

The HOUSEWIFE and HER ACTIVITIES

Dreams, books are each a world; and books, we know are a substantial world, both pure and good.

KEEPING SALAD CRISP

Here's a spring salad hint. Put your wilted lettuce, romaine, or escarole in a pan of water to which has been added one cup of vinegar. Let stand for half an hour and then take out the greens, all crisply fresh and ready for the salad bowl. Also, wrapping lettuce in a damp towel and sticking the ends of the towel in a bowl of water will keep the lettuce fresh for days in a time.

GARDENERS' PLOT

To those who have not yet completed their seed orders: Why not squander a few cents on a packet of some vegetables seed which one might not ordinarily grow? Such as salsify, for instance, a delicious and undervalued neglected vegetable, or kohlrabi, or something of that sort?

AIR-CONDITIONED SANDALS POPULAR

Sandals are becoming more and more popular for day-time wear. They have long been a favorite for evenings, but the freedom which they give have now induced many well-dressed women to wear them all the time.

Teelless sandals for wearing with summer frocks are made in many designs and colors, and with different types of heel. Red and white blue and white and brown and white are popular combinations and goat, kid or calfskin are largely used.

Sans Decorations

If you allow your cat to prow around the neighborhood, don't decorate it with ribbons or collars as they are very apt to catch on fences or limbs of trees and strangle the animal.

Shriveled Hands

If your hands are the sort that wrinkle and shrivel when in water for a length of time, rub them with salt or vinegar, will into the skin, and you will find that unpleasant feeling leave and the flesh become soft and fine.

All Set for Next Year

Before putting away the velvet dress be certain there are no grease spots to attract moths. If you find any, apply a thick layer of French chalk and let it stay on the spots for several hours. Then shake and brush. If the spot has not entirely disappeared try another application.

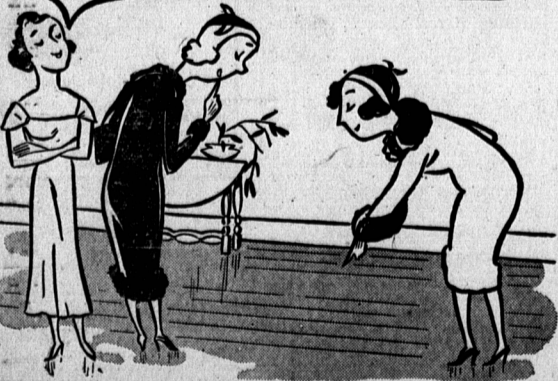

A Better Job

When washing your new curtains this spring, first soak them overnight in salted water. As a rule new curtains are full of lime and it is very hard to get them clean without using a great amount of soap powder. After their bath you will find them much easier to handle.

HELPFUL HINTS

In making candy, add 1 tablespoon flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder and a little salt, if you would greatly improve the flavor.

IT'S THE WORKLESS WAY TO WAX FLOORS WITHOUT RUBBING

Now you never see a Smart Housekeeper down on her knees rubbing wax into a floor and rubbing lines of weariness on her face. Never! Doing your floors better than they have ever been done before is now as easy as sweeping. . . thanks to this new kind of polish. Spread it on lightly. . . then go about your business. . . And in 15 minutes come back and admire the lovely, lustrous sheen your floor is clothed in.

DRIES TO A WONDERFUL SHINE IN 15 MINUTES

Wash the inside of the windows fairly hot water. Dry with a chamois and polish with cheese-cloth. For the outside use the following mixture: 1 ounce pulverized whiting, 1 ounce grain alcohol, 1 ounce liquid ammonia, 1 pint water. Apply with a soft cloth after having removed surface dirt—when this preparation is dry, rub off and polish.

Ivan Visseyakoff of Sofia, believes that he is the only chauffeur in the world whose wedding party has been graced by the presence of a real queen.

HEALTHY SKIN

Getting your body in healthy, normal condition is the first step toward complexion beauty, of course. You can't have clear skin if you are always tired from lack of sleep or if your digestion is faulty. Do all you possibly can to get in excellent physical shape and then supplement your health routines with the right home beauty treatments.

If you apply some kind of mash one a week from now until June the chances are your skin will be as fresh and attractive as your new spring bonnet. Choose a good one, or if you like, use the plain, old-fashioned egg mask.

If your skin has a tendency toward dryness, always smooth on tissue cream after you have removed a mask. Pat it in for a few seconds, remove and you're ready for foundation lotion and make-up.

In addition, use your skin tonic or mild astringent twice a day. You'll find that your lotion is much more effective and certainly more soothing to the nerves if you use it very cold. Keep it in the icebox or set it in a bowl of cracked ice before you start to pat it on.

