That Feminine—Fore!

By QUIN HALL

The old argument that "they never come back" was given another hefty boost recently when Miss Joyce Wethered triumphed in the British Women's Golf Championship tournament over Glenna Collett, our own entry in the famous classic.

Miss Wethered, always a capable shotmaker, had retired from public competition, but announced her intention of returning to the game some time before the date of the matches. Miss Collett frankly admitted upon her arrival in England that she expected Miss Wethered to win the title. Glenna did put up stubborn resistance and was opposed to the British star in the final match.

Miss Wethered apparently lost none of her skill while she was out of public competition.

Always a great golfer, she is said to come nearest in ability to the best of the men players, such as Hagen and Jones. Such a comparison always creates an argument concerning the abilities of the sexes in various lines of sport. Experts seem to be pretty well agreed that Hagen or Jones could spot Miss Collett, nine strokes and still win, but with Miss Wethered the experts are not so sure.

One authority goes so far as to say that in an even game the best of the men players might have difficulty in winning from Joyce the male star's advantage being in longer hitting.

In tennis, certain authorities feel that Helen Wills could win from any of the men players outside of the first ten ranking players. There are certain factors which give a man natural advantages over a woman opponent.

Golf and swimming seem to be the two sports which are best fitted to women. Women have made remarkable progress in almost every line of sport, especially so in those two departments. There are many women golfers and swimmers who can contend brilliantly with the best of the male sex.

COLLEGE CLOSING

Large Attendance at Closing Exercises of Summerside Business College.

The closing exercises of the Central Business College at Summerside took place at 2 o'clock on Friday p.m., in the college rooms which were profusely decorated with flowers for the occasion. A large gathering of parents and friends of the forty graduates were present. The Principal of the Book-keeping Dept., Mr. Roscoe Jeffery, acted as chairman and introduced the two speakers of the afternoon His Worship, Mayor Lidstone and Dr. E. T. Tanton, chairman of the Summerside School Board.

Mr. Lidstone addressed the graduates from a practical viewpoint and gave much useful information as to what the business world demanded of a stenographer. Dr. Tanton addressed them on the very important subject of the stenographer's health. Miss McLean thanked the two gentlemen for their kindness in giving so much of their valuable time.

Mr. Jeffery had given a short resume of the work since the opening of the college only three years ago showing how its remarkable growth had necessitated doubling the classroom space at the end of the Fall term. Plans were being now made for adding still more rooms before the opening of the next college year.

Miss McLean continued by giving a detailed account of this year's work and commented on the exceptional brilliance of this year's class of students. While six were being rewarded for special diligence and brilliance the others had followed closely. One student in particular, Mr. Edward Clow had completed the full work in both departments—a fifteen months course—in less than eight months, winning first prize in both departments. Another, Mr. Richard Hinton, had completed the seven months work in less than four months, winning special prize. The girls who received special prizes were the Misses Dora Denny, Yvonne Arsenault, Mary Clark and Amanda Cannon. The high excellence achieved by these students had set a standard which future classes would find hard to imitate.

BERLIN, June 16.—A great grandson of the poet Schiller, Baron von Giechen-Russwurm, is being tried at Würzburg on a charge of attempting to defraud an insurance company.

About three years ago, the Baron, having occasion to send a valuable chain of pearls, eight feet long, to a Munich jeweler for repairs, took the precaution of insuring it against loss in transit for $16,250.

The pearls were duly packed and posted, but when the jeweler opened the packet he discovered, instead of the necklace, a dead mouse. The Baron thereupon claimed the amount of the insurance from the company.

According to the prosecution, the sender caused the mouse to be substituted for the pearls. The mouse, it is alleged, was put in alive in the expectation that he would eat his way out and so create the impression that the packet had been tampered with. The accused, it is stated, was badly in need of ready money.

The Baron, in the course of his evidence, indignantly denied the alleged plot. His sixty years of life, he said, had been in all respects blameless. He had made the Reich a present of Schiller's letters and now he was being awarded with this fantastic incrimination over a paltry money affair.

He went on to give some interesting details as to his mental condition at the time of the alleged attempt to defraud. He was, he declared, subject to occultistic visitations which took the form of "an enemy in bodily form which rose out of his inner being and often confronted him." This apparition he was wont to call the "Red Man."

The intensity of this occultistic experience, at the time of the alleged fraud, he claimed, rendered him in-

GEORGE IRWIN IS WINNER OF TEN MILE RACE

HALIFAX, June 15.—Running the United States National and Canadian marathon champions into the ground in the first two miles, little George Irwin romped home a brilliant winner in the ten mile race at the Exhibition Grounds Saturday afternoon, in the feature event of the Crescent A. A. C. programme.

It was not a sensational victory or a sensational race, but it was a brilliant showing by the Woodsie youth, who forgot about the notables in the event and ran his own race to cover the distance in 55 minutes, 31 4-5 seconds.

