Experimental Farm Notes For Year 1946

The following Experimental Farm notes for the year 1946 have been supplied through the courtesy of Mr. B. Frank Tunney, superintendent.

Considered from an agricultural standpoint, the growing season of 1946 was exceedingly dry. In general, new seedlings of grass, alfalfa and clover entered the winter of 1946-47 in weak condition. Light snowfall and frequent thaws during January, February and March, fields and meadows were bare for the greater part of the winter. Considerable heaving of clover took place, but heavy snowfalls in April, with backward weather in May prevented drying out and many plants took root and completely recovered.

Fall rye sown around mid-September 1946 made satisfactory growth and wintered well but seedlings made as late as mid-October winter killed badly.

Seeding operations at the Farm as well as Illustration Stations located at various points throughout the Province, were completed under fairly satisfactory conditions except in certain sections of West Prince where cool, damp weather caused delays.

Light Rainfall

The rainfall in June was abnormally light, with resultant short pasturage, and hay crops. Fertilized pastures at the Farm and Illustration Stations showed good growth in early season but many plants died or were killed by frost. The dry weather, continuing into July, ripened the clover crop very rapidly reducing hay yields at the Farm to seventy-five percent or less of average.

This shortening of the clover season proved detrimental to the honey flow, this crop being practically a failure in all parts of the Province.

It was noted that hay crops containing a fair percentage of alfalfa seemed to wither the adverse growing conditions and gave better crops than clover alone. This would indicate the advisability of adding a small quantity of alfalfa seed to the regular grass mixtures when seeding out.

Abundant rainfall was abundant and fell sufficiently early to markedly improve yields of oats, potatoes and sweet turnips. Yields of swedes and potatoes on Illustration Stations were exceptionally high in some localities.

Grain Crops Good

Despite early drouth, yield and quality of grain crops were good. The date of appearance of susceptible varieties but too late to cause appreciable damage.

Variety tests of oats were of particular interest, many new strains with high disease resistance having been sown. Many of these are of real value, not only for their disease resistance, which is high, but also from a yield standpoint as well.

In barley tests, Charlottetown No. 80 continues to be the leader. First made its appearance on the island in 1933, for the first time she held a birthday party in her own home, all the earlier annual celebrations having taken place, not at 145 Piccadilly, but at Buckingham Palace.

This Princess's Dream House was sent to Royal Lodge, in Windsor Great Park, which her parents had just taken over as their country house. At this place, in 1933, for the first time she held a birthday party in her own home, all the earlier annual celebrations having taken place, not at 145 Piccadilly, but at Buckingham Palace.

Royal Lodge was destined to become well-known to Princess Elizabeth and her sister. It was to be the scene of many of their future vacations, and some of their lessons were to be learned there.

EDUCATION IN 1946

By L. W. SHAW

Director of Education for Prince Edward Island

"Stock taking" in education is never easy. There is so much in this field of service that does not lend itself to measurement. Even in those phases of the work which can readily be measured, the task of evaluating progress for during a calendar year is particularly difficult in that the period under review does not conform to the school year nor indeed to the fiscal year, one of which ends on June 30th and the other on March 31st. In this statement only a general picture of educational activities during the year now closing will be attempted.

"Stock taking" must concern itself with two things: First, an evaluation of the activities of the period under review and, secondly, plans for the future formulated in the light of past successes and failures. This evaluation and this planning must, of course, be worked out in terms of the aims and objectives of those concerned in the business or service under consideration.

Aims Restated

Let us, then, restate the aims and objectives of the Department responsible for public instruction in this Province. In general terms, we may say that good, useful, efficient citizenship is the objective of the whole programme of education. In more specific terms the objective might be set forth thus:

1st. A sound, thorough programme of elementary education, sufficiently broad in its scope to meet the abilities, the interests and the needs of all pupils, not just a few.

2nd. Professional training of teachers and junior college work, that is work to the end of the secondary education, which will provide opportunities for all beyond the elementary level.

3rd. A programme of secondary education, sufficiently broad in its scope to meet the abilities, the interests and the needs of all pupils, not just a few.

