Many Will go to Chicago For Eucharistic Congress

Largest Special Passenger Traffic Movement in History of Canadian Railroads is Looked for

According to advices received by Passenger Traffic Officials of the Canadian National Railways, one of the largest special passenger traffic movements in the history of Canadian Railroading will take place in June next in connection with the Eucharistic Congress at Chicago.

Preparations are being made in Chicago for the reception of more than a million pilgrims during the Congress, which will be held from June 20th to June 24th, and the problem of transport for this multitude is already engaging the close attention of both American and Canadian Railroad Officials.

The Canadian Delegation will, of necessity, be a very large one, and will be thoroughly representative of the whole Dominion. Already the Canadian National Railways have contracted with various Organizations for ten special trains from the Maritime Provinces as far West as Alberta. Most of these specials will be operated from Quebec and Ontario, but already enough travel is assured from the Maritimes for a special train to leave Moncton at or about 2.30 p.m. on Friday, June 18th. This train will reach Chicago early Sunday morning. The train equipment will be of the very best, and standard C. N. R. diners will serve meals en route. The return trip will be made by special, leaving Chicago, Thursday, June 24th, following side trips to Niagara Falls and Ste. Anne de Beaupre, reaching Moncton on Monday, June 28th. Delegates from Saint John and all Maritime Provinces points outside of Moncton, will make their connection with the special train by the regular C. N. R. train service.

This tour includes five days in Chicago, and a half day side trip to Niagara Falls. There will be one whole day at Montreal, and one at Quebec or Ste. Anne de Beaupre. It will be a notable tour under the very best auspices, and in the Railway Service there will be nothing lacking. All applications for transportation fares and reservations on this special train should be made to Reverend J. E. Brown, Secretary of the Congress Pilgrimage, care of Bishop's Palace, Saint John, N. B. 7968 3 3 Mon 31.

CHAPTER XLIII

"What the—" O'Day sputtered, but Jimmy Rand laid a finger over his mouth.

"Go ahead, answer it, Lieutenant. If it's for me it must be from someone who knows what took place here tonight. Go on," he urged.

And O'Day, still greatly puzzled, did as he was told.

"Hello," he called into the telephone, trying to disguise his voice. "This is Rand talking. Who's speaking?"

Then, while he stood there with the receiver clapped to his ear, listening, Jimmy saw his face slowly color until it was nearly purple. O'Day looked like an infuriated bull, but he, somehow, managed to keep under control.

He uttered a monosyllable into the mouthpiece. "Yeah." Then, "Say, who is this? Who the—"

He turned to Jimmy the phone still clutched in his two hands, his face still red with rage. "Well, I'll be damned," he roared. "Of all the—why— he groped helplessly for words that would do his feelings justice.

"Who was it?" Jimmy asked. "I don't know damn 'em they hung up on me."

"Well, what did they say—who ever it was?" Excitement had laid its hand on him. He was trembling.

"Here's what they said," answered O'Day, regaining his composure. "It was a man's voice. He said, 'Hello, this is you, Rand?'"

"I said, 'Yes, this is Rand,' and he said, 'All right, this is absolutely the last warning. The girl's out of the way. You're next. I never—'"

"My God!" Jimmy broke in, "have they killed her?"

"I never heard the voice before to my knowledge," O'Day finished. Then answering Jimmy's question, "Lord knows what they've done to her. I give up. It's got me beat."

He picked up the phone again. "Wait a minute. I'm going to try to have that call traced. Not a chance in a hundred of getting anywhere. I guess, but I'm not going to kick myself later for overlooking a bet."

Jimmy said, after O'Day had finished talking to the operator, "You still think—after that phone call—that there's anything in that second theory of yours, that Olga might have framed this?"

O'Day hesitated a moment before answering. "Lord, Rand, I'd forgotten about it for the time being."

He frowned. "Still, if the whole thing was a stall, there'd be nothing to prevent her having this guy call you and try to throw a scare into you. In fact, Olga would be the only one to know you were here at this time, unless Jensen—he really did follow her here—heard her mention your name while she was talking to you."