If you have clogged pores, use plenty of soap and water before cleansing cream and then gently press out the impurities after you have removed the cream. Never pinch or bruise the skin and be sure to put an antiseptic on the places you have squeezed.

A Morning Smile

WHAT HE NEEDED

"Say, doctor," growled Joe, in hospital with flu, "I asked the nurse to put a hot water bottle at my feet, but she stuck up her nose and walked away."

HIS SYMPATHETIC EYE

The new recruit had asked for Christmas week-end leave, telling the usual story about fifteen children and so on. The old sergeant-major looked at him and said:

"Son, one of my eyes is a glass one. If you can tell me which one it is you can have the leave."

"Correct!" answered the S. M. "How did you guess?"

"Well," replied the recruit "there seemed to be more sympathy in that eye."

Desert Gold

The cowboys, Ladd and Lash, were hired at once upon their arrival at Tom Belding's ranch, and Gale also got a job. He told Belding that his father had been disappointed in his efforts to go into business and that he had come west to seek his fortune independent of the elder Gale.

Mrs. Belding at first opposed adding the young man to the ranch staff on the ground that her daughter Nell, Belding's stepdaughter, might fall in love with him, and Dick was indeed undoubtedly attracted to the girl when she bound up the hand he had injured in his fight on Rojas, but Belding was impressed by the story the cowboys told of the encounter in the Casita tavern and hired the youth.

Belding, besides raising fine horses on his oasis ranch in the midst of the desert along the border, was also a government officer appointed to watch for Chinese and Japanese smuggled over the line. The two cowboys and Gale accordingly ranged about the place, keeping an eye on the border, especially as the raiders often crossed and Belding was afraid that they would try to steal some of his stock.

One night, weeks after he had taken his new job, Gale saw three Mexicans about a camp fire. They were evidently members of a "riding band" and were in their way with a group of stolen horses back across the border.

Dick was riding one of Belding's white horses—Blanco Sol—and was anxious to give the horse a chance, but the Mexicans were camped around the only well in the neighborhood. He waited all night watching for the raiders to leave, but when dawn came and they started their breakfast fire he saw two Indians riding toward them on burros.

One was a Papago and the other a Yaqui, the latter evidently badly hurt or ill. From his vantage point on a hill Gale saw the two Indians pass around a knoll, and some sudden up on the Mexicans.

One of the latter seized a gun and fired point blank at the newcomers. His third shot knocked the Papago from his burro, and the Yaqui, who had been helped to retain his seat by his companion, fell too.

The leader of the raiders vaulted on to one of the horses and tried to ride down the fallen Yaqui. Gale remembered what he had heard of the Mexicans' hatred for the Yaquis. He could beat no more. He took a quick shot at the rider. He missed the Mexican, but hit the horse, which fell, giving its rider a stunning fall.

The two other raiders fled to cover and the horses they had captured ran away with the Indians' burros. Gale approached the Yaqui. The Indian was still alive.

"Gringo good — no kill," he said. The other Indian was dead and Gale, putting the Yaqui across Blanco Sol's saddle, took him to the Belding house.

IV. Meanwhile the Beldings took care of Mercedes and it was expected that soon Thorne would come, marry the girl and leave. Belding began to consider it impossible for Thorne to carry Mercedes through a country overrun on both sides of the border with rebels and raiders.

MRS. J. R. DAWSON

Mrs. J. R. Dawson, 568 Dundas St. Galt, tells in a legal statement made before a lawyer, how Fruit-a-tives brought her complete relief from constipation. Mrs. Dawson says, "I was bothered with constipation for years. Then I started to take Fruit-a-tives and they brought me complete relief. I have taken only Fruit-a-tives whenever there is a suggestion of constipation or whenever I feel out of color. I find Fruit-a-tives easy to take and so gentle in action that there is no discomfort attached to their use."

COULD NOT DO HER HOUSEWORK

WHEN every-thing you attempt is a burden when you are nervous—try this medicine. It may be just what you need for extra energy. Mrs. E. Belmont, N. S., could not do her housework. She says, "I was in poor health for years, I tried various medicines. Then a friend told me about your Compound. It made a new woman of me."

to send the horses and Thorne and his bride away to the north. The departure was hastened when some Mexicans brought a note from Rojas. The terror-stricken Mercedes read it.

"He says—" she translated—"that if I'm not given to him in twenty-four hours he'll set fire to the place, kill the men, carry off the women and hang all the children on a gallows." Belding was grateful for the presence of the Indian, whom they simply called Yaqui. He summoned Gale and the others.