Over three thousand spectators watched the Woodsie plodder leave Johnny Miles, recognized as the most sensational runner in marathon circles, and Fred Ward, New York, Canadian marathon champion, after the second mile and win "eased up."

Irwin had over four hundred yards margin over the marathon king and half a mile or a lap over the New Yorker. Miles was seventy-seven seconds behind the winner.

The crowd came out to see the marathon champion, and left the grounds talking about the little Woodsie plodder. Miles attracted the crowd, but Irwin carried the sentiment of the gathering, especially after the first couple of miles, when his steady stride carried him to the front.

Irwin ran a beautiful race. He clung with Miles and Ward for the first mile and a half and stepped out in front when the pace of the marathon runners proved too slow for his liking.

The winner ran the first five miles in 27 minutes, and the second five miles in 28 minutes, 37 3-5 seconds, thus proving his steadiness in stride and speed.

Miles, who certainly did not look like a world beater Saturday, fought hard to match strides with the Woodsie flier, but he hadn't the speed or the stride. The marathon champion looked heavy, running on his heels and pounding heavily all through the piece. I doubt if he will ever see the day when he can run ten miles with Irwin.

Ward is a hard worker and no doubt a marathon runner of ability but ten miles is not his distance. He worked hard, pounded heavily and steadily, but lacked the necessary speed for the shorter distance.

WARMING UP FOR MATINEE

There is a lot of horse-talk floating around with regard to the matinee races which are to be held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Judging by predictions there should be some stiff miles rung in on the Charlottetown oval next Wednesday afternoon.

Marge Direct, Peter Verde, Gordon Harvester, Jessica the Great and Briar Mac, have all been stepping fast finishes and are expected to put up some nice contests.

As is already known there will be no admission fee, and all those who wish to have a real afternoon's enjoyment with a wonderful view and at the same time witness a number of the Island's fastest horses in action be sure to be at the Exhibition track on Wednesday afternoon.

BABOON WITH HUMAN CHILD

(British United Press)

LONDON, June 17.—A story published recently about a woman nurtured by monkey in India, says a Rhodesian writer to one of the London papers, "recalls an incident which left little doubt in our minds that we had come across a case of a native 'Mowgli' adopted by baboons.

"It happened in 1913 or early in '14. I think, at the section camp about six miles from my own, where my assistant was stationed. There are great numbers of baboons on the ranch, which comprises much broken and mountainous country, but we never interfered with them, as we were only raising cattle and no crops, so they were innocuous; we were bounded by native reserves on all sides; also in very mountainous country.

"For a year or more a solitary 'old man' baboon had been living in Chindiro Hill, a high and densely wooded kopje, and he was to be seen almost daily, a favorite seat of his being in a dead tree about 200 yards from the huts. One day a B. S. A. police trooper on patrol, who had spent the night there, saw this old baboon, and very unnecessarily, shot at and killed it.

"The same afternoon a wild native boy appeared near the camp from the direction of the dead tree, and, after considerable hesitation, approached the camp boys, who were sitting round their fire in the open. He was about 13, totally unclothed, rather emaciated, hair long and unkempt and apparently unable to speak or understand any language.

"He seemed very hungry and was offered food, but he did not appear to know what cooked food was, as he refused it, and the other natives did not know what to do with him. I ate some mealies, and my assistant told the camp boys to look after him and feed him, which they were quite ready to do. By the next morning however, he had disappeared and was never seen again.

"Our boys thought he was 'wild' 'markopo' (mad) or both, and though inquiries were made no one discovered where he had come from nor could we head of any child missing from the adjacent reserve. We came to the conclusion that the child had at some period or other perhaps during an earlier family beef found by the baboons, and lived with them. The total absence of clothing and inability to undertake what cooked food was pointed strongly to the probability of this. I thought his particular companion had been the old baboon, which I come to a sudden end.

"Missing his protector, and probably food provider, he had wandered alone to the camp when hungry and down. In such rugged and sparsely occupied country he might escape notice when with the baboon as it was likely that his lower movements, and perhaps force of habit might impel him to remain up in hills and under cover, at such times as his more active companions were down on the flats."

Supreme Court At Summerside

When the Supreme Court resumed at the Court House in Summerside yesterday morning His Lordship Chief Justice Mathieson presiding, the case of the King against Benj. Sonier was taken up. This was a charge against the prisoner of breaking into the Vendor's store at Summerside on Feb. 15th last and stealing therefrom two cases of Molson's ale. The case occupied the attention of the Court all day, the witnesses for the Crown being the Vendor, police officer Jamieson, Chief of Police Murray and Robt. Phillips. This completed the prosecution, and the defence opened and had called one witness when the court adjourned at 5:15 p.m. until 10:30 this morning. The Attorney-General appeared for the Crown and Mr. J. J. Johnston, K.C. and Mr. E.H. Strong, K.C. for the prisoner.

More than 6,000 text books printed in several languages in Braille type have been placed in the National Institute for the blind library in London.
