Sqdn.-Ldr. W. L. Gillespie expressed the opinion that rinks operated by municipalities are not as efficiently run as those operated by private individuals.

Legion Offers Aid

Mr. Earle Cannon, who is chairman of the Legion rink committee, explained that the Legion had decided to forgo building a new Legion home to donate the sum of $10,000.00 for a new rink or community centre as a memorial to the comrades who did not return. He said it is not the duty of the Legion to build a memorial, it is the duty of the community. The Legion felt that a new rink or community centre would be a suitable memorial to their comrades and they felt the Town needed a rink more than the Legion needs a home.

Dr. J. C. Simpson said that the Town needs a rink badly but he knew from his experience in connection with the new hospital how hard it is to raise money.

Mayor Arnett, speaking at the end of the meeting, expressed the opinion that the Town would have to build the rink but the citizens must realize that if the Town does so it will mean a substantial increase in taxes.

A motion was then passed in regard to the appointment of the committee and the meeting adjourned.—S

Brigadier Price Entertained At Dinner In Quebec

The following news item taken from the Quebec Chronicle-Telegram of October 29 regarding a dinner held for Brigadier John H. Price prior to his departure to take up residence in Montreal, will be of interest to his many friends here, particularly in Prince County. Brig. Price was the Progressive Conservative candidate in Prince in the last Federal election.

The news story is as follows:

"Some 120 well-wishers gathered at the Quebec Garrison Club last night for a dinner honoring Brig. John H. Price, O.B.E., M.C., on the eve of his departure for Montreal where he will reside in the future.

"The dinner was presided over by Capt. A. C. M. Thompson, M.C., K.C., a director of Price Brothers and Company Ltd. who served with the 1st Battalion of the Royal Rifles of Canada at Hong Kong.

"A large delegation of Brigadier Price's old friends in Price Brothers, from head office, the Lake St. John district and South Shore, together with a great many of the officers who served at Hong Kong with the guest of honor were also present.

"During his remarks the chairman expressed profound regret on the part of all present that Brigadier Price and his family were leaving this old city to live in Montreal. After toasting the guest of honor, the chairman called on Maj.-Gen. T. L. Tremblay, C.M.G., D.S.O., to present a token of the assembly's esteem. Brigadier Price then replied and adequately expressed thanks to all those present.

"After dinner, on the invitation of the officer commanding the Royal Rifles of Canada, most of the guests proceeded to the officers' mess of that regiment."

The same issue of that paper devotes a lengthy editorial to Brigadier Price, expressing regret at his departure from the city. After stating that in spite of what would certainly be his own wish and at the risk of doing violence to his unpretentious modesty it intended to place on record something of the affection and esteem in which he is held. It continued in part:

"The distinguishing marks of this fine Canadian's life have been, it seems to us, loyalty, chivalry, a sense of duty and a spirit of service. As the heir to a great name and an inspiring family tradition, Brigadier Price early made "noblesse oblige" not merely his motto but the driving force of his day-by-day existence, in matters small as well as big.

"It was only needful to appeal to him for assistance, and it was forthcoming with a will, regardless of the cost or sacrifice that might be entailed. Had he chose, he might have lived a life of safety and ease, while resting on the laurels his forebears had won.

"But the temperament of Jack Price has been that of the knight errants of old whose craving for service plunged them into the most daring adventures. Fated to live in times of utmost difficulty, the civilian career of Brigadier Price has been interrupted by two world wars and he has been deprived of success in some of his undertakings.

"Nevertheless, his projects have all been designed for the advantage of the community, his efforts have been constructively intended, and heaven only knows how much good he has done by stealth, here and there. This city will be poorer without Jack Price, his gracious wife and their flourishing family."—S fish." As amended the section was satisfactory to the representative of the fisheries council and to the committee.

Arrest Without Warrent

Objection to the section providing for the arrest without warrant of any person committing an offence, under part I. of the act was taken by W. Chester S. McLure, Progressive Conservative member for Queen's who suggested that this seemed to be giving extraordinary power to the agents of Government.

Mr. MacNaught countered with the observation that this provision had been law since 1914 and that he was not aware of any abuses which had occurred under it. Mr. McLure said he supposed in that case the section was all right. He still didn't like the idea of giving extraordinary power to police constables or inspectors under a Fisheries Department Act. It opened the door to invasion of the rights of the individual citizen, he felt.

