MONTREAL EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, April 16.—(Canadian Press)—The Montreal Stock Exchange snapped back to life for a brief period today after weeks of dullness and gains were chalked up freely. The activity failed to last, however, and profit-taking in the afternoon coupled with a strengthening interest caused to reduce early gains. At the close advanced a small majority over losses but the market was tending downward and a general sell-off was only averted by the closing bell. Volume was fairly heavy with more than 19,000 shares changing hands.

Newspaper issues led the recovery near the start following reports production of newspaper in Canada and the United States for the month of March showed heavy increase over the previous month, and was heavier than any other similar period since 1930. Members of this group were bought freely on this news and managed to display smart gains.

As a rule, however, inspiration from Wall Street was lacking as the latter center again acted in a dull manner. Recognized leaders failed to provide any excitement during the day, except for a brief period when the International Nickel surrendered an early gain to show a loss at the close of 25 cents at 27.40.

BUSINESS "STEPPING UP"

The Prince Edward Island Branch of the Great-West Life Assurance Company accepted a challenge from the Montreal Branch that was extended to all Eastern Branches. The challenge was accepted and a contest on a percentage increase in new production for the month of March, based on a previous four months average. The Prince Edward Island Branch has just been advised that they have won, taking first place with a large percentage over the Branch at Three Rivers, Quebec, their nearest opponent. This is certainly significant of the improvement in trade conditions that is coming about. It not only brings the Island Province into the lime-light, but speaks volumes for the popularity of the Great-West Life and their local managers, Hyndman & Co. Limited.

North Sydney Jailer Saves His Prisoners

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire) NORTH SYDNEY, N. S. April 16.—Jailer George Forsay, 70 years old and crippled, escorted three prisoners to safety when fire broke out in the town lock-up.

Although his own rooms were filled with smoke when he awoke, he hurried as fast as he could to the cells occupied by Daniel Whalen, Leithan Morrison and A. Timbury.

They were asleep and in a few minutes might have been overcome by smoke issuing from one of the cells where a prisoner had dozed with a cigarette in his hand. The mattress had caught fire.

Forsay hurried three out of building and rang in an alarm. So dense was the smoke when the firemen arrived they had to don gas masks to enter the building. The flames were quickly extinguished but smoke caused some damage in the jailor's quarters.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

By John L. Cooley, Associated Press Financial Writer

NEW YORK, April 16.—(Associated Press)—Retreat was the order of the day in speculative markets. The signal for selling seemed to have been speaker Henry Rainey's disclosure that silver legislation was not among the items which the administration wants passed before Congress adjourns. There was heavy liquidation of grains and beef futures and, on the stock exchange, a general weakening of prices, particularly metal shares and issues identified with the cereal market.

Stocks flooded along leisurely until mid-afternoon when wheat, rye, oats, corn and barley collapsed. Then share traders did some unloading that brought extreme declines of 1 to 5 per cent on most months ago in expectation of higher prices that did not materialize.

The life of that contract has not long to run and it has recently encountered liquidation. Today's first selling found buyers scarce. It was the first time since October that all grains broke the limit.

Net losses for U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Westinghouse, General Electric, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Consolidated Gas, New York Central, Pennsylvania and Santa Fe ranged from fractions to slightly more than a point, but American Can, Du Pont, Amstar, Smelting and Refining, and Inco, were weak all day. Union Pacific was higher in the morning and did not sell during the reaction.

Schulte Stores preferreds were fair-run-up and U. S. recently popular preferred stocks reacted.

Meanwhile, news bearing on business conditions was reasonably favorable. American Telephone's first quarter earnings, though it will be present dividend requirements nevertheless represented improvement over a year ago and President Gifford reported a reversal in the trend of installations.

Although his own rooms were filled with smoke when he awoke, he hurried as fast as he could to the cells occupied by Daniel Whalen, Leithan Morrison and A. Timbury.

They were asleep and in a few minutes might have been overcome by smoke issuing from one of the cells where a prisoner had dozed with a cigarette in his hand. The mattress had caught fire.

Funeral Address

Following is the address given at the funeral of the late Mr. Neil MacLeod, K. C., of Summerside by Rev. L. B. Campbell.

As the silent shadows lengthen and intensify with the swift approach of eventide, so did death steal up to close the day of life for Neil MacLeod. We had each been passing in passing, yet he had one place with the tapestry of life. For it is not death that counts so much as it is the way that we have lived. And with him who has been called away it was a joy to believe that "To live for common ends is to be common."

The highest faith makes still the highest man. For we grow like the things our souls believe.

A member of a long lived family coming from the Isle of Skye, throughout his long life he had been the possessor of rugged health such as we associate with the characteristics of the land of his birth. He was granted a span of life that carried him safely over the four score. But the years exact their payment and although he stood up bravely against many of the most cruel bludgeonings of chance, at length, like some tall oak that bends before the storm, that powerful vitality weakened with the death for life and finally broke, and now he is at liberty. And he was content to go. Indeed it was more than that. Like his later walk, there was an eagerness in it that almost kept him on the run as he pressed forward to the perfecting of that fellowship of kindred minds which made life on earth for him so much like that above.

But we rejoice in the peaceful accomplishment of his desire, there is not one of us who does not feel that a prince has fallen in Israel this day, and that we have, in Neil MacLeod, lost one of our citizens, one who "valued without abuse, the grand old name of gentleman," "sans peur et sans reproche." On his character we deem of learning and his cry ascended—"We have but faith; we cannot know."

For knowledge is of things we see; And yet we trust it comes from Thee. A beam in darkness; let it grow. Who can believe that when the seeker fulfills the divine injunction "Seek and ye shall find," that God in His great mercy will not grant in answer thereto that our thought or even our desire?

Who would intrude upon that sanctuary, where love and honour dwell in unity very seldom attained in the natural union in our homes. We shall not venture to walk in such sanctities of private life.

A Religious Man. Any outstanding character is remembered by inevitable association with some outstanding characteristic in their life. I shall never be able personally to dissociate the religious life of MacLeod from the masterpiece of Tennyson's poetry, "In Memoriam" for in it I see the expression of his living and vital faith. He stood in humility, stripped of all the robes of learning and his cry ascended—"We have but faith; we cannot know."

For knowledge is of things we see; And yet we trust it comes from Thee. A beam in darkness; let it grow. Who can believe that when the seeker fulfills the divine injunction "Seek and ye shall find," that God in His great mercy will not grant in answer thereto that our thought or even our desire?

He was a quiet man habitually, possessed of an intense almost fierce pride, in his heritage and calling, for he was one of those sons who believed in the worth of life. After various adventures he settled upon the field of education as a task worthy of his best powers, and on so he went all the wealth of heart and mind.

An Educator. Possessing rare powers of intellect, Mr. MacLeod could have said, "Such present joys therein I find, That it excels all other bliss. That earth affords, or grows by kind."

Believing in the thorough cultivation of his mental kingdom, throughout his long life he directed his energies toward that end, by reading, teaching, study, writing, and practicing the profession of law. Having an amazingly retentive memory he made himself a master of many of the greatest selections from poetry and prose.