4th. On organized plan of adult education which will provide opportunities for all beyond the elementary level.

Flemish Beauty topping the lists.

Vegetable crops were highly satisfactory with some new varieties showing exceptional merit. Amongst these were North Star corn, Early Chatham tomato, and Always Tender beet.

Small Fruits

Small fruit yields were fairly satisfactory with some new varieties giving great promise. In strawberries, two late varieties, 'Fujin' and 'Loulise' appeared highly promising. Outstanding raspberries included Madawaska, Trent and Rideau. The new gooseberry Davidson is excellent from the standpoint of size and yield with Buddenbong being the outstanding black currant.

Investigational work with cranberries resulted in securing considerable information of value to the growers of the Province, particularly in the fields of cultural practices and insect control.

Rotational burning demonstration of its value in the production of blueberries and the investigation of its value in the production of strawberries, was continued in 1947.

The date of collection at the Farm was increased by the addition of a number of new varieties. This collection is now one of the best in Eastern Canada and proves of great interest to our many visitors.

Production records in the poultry flock were of a high order. Four hundred and seven Barred Rock pullets were banded in the autumn of 1946. These birds completed their first laying year with an average of 235.5 eggs weighing 24.8 ounces per dozen. Body weight was slightly over seven pounds for all birds and average days at first egg was 182.1 days, or about six months. The outstanding breeding female was No. C400655. This hen had 15 daughters entered in laying pens in the autumn of 1946. Fourteen of these completed their laying year with an average of 289.9 eggs each. Six of these produced over 200 eggs and four others over 200 eggs each.

In so far as weather records are concerned, those for December are not completed at date of writing. As the weather, particularly in the latter part of the year, was very beneficial results so far as a healthy citizenship is concerned. The Red Cross nutritionist, the Junior Red Cross and the Public Health nurses are making a fine contribution to our schools and to this list may now be added the work in Physical Fitness which was begun only a little more than a year ago.

The interest in handicrafts in our school districts is most commendable. Although there is but one itinerant teacher, approximately 300 persons, school children and adults, received instruction in weaving, knitting, crocheting, etc. during the school year ended in June last. The waiting list of districts, asking for the services of the teacher, is a long one.

School broadcasting is now recognized as an important and valuable aid to classroom instruction. Through this medium even small and remote schools may have the privilege of instruction from specialists in the various subjects of the school course. Few of our schools are as yet equipped with receiving sets, but the number is increasing and it is hoped that many schools will, in the near future, install this valuable teaching aid.

We have been pleased to co-operate with the sister Maritimes in the Maritime school broadcasts which are proving very popular in all three provinces. The course ap-signed to us was one in Agricultural Science—Grades VI to X. The scripts are being prepared by Mr. Ralph MacLean, B.A. of Prince Edward College and reports indicate that they are being well received in all three Provinces. Indeed many favourable comments have been received from homes as well as from schools. Thus, Home and School, having this common interest, are being linked more closely.

P.W.C. Enrollment

In common with colleges and universities elsewhere, Prince of Wales College has been obliged to take all its accommodation to provide for those wishing to attend. The present enrollment of 650 is the largest in the history of the institution. Of this number 120 are veterans. The most disappointing class from the standpoint of numbers is the teacher training class. There are only 65. To meet the need, there should be three times as many enrolled.

Adult education, including audio visual education, has been given a new impetus during the year. The Adult Education Council has been planning a number of activities; rural circuit work with films has been extended and during this autumn, through the good offices of the National Art Gallery in Ottawa, a splendid beginning was made in providing to the communities of the Province a series of lectures and information as to the value of the arts and handicrafts in the fields of education and recreation.

The Prince Edward Island Teachers' Federation is to be commended for its efforts to raise in the Province the standard of living in the improvement of school buildings, equipment, salaries, etc. The Department has been pleased to cooperate with them in their series of meetings during the autumn. These are to be continued later in the year.