"You'll take eight horses," he said. "You must pack all that's needed for a long trip. Yaqui may lead you into some wild Sonora Valley and give Rojas the slip. All of you go armed heavily." The expedition was to start at night in an attempt to get by Rojas's pickets.

At twilight Gale drew Nell aside. She was trembling and as she leaned toward him, she was very different from the coy girl who had so long held him aloof. He took her in his arms.

Wife Who Stands by Until Husband Recovers From Infatuation for Gold-Digger is Sure to Get Him Back, if She Wants Him—Rosy Future Based on a Fairy Tale—What to Tell Adopted Child

Dear Miss Dix—My husband is 26 years old. Last Summer a 17-year-old girl went to work for him and they fell in love with each other. Personally, I think the girl's sex appeal gave my husband a new thrill and that it will all wear off. He himself admits that it is probably infatuation on his part. The girl has not a good reputation. Strangely enough, the girl's mother does all she can to encourage the affair. Asks him to her house all the time. Cooks up good things for him to eat. Even went so far as to tell him that if he would take out separation papers he could stay at her house all he wanted to.

My friends think I am crazy not to leave my husband, but I love him more than anything in the world. I realize he has done wrong, but I don't think he is altogether to blame. Don't you think that if I stick to him through this affair he will love me more than ever after it is over and will do everything he can to make me happy?

Answer: You are meeting a dangerous situation with courage and wisdom and if you will just stand to your guns you will win out. Nine women out of ten lost their husbands under similar circumstances, because when the Other Woman comes along they haven't the nerve and the backbone and the sense to put up a fight for their own. They just lie down and quit without striking a lick and let her walk off with her prey.

The wife always has one trump card in her hand. That is her marriage certificate. Her husband can't divorce her as long as she behaves herself, and the Other Woman can't marry him unless she does. That fact alone should make even a jealous wife think a long time before she goes to the divorce court and so hands her husband over to her rival.

Evidently your husband must be well off, or else the girl and her mother would not be pursuing him so hotly. For mothers have an even keener scent for money than have gold-digging flappers. They are trying to force you to divorce him so that the girl can marry him and they can get their greedy hands on his pocketbook, but you can, at least, balk part of their plans by just sitting steady and holding your own.

Of course, your husband doesn't show up in a very heroic fight as the easy mark for a sexy flapper and a predatory old woman, and God only knows why a woman like you wants to bother with him, for with his weakness for the flapper you will probably spend the remainder of your life protecting him and pulling him out of scrapes.

But the point is that you do love him and you can save him, and in the course of time he will get tired of philandering and settle down into the most devoted of husbands and will forget that he ever loved any other woman but you. For it is a curious thing that a man can break his wife's heart with the little affairs and still be absolutely faithful to her in his heart.

There are two good reasons for a wife's sticking to a philandering husband instead of throwing him overboard as he deserves. The chief one is that she does not secure her happiness by divorcing him. If she loves him, the divorce absolute does not heal the hurt in her heart, nor fill the lonely places in her life, and she is less unhappy having a little of his society than she is entirely separated from him.

Besides, which, she has whatever prestige goes with being his wife; she has her comfortable home, her old friends, her amusements, and if she had children they have the advantages and guidance their father can give them. The position of the wife is almost invariably superior to that of the divorcee.

And she saves the man she loves, often and often, and often from making a marriage that wrecks him. To this department come hundreds of letters from men who tell how they thought they had fallen in love with some young girl who flattered them into thinking they were boys again, and how when they were divorced by their wives they married these girls—only to find that they had been married for their money, and that they had not one thing in common with their youthful brides. And the refrain of these letters is invariably: "Oh, why didn't my wife have a little patience with me? Why didn't she see that I just lost my head and that I would get over this temporary infatuation? Why didn't she KNOW that she was the only woman in the world to me?"

It is pretty hard for a wife to sit quietly at home and wait for her lamb to come back when it strays from the fold. But he will do it if she just waits.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am in terrible predicament and would greatly appreciate your advice. My parents, wealthy and prominent people, are sending me to the College of Dramatic Art, after which they plan a long stage career for me. I know how perfectly marvelous this would be. I realize that it would bring fame, fortune and a brilliant social life. I am madly in love with a young and handsome missionary. We had planned to travel together through the heathen countries spreading Christianity and happiness in our wake. Do you think it better to begin the glorious career that will please my parents, or to follow the path of hardship with the man I love?

Answer: I would suggest that before you do either you come down out of your castle of dreams and get your feet on the hard old earth and try to see things as they are, instead of as you and your deluded parents imagine them to be.
