WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel — And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out about 2 pints of bile juice into your digestive tract every day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the digestive tract. Then gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

It takes those mild, gentle Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these 2 pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Get a package today. Effective in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills, 35¢ at any druggist.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

(By Thornton W. Burgess)

BLACKY WANTS TO GO BACK

The unknown causes greater fear
Than dangers that are known and near.
—Old Mother Nature.

The hunting call of Hooty the Owl unexpectedly heard in the darkness of night has startled and even badly frightened many folks many times bigger than the pet black Rabbit who had just heard it for the first time over in the Green Forest. So it is not to be wondered at that he shivered and shook as only a scared Rabbit can shiver and shake when frightened by something unknown. Even when his cousin, Peter Rabbit, told him what that sound was he was little wiser than before. You see he lived all his life, from the time he was born, in pens where he was safe from Hooty and Reddy Fox and other hungry hunters. He never before had heard or seen any of these hungry folk whom Peter had had to watch for all his life.

"Is—is this Hooty very dangerous?" asked the scared black Rabbit as side by side he and Peter squatted under a pile of brush in the Green Forest.

"Not if you keep out of his sight. All you have to do is to get under cover when you think he is around and stay there until you know he has left," said Peter.

Hooty perched on a low stump close by.

"Do you mean he catches Rabbits?" asked his scared cousin.

"He catches anybody smaller than himself that he can," replied Peter.

"Can he run fast?" asked the black one, and Peter nearly choked trying not to chuckled right out. "He doesn't run; he flies. And he flies without a sound. He is a bird, a big bird, big enough to carry you off if he should catch you. He—" Peter didn't finish, for just then there was frightful hooting from just overhead that startled both Rabbits so that they jumped enough to rustle the brush ever so little.

Instantly a big shadowy form glided down from a tree through the moonlight and hovered over the pile of brush. The great wings made no sound. Hooty perched on a low stump close by. The two Rabbits could see a pair of big, round, fierce, yellow eyes glaring at them. Hooty could see them under the brush but could not reach them. He snapped his bill. It made a most unpleasant sound. Yes, sir, it was most unpleasant, especially to those two Rabbits. Blacky had never heard a more unpleasant sound.

"I see you, Peter Rabbit," hissed Hooty. "I can't get you this time, but one of these nights I will. Just you wait." He spread his wings and seemed to melt the Black Shadows now all through the Green Forest.

Peter chuckled. "He has said that more times than I can remember, but here I am," said he.

"Do—do—do you think he is still near?" whispered his cousin. His teeth chattered as teeth will when one is greatly frightened.

"I doubt it, but we will stay right here until we know he isn't," replied Peter. His teeth didn't chatter. He didn't seem at all frightened.

"How can we know?" asked the black one. He shivered. It wasn't because he was cold.

"He'll hoot again. Then we'll know if he is near or far enough away. He knows I won't leave here until I know it is safe to do so, so staying around here will be a waste of time. He's just a nuisance; that's all. Are you hungry? I am. But we won't start looking for something to eat until we know it is safe to do so," said Peter.

"Do we have to look for food? I've never had to do that in all my life. There has always been plenty for me to eat whenever I have been hungry. So I never have had to look for food. That must be most inconvenient and dangerous. Not that it matters now. I'm not the least bit hungry. All I want is to go back," said Cousin Blacky.

"Back where?" asked Peter wonderingly. He couldn't imagine any wanting to go back to a prison pen. But Peter hadn't been made helpless by to much welfare.

Contract Bridge

By Josephine Culbertson

BIDDING OVER A DOUBLE

When an opponent doubles your partner's opening bid, your own bidding tatics are effected, because you now have certain choices which would not otherwise have been logical. You can pass to await developments; you can redouble; or you can raise or bid your own suit, but not exactly as you would have in the absence of a double.

Generally speaking, if you were prepared to give a single raise for partner's suit you should still make a shutout raise all the way to game, it is imperative than ever to follow this course, to keep the other opponent quiet. One thing is sure, however—there is no conceivable logic in distorting one's own bid because of the double as North did in today's deal!

South dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

	♠ A 10 7 3 ♥ A 5 4 2 ♦ 10 3 ♣ 9 8 2
♠ K Q 8 6 ♥ 10 ♦ K 9 8 5 ♣ K 10 7 3	N W E S	♠ J 9 ♥ 8 7 6 3 ♦ Q J 6 4 ♣ Q J 5
	♠ 5 4 2 ♥ K Q J 9 ♦ A 7 2 ♣ A 6 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	Dble.	4 ♥ (!)	Dble.
Pass	Pass	Pass

There was nothing to the play. South lost two spades tricks, two clubs and one diamond, and so went down 500 points. This was all the more expensive inasmuch as East-West could not have made anything but a part-score contract!

It was North's ill-considered leap to game, of course, that was entirely to blame for this result. Persumably, North felt that because he was bidding over a takeout double, he did not need nearly as much as the same bid would require if West had passed. If this was North's view, however, it was a sadly fallacious one! North had too much, in his two aces, to fear that the enemy would "go places"; and he had too little, in the sense of winners, to commit his partner to a four-heart contract! Since North lacked the strength for a a redouble (being unprepared to double the opponents at any low contract) he should have passed on the first round and later raised the hearts if able to do so at the two-or three-level but no higher!
