Welsh Immigrants Reach Halifax Famous Home As Sports Center

(Special to the Guardian)
 HALIFAX, April 15—Twenty three families, including one of fifteen members and another of ten, arrived here today from Great Britain on the Cunard Liner Scythia and will settle on farms in various parts of Canada. John Walters, his wife and thirteen children, from Llanelly, Carmarthenshire, Wales, who are bound for Teeds Mills, near Woodstock, N.-B., to take up farming, make up the largest family to come here from the British Isles this year. In the family are eight girls and seven boys. The youngest boy was ill when the family was about to sail, so the oldest boy stayed behind to look after him and they will come over to Canada by a later boat to rejoin their parents.

Walters, who is a shoemaker by trade and once a professional football player, has done a little farming in Wales and recently took a correspondence in agriculture furnished by the Canadian National Railways. He plans to go in for beekeeping, he says, and hopes to make a success of it. He has been reading about Canada for years and has relatives in the Canadian West. His children are ambitious to take up life in the Dominion and some months ago decided to come to Canada under the 3,000 family scheme. They have been directed to their new home in New Brunswick by the Colonization Department of the Canadian National Railways. Walters, who stands over six feet in height is 48 years old, tintridicam height is 48 years old and his wife is the same age. The oldest girl, Elizabeth, is 24 and the youngest child is four years old.

Among the other families landed by the Scythia was that of James McKeever, his wife and eight children, who have been brought out under auspices of the Ontario Government and will be placed on a farm near Toronto. The families and other passengers landing here from the Scythia left by Canadian National special today for their destinations.

New Translation Now in Circulation

STOCKHOLM, April 2—(C.P.)—The Anglo-Swedish Literary Foundation, endowed by the Nobel Prize money donated by George Bernard Shaw in 1925 for new translations into English of the works of famous Swedish authors, has now issued its first volumes under the imprint of Jonathan Cape, of London. The initial offering consists of four plays by August Strindberg: "Easter," translated by E. Clasen, "The Dance of Death," in two parts, rendered into English by C. D. Locock, "The Spook Sonata," translated by J. B. Fagan and Baron Erik Palmstierna, Sweden's Minister to England, who has taken a lively interest in the work of the Foundation, and "The Dream Play," translated by Locock. The books have been enthusiastically received in Sweden. Thus Anders Osterling, one of Sweden's most famous poets and a member of the Swedish Academy, which annually distributes the Nobel Literature Prize, has written a flattering review about them in the Svenska Dagbladet, a Stockholm daily. He feels that the free verse parts in the "Dream Play" sound even better in English than in original.

cent, 'Sir, you shall stay and take to other bottle.' King Charles complied remarking with a smile and graceful air, "he that's drunk is as great as a king."

Now Sir Robert's famous house and grounds, "not very modern in the garden nor house, but most uniform," as Pepps said, has passed into the possession of the Foreign Office Sports Association, largely through the instrumentality of its honorary treasurer, Mervyn Herbert, and at the suggestion of Lord Gerald Wellesley.

The Association, whose present president is Sir Hubert Montgomery, was created in 1925 and one of its principal objects was to form a connecting link between the different grades of the service at home, and also to provide an occasion of contact between the home and foreign staffs.

Premier Ferguson's Brilliant Wit

TORONTO, April 13—(C.P.)—The ability of Premier Ferguson to dispense wit, wisdom and whimsicality was demonstrated in the House here the other night. The Premier was asked why he had written an introduction to John Henderson's "Great Men of Canada" when the book was not issued by the Government, but rather the Government bought so many copies and distributed them.

"I have written many introductions for outside people," said Mr. Ferguson. Then he was asked by Liberal Leader Sinclair if the second volume of the "Great Men" which he had announced in the House, was to contain "all Grits" rather than "Conservatives," as in the first book. "Oh, no," said he. "There will be a bit of heaven, too."

Parkdale Collegiate Passed Away

TORONTO, April 13—(C.P.)—Many Parkdale old boys, not to mention the fairer sex, are watching with interest, and not a little regret, wrecking operations on Jameson Avenue, just south of Queen Street, that, when carried to completion, will mean the passing from sight of the old building of Parkdale Collegiate Institute, in which structure a great many Parkdallians received their secondary education. Shortly after the demolition of the old school was commenced, many former pupils and not a few present-day scholars of the collegiate spent many hours on the scene, picking up here and there a relic to take away as "treasure."
