THE GREAT DAM AT KEOKUK.

In July, 1913, there will be completed the greatest engineering project now in process of construction on American soil, with the single exception of the Panama canal. This is the mile long dam which will stem the waters of the Mississippi at Keokuk (Ia.).

For more than fifty years that portion of the upper Mississippi Valley immediately contiguous to the Des Moines Rapids had dreamed of the day when the waters would be harnessed and factories would line the banks. But the years passed and the stones did not assemble themselves to form any dam and trade went inland.

When the word went forth that after fifty years of hoping and dreaming a mile wide dam was to be built there were many yet unconvinced from doubt. But when congress took favorable action and granted the necessary franchises the doubters began to be enthusiastic.

By the time President Roosevelt signed the franchise for the immense dam and power plant on Feb. 9 1905 the eyes of the entire country were on Keokuk. When the necessary $20,000,000 capital was secured and the first shovel of dirt was turned the work went up to the fact that the upper Mississippi Valley held the key to the industrial future.

On Jan. 9, 1910, definite announcement was made to the world that the dam would be built. By Feb. 1 several scores of men were at work. Early in December, 1910, 500 men started to work on the Iowa shore. Through the entire winter they toiled to throw a rampart across the river.

When the waters, guided by engineering craft, pass through dirty turbines they will generate 250,000 horsepower, enough to light every private and public lamp, run every street car and turn every factory wheel in practically every Mississippi Valley city from the Saint on the north to the Saint on the south. Two thousand men went to work with the breaking up of the ice and the opening of navigation.

The dam is to be the largest in the world, with the single exception of the Assouan irrigating dam across the Nile in Egypt; the power plant will be the largest in the world without exception, unless two or more of the Niagara plants are combined for the purpose of comparison. When completed the dam will be 5,800 feet in length of reinforced concrete, thirty-seven feet high and of the same width, the foundation buried for seven feet in the solid limestone bed of the river's gorge.

Extending practically due east and run its uninterrupted course for 4,400 feet, where it will meet the southern shore will be the power plant, on the Iowa shore, where the turbulent waters will be converted into commercial power.

The dam will result in the formation of an immense lake from three to five miles wide and forty miles long above Keokuk, overflowing the lowlands and entirely changing the country now immediately adjacent to the river. It will also completely drown out the nine-mile canal built forty years ago at a cost of $8,000,000. It is one of the requirements of the federal franchise that this government canal, with its three locks, shall be supplanted by a new one-lock canal in a new dry dock to be given the necessary running power free of charge to the end of time.

The dam completed, the rapids will give way to a placid pool or lake, up and down and across which the heaviest laden boats may travel in safety. In the second place, Keokuk will become one of the largest power distributing centres in the entire world.

Already contracts have been signed for the transmission of sixty thousand horsepower to St. Louis, 175 miles south, to run the street cars and light the streets of that city. Already negotiations are under way to transmit the power north and south east and west, from St. Paul to Memphis and from Chicago to Omaha.

In the third place, Keokuk will become the centre of a new manufacturing section; the city famous as the hub of the richest agricultural country in the world will displace plows with smokestacks, corn planters with looms and harrows with dynamos.

My old straw hat of last year's style, Is now placed in the garbage pile. Last year suns have turned it to a ruddy brown, And summer winds have beaten in its withered crown. I hate to part with you old Hat; but still you have to go, Another one will take your place and the cost is just as low. We've been good old pals together and joys we shared as one. But now comes a day old Hat, when your day is done. Many times I've tipped you to the summer girl, So friends we've been throughout the summer whirl. Along the shady brooks and pleasure walks we went, Whether it was stormy; we both were content. The sun may have shone on us at a hundred in the shade, But who minded searching as long as the game was played, Thoughts of past days come before me as I take you down, And I can only say as I stroke your crown. That my new one is this year's style, And dear old Hat your outclassed by a mile, Perhaps when next year comes around again, the same old tale I'll tell. Good-bye old Hat, again I have to say; Farewell.

World Famous Artistes Prefer the Heintzman

When Vladimir de Pachmann, the world famous Russian pianist, visited Canada, he gave a recital in Massey Hall, Toronto. There the enthusiasm was so great that after completing his program he was recalled twelve times, and even then the audience was not satisfied.

He used a Heintzman & Co, grand piano and he made it whisper, talk and sing as no other instrument could. "It is not I, it is the Piano," said de Pachmann, when interviewed after the recital. "To think that I have travelled the world over and used the finest pianos, then to reach Canada and find the Heintzman & Co., pianos, a veritable prince among pianos, compared with any I have ever used."

A Few of its Owners

Sembrich, Zadona, Nordica, Albani, Jonas, Plancon, Hyllested, Burmeister, and all the stars of the concert and grand opera stage are enthusiastic owners of the Heintzman & Co., piano. These artistes want the best, regardless of price, and find the Heintzman the best piano at a price every home of culture and refinement can afford.

Call, bring a pianist friend, and see, hear and play the Matchless Heintzman.—The chosen king of all Pianos.