He said, rather mysteriously, "Jimmy thought: 'I've got pretty good reasons for thinkin' this way I do. Rand, I'll tell you about them later. I just want to do some checkin'.'"

"All right, go right ahead. My own private opinion is that Jensen kidnaped that girl because he wanted to find out what the police were after him for. He wants to know how much she's told about him, for I believe he knows nothing whatever about the ticket stub. 'Imagine what he must feel like. He's absolutely in the dark, and probably worried to death. Well, I'm going home to bed.'"

"And Kelly here," said O'Day, gesturing towards a stalwart policeman, "is goin' with you. He's goin' to have a new beat tonight—right in front of your door."

He produced a cigar and savagely bit off a large hunk of it and started chewing it.

"I'm keepin' an eye on you, my lad," he said.

When Barry Colvin reached Gratton, his first thought was of Janet, and he went swiftly to the Rand home.

"No use arguing with Jim," he informed her briefly. "He's going to stay in Montreal until he finds the murderer. That's all there is to it. There's no persuading him any differently."

"I thought as much," Janet remarked quietly. "You showed him the ring?"

"Yes, and he thinks he knows who it's from. A police lieutenant in Montreal used to know your father, it seems when he was a boy. And he told Jimmy this story. Briefly he repeated the story of Thaddeus Rand, as it was told to him by Jimmy.

She heard it calmly. "And this Marie Real," she asked, "does anyone know what became of her?"

"No. I'm going to take this ring to Detective Mooney. Think he's clever and a perseverer and all sort of things."

And he went to Mooney. The little detective heard him in silence and then asked for the ring.

"I wish," he said, "we'd had this ring a long time ago. I'll see the chief. I think I ought to go to New York right away."

"What I want to know," he remarked as Barry left, "is what became of Thaddeus."

The days that followed for Jimmy were like a nightmare. He wandered dimly through them, his mind in a haze, and his brain confused up a myriad of cruel fates for Olga.

The newspapers were running her picture on the first page, under such captions as: MODEL DISAPPEARS, THOUGHT KIDNAPED, and

HAVE YOU SEEN HER? O'Day also had thought it wise to turn the full glare of newspaper publicity on his search for Ike Jensen.

Accordingly, he told reporters about Olga's telephone call to Jimmy, without, however, mentioning the fact that Jensen was wanted for murder.

To his utter embarrassment, Jimmy was besieged by a steady stream of reporters, who sensed, in the fact that O'Day and Jimmy were somewhat reticent about Jensen, that a good story was to be had for the digging up.

"They want him for assault," Jimmy told them in answer to their eager questions. "He waylaid me one night as I was going home. That's all I know about it."

Then how, they wanted to know was Olga Maynard involved? "I don't know," he persisted. So they insisted on photographing Jimmy, and running his picture in connection with the city's latest thrill.

And Jensen's, too. SEARCH FOR HIM AS KIDNAPER

And then some enterprising city editor, with the knowledge that Jimmy Rand had come from Gratton and was doing nothing apparently, in Montreal, sent a reporter to Gratton and dug up the story that Jimmy had come to town for the express purpose of running down his father's murderer.

There was a new sensation then. The papers sensed that Jensen was somehow involved, and allusions were made to that fact in their columns, although they were some what guarded allusions, due to the fact that the most the police would do was hint.

O'Day made public the telephone call for Jimmy which he had taken on Olga's apartment, and told about the several mysterious warnings Jimmy had received.

As he explained to Jimmy when the latter wrathfully demanded why, "It will protect you, my boy?"

"How do you figure that?" "Why, it stands to reason that Mother's dress was soft and white, and Rosemary's dress was puffy and soft and white. They took dainty steps in their pretty white slippers and stockings.

In the sky two white clouds sailed slowly. One cloud was long and lacy, and the other was puffy and small.

"Look, Mother," said Rosemary, "the cloud-mother and her little girl are going to afternoon tea, too. I hope they will have a happy time."