Prior to the clause-by-clause discussion of the Fisheries Inspection Act, the Minister congratulated P.W.G. Ashbourne, Liberal member for Grand Falls-White Bay, Newfoundland, on his election as committee chairman. The committee, Mr. Mayhew said was in goods hands. Moreover Mr. Ashborne's acceptance of the chairmanship reflected the increasing role in national affairs now being filled by Newfoundlanders. Members from the ancient colony he said, had already made a notable contribution to parliamentary discussion of fisheries matters.

Taking over from Mr. Mayhew, Mr. MacNaught told the committee that it was more evident today than in the war or early postwar years that the Canadian fishing industry would have to rely more and more on the domestic market as a basis for its operations.

Export Problem

"In the past", the Prince member said, "the industry has depended to a very great extent on foreign markets and of course will continue as best it can to hold and expand those markets. However with the increase of import restrictions on the part of many foreign nations, the fluctuation and revaluations of currencies, overseas markets are becoming more and more of a problem.

"The government is strongly of the opinion that stability of the industry can best be founded on a high quality product for the tables of the housewives of Canada and development of the undoubtedly large domestic market for fish in the heavily-populated central provinces of the Dominion."

Discussion of the inspection and export of marine plants which refers chiefly to Irish moss as harvested in coastal areas of Prince Edward Island, was deferred to the next meeting of the committee.

INVESTIGATOR

in consultations with Donald Gordon whose former role as head of the price-policing Wartime Prices Board made him an authority on the alleged activities.

That was one reason for withholding it. Another was rooted in a court decision on an unsuccessful prosecution under the Combines Act which bared loopholes which had to be plugged. The bill to plug them was given initial Commons reading today.

Will Table Report

Mr. Garson later told a reporter the Government will not prosecute the flour milling industry but reiterated that Mr. McGregor's report on it will be tabled in the House Monday.

He said the uniform 1947 price increase in question on flour and mill feed was made in line with suggestions by K. W. Taylor, chairman of the Prices Board.

Mr. Taylor, the correspondence showed, had asked the co-operation of C. H. G. Short, Government flour administrator and also head of a milling firm, in keeping "an inevitable increase" after decontrol to a minimum. Mr. Short's firm put into effect "a lesser increase than some of the other millers thought was justified" but they finally conformed to it.

"As a result the price of flour and mill feed went up by a uniform amount to the level Mr. Taylor had suggested."

Resignation Unexpected

Mr. Garson told the reporter Mr. McGregor's resignation "was unexpected" and no thought had been given to a successor. He also gave the Commons non-controversial letters on the resignation of Deputy Commissioner I. M. MacKeigan.

Mr. Garson, in introducing the bill to amend the Combines Act, said it will carry into effect three recommendations by Mr. McGregor "designed to strengthen enforcement." The bill proposed no changes in the definition of offences or in the basic pattern of the act but it did contain changes to remove difficulties encountered in the unsuccessful prosecution of dental supplies firms.

The key one would "establish a rebuttal presumption that an employee acting in connection with his employer's business has authority so to act and a rebuttal presumption that relevant documents in the business files of those involved in an alleged combine are authentic records from which a court or a jury may properly draw any reasonable inferences."

Another provides that corporations must be tried by a judge without a jury.

Starting on May 12, the test in Queen's County was completed at the end of July. Although Queen's had the highest number of cattle, they were more concentrated than the other counties and the group of veterinarians were able to work as a unit from the Charlottetown office.

Moving to Prince County, headquarters was established in Summerside. The group split into teams working out of Alberton, O'Leary and Tignish. The main concentration in Prince was in the Summerside-Kensington district and the county was finished at the end of September.

Now In King's Co.

The veterinarians are presently working in King's County and are stationed at Montague, Souris and one at St. Peters. They expect to be finished towards the end of next week.

The visitors were impressed with the Island's freedom from those contagious diseases which are problems in other parts of Canada, including Bang's disease and bovine tuberculosis. They will return to their various centres with full knowledge and appreciation of the high quality of Island livestock. A number of them are looking forward to returning to the Island with their families when, they say, they will have more time to enjoy the excellent holiday facilities.

MONTREAL, Nov. 5 — (CP) — Marcel Marcotte, twice sentenced to die for the murder of a friend, today was granted a stay of execution until next March 31 while his case is appealed before the Supreme Court of Canada. His execution date was fixed for Nov. 18 when the Quebec Court of Appeals rejected his appeal last Sept. 30. After his first trial and conviction for the June, 1947, murder of Marcel Boileau, a fellow hat and lingerie salesman, Marcotte was granted a new trial on legal technicalities. Again convicted and sentenced he lodged the appeal which was disallowed.