Vocational Training

This year has seen a definite step forward in the field of vocational education for this Province. Early in 1944, the Province, in common with the other provinces of Canada, arranged an agreement with the Federal Department of Labour to the end that pre-matriculation and vocational education might be provided for all ex-service personnel desiring the same. Immediately the question of accommodation arose. Four rooms were made available in the basement of Prince of Wales College. These were suitable for ordinary classwork but the problem of workshop facilities remained unsolved.

Having in mind the training programme for veterans and also the extensive list of educational services to include the vocational, the Province, with the concurrence and assistance of the Federal Department of Labour, arranged temporary workshop facilities at the Ordnance Grounds, and immediately began the construction of a new brick and steel vocational wing on the Prince of Wales College grounds. With the whole question of facilities for vocational education in mind, it was considered better to erect a permanent structure rather than to place temporary facilities in the college grounds.

This new wing, which is now practically complete, has been financed jointly by the Federal and Provincial Governments under the terms of the Vocational Schools Assistance Agreement of 1945. It is being devoted entirely to training ex-service personnel. Either in the school itself or under its direction there are at present 392 students receiving instruction in 56 different trades and occupations, or preparing for entrance to university.

In August, the writer was asked to address the annual meeting of the Canadian Education Association in Edmonton, on the subject of the post-war secondary school in Canada. Referring to our own plans for regional schools, the writer said in part: "Thus would the Province offer its youth, and all its youth, an uninterrupted and properly integrated programme of education from the beginning grades through to the end of the junior college years, a general level of which, when attained, our Province need never feel ashamed."

The above is an outline of some of the things attempted in 1946 with that objective in view. Looking to the future, two preliminary steps, in the opinion of the writer, are essential: If our objectives are to be reached, there are: First, the conversion of the Province into one unit for purposes of school taxation and finance, and, secondly, the division of this unit into approximately 30 areas for local school administration and, more particularly, for secondary school administration.

THE LIFE STORY

the Princess herself has always loved to have a hand in the job. Often the railway compartment in which she travels down to Norfolk with her sister is given a Christmas appearance with holly and mistletoe. In her childhood, a special treat was to go on a holly-gathering expedition on the Sandringham estate. If she arrived before the start of the Christmas decorating.

She herself was responsible for one revision of Sandringham Yuletide traditions. Previously, the members of the Royal Family postponed their exchange of Christmas presents until the afternoon of Christmas Day. For her sake, and that of her cousin, it was decided that the more general Santa Claus custom be followed, so far as the royal grandchildren were concerned. Princess Elizabeth then had the thrill of waking on Christmas morning and finding her gifts in the household which she had enjoyed so long, or piled at the foot of her bed.

In addition to the big party for the Royal Family and their guests, a similar celebration takes place in the servants' quarters, and it is doubtful whether the Princess in the childhood which she had enjoyed so long, or piled at the foot of her bed.

In addition to the big party for the Royal Family and their guests, a similar celebration takes place in the servants' quarters, and it is doubtful whether the Princess in the childhood which she had enjoyed so long, or piled at the foot of her bed.

The only Christmas which Princess Elizabeth did not spend at Sandringham, up to the outbreak of the second World War, was that of 1929, following the illness of King George the Sixth.

Each birthday too, was an event to be anticipated months ahead. It was one day in the year when she could be certain that no public engagement would prevent her parents from being with her. They were always careful to keep the date, April 21st, free for participation in an intimate birthday party for their daughter.

The Princess was able to invite a few other children to the event, she had a special food cake, and there were surprise presents too, such as the diminutive brown Shetland pony which she received when she was only four years old.

Instruction was unobtrusively in-

"KING OF PAIN"

If the first and second of these objectives are to be reached, we must, of course, have the children regularly in school. Through the efforts of the Attendance Officer and through the influence of the Family Allowance regulations, the percentage of attendance in the schools of this Province for the school year ended June 30th, reached an all-time high—almost 80 per cent. In comparison with all of Canada, this is still too low but the results of the first year's efforts in this direction were particularly gratifying. Unfortunately, the police epidemic interfered seriously with the whole school programme, including attendance, at the beginning of the present term. Attendance at school naturally indicates teachers to instruct. Teacher shortage throughout the
