ALL CHILDREN ASK IS LEAVE TO DIE The story of the world's misery will never be told. Each case is a volume in itself. Just now Admiral Newton A. McCully, in command of American naval units in the Black sea, makes an appeal on behalf of the children of the Crimea, 20,000 of whom are in dire need. He tells of visiting an orphanage where the children have only bread and tea made from apple parings. Many of the children are sick from lack of nourishment and some display blackened fingers caused by freezing during the winter. All the children ask the admiral says, is to be allowed to die. The condition in the Crimea is merely typical of conditions prevailing over a large part of the continent of Europe and over vast reaches in western Asia. Misery is the portion of many millions and misery will remain their portion until the world is restored to peace and men again are permitted to engage in production.
