much gas to form that it pressed up around my heart and made breathing difficult. I would have a dull, heavy feeling about me all the time and I would have severe feeling about me all the time and I would have severe pains all through my chest and sides. I could hardly retain a thing I had eaten and I would have such awful headaches that I would become dizzy and my head felt like it was spinning round. I was so nervous and miserable it was hard for me to ever get any rest or sleep and whenever I did it was broken and irregular. As I had no strength and energy my housework was a torture to me and from morning till night it was a task for me to drag myself about.

"As I had heard a lot about Tanlac, I made up my mind to quit everything else I was trying and take it. I felt better after the very first bottle and now I have just finished my fourth bottle, and I feel so fine I can't tell I was ever troubled in my life. My appetite is better than it has been for years and I can eat anything I want and not have a sign of indigestion. My breathing is free and easy and I can retain what I eat and I am never bothered with pains in my sides or chest. The headaches and nervousness have entirely left me and I sleep like a child every night that comes. I have more strength and energy than I have had in years and my housework is a real pleasure to me. I am so grateful over my happy condition that I stop and tell everybody I see about Tanlac and how it has restored me to perfect health."

Tanlac is sold in Charlottetown by Reddin Bros in Montague by H. J. Mabon, in Georgetown by Seymour C. Knight in Souris by James G. Ferguson, in Kensington by Kier & McFadgen and in Emerald Junction by P. F. Hughes.

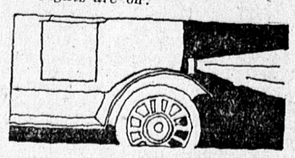
HINTS FOR The Motorist

BY ALBERT L. CLOUGH

ELECTRIC TAIL-LIGHT ON FORD

H. N. asks: How can I connect an electric tail-lamp on my Ford, so that it shall light when the headlamps are put on

Answer: On Fords of recent model the tail-lamp bulb should be of 2 candle-power and 18 volts. A wire should be run from the connection of the regular lighting-switch, to which the head light wire is connected, back to the tail-lamp. If the tail-lamp is arranged to use a single-contact bulb it will be necessary to so mount the lamp that it shall make an electric connection with the frame of the car. If a double-contact bulb is used, one of its contacts should be connected to the wire from the switch and a wire from the other contact should be run to a firm electrical connection on the car frame. With this arrangement the tail-light will burn whenever the headlights are on.



WOOD ALCOHOL ANTI-FREEZE MIXTURE

R. R. asks: What proportion of wood alcohol should be used in the radiator to prevent freezing and how often should it be replenished?

Answer: A mixture of three quarts of wood alcohol and seven quarts of water will resist freezing down to a temperature of about five degrees above zero and a mixture of four quarts of wood alcohol and six quarts of water will not freeze above 25 degrees below zero. If the cooling system is free from leaks and all loss of liquid is due to evaporation it is a safe practice to keep the system full by adding alcohol only. The hotter the radiator runs, the oftener you will have to replenish the mixture to make up for evaporation.

ETHER-ALCOHOL FUEL IMPROVE MIXTURE

P. G. Y. asks: Can I use ether mixed with gasoline, as regular fuel during cold weather and obtain benefit from it? How much ether is required for each five gallons of gasoline and will its use injure the engine? What do you think of using moth-balls dissolved in the gasoline?

Answer: You may care to try the following receipt, which is well recommended: Make a mixture of two parts ether and one part of denatured alcohol and add one and one-half pints of this to each five gallons of gasoline. It is said to make starting easier and the alcohol is claimed to reduce carbonization. Its use will not injure your engine. Pure ether such as sold at drug stores is not necessary, the much cheaper commercial variety being just as good. So far as we have ever been able to ascertain, there is nothing in the moth-ball scheme.

The Woman who Loved —And Earned

A Modern Story of Home and Business

ANOTHER EVENING SPENT AMONG ROBERT'S MARRIED FRIENDS

CHAPTER X.

I told Mary Ryan about our visitors, and what Robert had said about entertaining them.

"Sure, you don't know anything about cookin'! I knew you would get up against it before you'd been hitched up very long. Men is queer animals. They like a woman to be wearing a work apron over her dress during the day, and when he comes home a little frilly one that makes her look like a domestic sort of bird. That little frilly apron will do more things to a man in a minute, than all that marcelled hair and stylish clothes can do in a year. He just loves it, and that makes him think he loves the girl who wears it. Honest Gerry, if I wanted to vamp a man I should go in for high domestic art. I'd learn how to make everything he liked to eat; and find out how he liked the house kept, and if he liked his slippers, warmed, etcetra, etcetra. Then I'd invest all my savings in cute little frilly aprons and caps. I'll bet I could make almost any man forget I couldn't talk grammer, and that I was just plain Mary Ryan.'

"Mary Ryan but not plain," I returned, laughing at Mary's quaint way of expressing herself. Yet way deep down in my heart I was beginning to think she was right—that a man was not as easily satisfied with a make-shift for a home, as a woman was. And as always when the subject came up I recalled mother's ideas, her belief that home was the only place for a woman unless it was positively necessary for her to work.

It was necessary for me. So I assured myself, and so I really thought. That Robert could support me in a way, I knew; but why slave in a kitchen doing things which I knew nothing about and which I was sure I should hate, when I could spend my time in a bright shop selling hats which I knew all about, and enjoyed selling?

When Saturday night came we went up to Betty Weed's. The Murphy's were already there, and they all welcomed up gaily, telling Robert how dreadfully they had missed him. I knew from what they said that he had been a pretty constant visitor. No wonder he felt he must entertain them now that he too was married. It is one thing for a bachelor to accept hospitality without always returning it; quite another thing when he is married.

"I'll think up some way to do our share," I said to myself as, after we had played cards for a couple of hours, Betty with Jane's help got supper. I felt so helpless, so useless so like a piece of bric-a-brac which was of no possible use to anyone, that I determined to teach myself some of these things these two girls knew. The supper was delicious; creamed chicken, delicately browned toast, a fruit salad, and drip coffee.

"This coffee is something like," Robert said as he asked for a second cup, "the coffee in our boarding house is rank stuff. I can't see why anyone can't make good coffee." He had said nothing to me about the coffee in fact had not once complained about the food.

I was really embarrassed because of his remark, and tried to change the subject. But he was enjoying himself, his food as I never had seen him, and in spite of my repeated attempts he would talk of nothing else.

"Your friends will think you are half starved, Robert" I said finally.

"Not if they look at me, "he laughed, "but everything tastes so good, so homey, I can't help talking of it," I think, however, that he saw I felt chargrined, because he said no more. That is, until we were on our way home.

"Did you enjoy yourself, sweetheart?" he asked holding my arm closely as we walked from the Weed's to the street-car.

"Indeed I did! I think your friends are lovely. I will plan something nice for them, Robert. Just because I can sell hats, you needn't think I cannot learn to do other things took"

"I know you could! Why, I'll bet if we had a little house-keeping apartment you'd cook as well as either of them in a month."

"Oh, how men do love their stomaches!" I replied, but all the rest of the way home, and long after Robert was asleep, I was wondering how I could prove to him that a woman could be a good business woman and also a good wife.

That was just what I was determined to be.

Tomorrow—Mary Ryan tells Gerry That Robert is Discontented.
